ZIMBABNE－${ }^{\text {wegeneral }}$ 1988

JANGARY  MARCH

suoţłetəa גnoqet uo səbed quәzuos पदт̣ ：sโeotpotiod
（d̦̣чsiəpeət ssəusṭsng ¥o tooups

 ＇suә7sKs suoṭ

suotizetor moqet ut әunea6oxd pəsurespH

：səunrexboxd ఫuวxxnว
－sesodind

$6 \varepsilon \varepsilon$ •7xG TLLL 8て（てTø） ：चиоपव
2sKoog • $\mathrm{C}^{\circ} \mathrm{f}$
：sə！$\overline{\text { sṭnbự }}$

TLLT 87 （てTø）

> : Ји०्यव

HARARE - Thie President of Zimbabwe, Mr Robert Mugabe, was yesterday inaugurated as Zimbabwe's first exccutive president and declared that Zimbabwe would refuse to "put to auction our national sovereignty for a bag of foreign currency."

President Mugabe, 63, said his inauguration had been made more historic by the unity accord signed between his Zanu-PF party and the Zapu-PF party of Dr Joshua Nkomo on December 22 .

He also announced the appointments of Mr Simon Muzenda, as Vice-President of Zimbabwe and Dr Joshua Nkomo, as one of the vice-presidents of the ruling Zanu-PF party.
Dr Nkomo is now second secretary and vicepresident of Zanu-PF as well as being one of Mr Mugabe's top lieutenants.

Mr Mugabe, first secretary and president of the party appealed for unity in national reconciliation and said: "I wish to appeal to all Zimbabweans, whatever their tribe, race, colour, region or religion, to stand behind this unity accord and promote it in word and deed."

Stating that "executive power can never rightly be a one man show," President Mugabe assured the nation that he will continue to be guided by the principles of the party and regard the interests of the nation as paramount.
"Ours is and must always remain a peopleoriented revolutionary path guided by socialist principles," he said.
He appealed to Zim babweans for their support if he was to succeed in "leading you along our defined socialist path towards common and national development goals."
Mr Mugabe paid tribute to the outgoing President, Mr Canaan Banana, a 51-year old Methodist cleric, for the role he played as head of state and for helping to unite the two parties.
Describing Mr Banana as "small in body, yet great in mind, soul and
"r.irit". President Mugabe said of him: "His last great act was to ensure the unity of ZanuPF and Zapu-PF.
"On behalf of the party, the government and the whole nation, I say to you well done You have served the nation truly, honestly, loyally and faithfully."

In his farewell address Mr Banana said: "Now has come the time for me to say farewell," and vowed that Zimbabwe would never compromise its independence, adding the country would thwart any aggression from its enemies.
"Let our neighbours, friendly and hostile, and let other nations, friendly and hostile, remember that this nation small as it is, will never put its independence in pawn for filthy lucre nor will it ever tolerate aggression in any form, size or manner," he said.

Commenting on the economic problems facing the country, Mr Mugabe said: "Our sovereignty has never been and can never in future be for sale. It just is not a negotiable commodity. We cannot export it."

During his address Mr Mugabe hinted that his government might revise its five-year develop. ment plan because of adverse economic conditions.
In a major policy statement he said: "...the difficult economic conditions we have been experiencing might cause a revision of the plan targets."

Determined efforts were being made to transform control and expand the economy, to effect land reforms in order to raise the standard of living particularly among peasants and to create more employment.
"All in all, our hope was that we would finance 60 per cent of our investment programme by using our own domestic resources and 40 per cent by way of foreign resources.
"This hope has not yet been sustained as foreign capital inflows have not been readily forthcoming," said Mr Mugabe, adding that Zimbabwe had been growing into a net capital exporter through the payment of external debt service repayments, dividends and profits.
"Hard work is what I call upon our entire nation to offer," he said.
The ceremony was witnessed by several African leaders, includ ing Dr Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and Mr Yoweri Museveni of Uganda.
President Kaunda cautioned Zimbabweans against falling prey to enemies bent on breaking peace and unity the nation needs to develop.
Dr Kaunda also called on Zimbabweans to watch against selfish leaders who may tear the country apart for their own personal ambitions.
"Zimbabweans should work for vitality and peace instead of wrecking the joyous and historic union and at seven years old, Zimbabwe could not afford dabbling in the negative and destructive politics of confrontation and divisive tendencies.'

The Zambian leader also implored the "oppressed people in South Africa" to end the ongoing black-on-black violence which he said was working in the interests of the racist regime. - Sapa

ROBERT Mugabe, elected on Wednes-fit: day as Zimbabwe's first Executive President, has at last achieved his longtime goal of a one-party state. $\therefore$ But despite the 63 -year-old former guerilla leader's success in reshaping his country's,., political $\boxed{Z}$ landscape, he remains an enigma to many of his countrymen.
${ }^{2}$. After seven years as Prime Minister under the British-syyic constitution with which Zimbabwe was born in 1980, he will now combine his former powers' with the ceremonial role of the State President.
The constitutional change will give Mugabe a position more in line with those of other African leaders. But despite his political dominance, he has álways been careful to avoid any hint of a personality cult.
An austere intellectual with a long string of degrees, most of them earned in prison, Mugabe is often described as a shy, private man who does not easily relax with strangers.

- His long, bookish sentences are delivered with a mixture of icy calm and strong emotion, and his political career has combined a capacity for reconciliation with a stubborn refusal to compromise.
Born the son of a rural carpenter who was given his first education by Jesuits, he spent his formative years studying in South Africa and teaching in newly independent Ghana, where he met his wife, Sally, in the late 1950s.: ;ir He entered politics in the early 1960 s as a junior aide to Joshua Nkomo, the burly father-figure of African nationalism, but broke with him in 1963 and became secretarygeneral of the newly formed Zanu the following year.

Thus began a 25 -year struggle between the two

what he

 alwayswanted

rivals whose partnership in the guerilla war against the rebel white government of lan Smith came to an end with Mugabe's crushing clection victory in 1980.
After being out manoeuvred. and outfought by his one-time pupil, Nkomo agreed to unite his Zapu party with Mugabe's dominant Zanu-PF movement. The deal was clinched just before Christmas this year after two years of on-off talks.

Sanctions

Mugabe's pre-independence reputation as a Marxist firebrand has been tempered by his policy of reconciliation with Zimbabwe's white community and his generally cautious management of the :economy.

When in July 1987 he tricd to impose economic sanctions against South Africa, he was outvoted in Cabinet and backed down. But despite his country's economic dependence on South Africa, he has always refused to agree to Pretoria's frequent requests for ministeriallevel meetings betweer the two governments.

In other foreign issues he can be intransigent When Zimbabwe's Foreign Minister made a speech attacking US foreign policy at a US embassy reception and Washington demanded an apology, Mugabe refused. As a result, US aid was cut off.
His professed Marx-ism-Leninism has not led to any privileged position for other communist countries in Zimbabwe, whose political culture is still largely shaped by three generations of British colonial rule.
But the search. for political stability and internal peace has been dogged by the ZanuZapu split, increasingly a tribal division between the majority Shona people and the Ndebele minority.

Political analysts say ordinary Zimbabweans have mostly welcomed the party merger as a step to eniding the ethnic - conflict and aclivity of "dissidents" or armed rebels in Matabeleland. \%* Mugabe's executive presidency is likely to be judged by how far he

The Media Council

THE South Arrican Media Council is an independent body established to deal with various matters affecting media directly. Complaints must relate to published editorial matter and should be lodged wilhin 10 days of pulli

The powerful new execulive presidency was created by a constitution al reform abolishing the post of Prime Minister and giving full executive powers to the head of state

It took Mutasa less than two minutes to proclaim the election of Mugabẽ, ẅlo sát in his usual front bench seat, his hands clasped before him.
"Only one nomination paper was duly completed." Mutasa said, explaining that there would be no need for a vote. 'I accordingly declare the honourable comrade Robert Gábriel Mugabe duly elected."
Mugabe's election was greeted with massive applause from the members of the two houses, including several. whites nominated by the ruling party Zanu-PF
Mugabe's old political rival Joshua Nkomo, who agreed to merge his PF Zapu party with Zanu-PF last week, also applauded from a special reserved back bench seat.

CPA Tins 411188 Mugabe cabinet is biggest yet

Own Correspondent

HARARE: -Zimbabwe has entered 1988 with a new governmental system and 52 -member administratimon estimated to be one of the largest in the developing world
President Robert Mugabe announced his new administration over the weekend shortly after being inaugurated as the country's first executive president.

The 27 -member cabinet is $30 \%$ larger than the previous team, with the number of deputy ministers being almost doubled to 15 :
Mr Mugabe clearly cemented last month's unity pact with the former Opposition Zapu leader. Mr

Mr'Joshua Nkomo

Joshua . Nkomo by making him one of three "senior" ministeas in the new cabinet.
Mr Nkomo was one of three Zimbabwe Afrcan Peoples Union leaders to be brought into the cabinet.
Mr Nkomo will in effect have umbrella control over several ministries concerned with development and in appointing him to this position Mr Mugabe has been seen to go as far as possible in accommodating his former rival.

Another senior cabinet minister, Mr Maurice Nyagumbo, has' been charged with organizing the merge er between' the ruling party and Zapu and also paving the way towards official and legal one parity status.

Mr Mugabe estimates that the country willofficoaly be a one-party state within three years
anton

Zimbabwe unions attack continuing wage freeze

HARARE - Labour unions have expressed surprise at the indefinite extension of Zimbabwe's wage and salary freeze, saying it has a negative impact on the cost of living for the lower paid workers'; the national new agency Ziana reports.
The freeze was imposed initially for a six-month period to December 31 às a stoṕgap measure following the poor economic performance caused by the budget deficit, drought, lack of investment, shortage of foreign exchange and the high rate of inflation.
But, according to an amendment published with last week's government gazette the freeze would last until "such date as the Minister (of Labour) may specify by notice in the gazette".
"This" is completely unacceptable. We are going to pressure the Zimbabwe Congress of Trade Unions to pursue this matter strongly because we were totally unaware of this development," said Mr Farai Makanda, the general secretary of the 11000 member. Transport and General Workers Union.
Mr Makanda said the government had reneged on its promise to review wages if the country received rains.
"Undoubtedly, the drought had played a part in the imposition of the freeze and we were told that the situàtion would be reviewed when the country receives sufficient rains. Now something seems to have gone astray," he.said: - Sapa

MR ROBERT MUGABE: he's led his country well down the road to becoming a one-party state.

The President and the three Senior Ministers will make up a kind of inner Cabinet, which will hold its own meetings ahead of Cabinet meetings.

The political course, then, has been charted. Restoration of growth in the economy will depend largely on the rains and a good agricultural season.

Which leaves security. Here the hope is that Matabeleland will quieten down and enable the security forces to concentrate on protecting the eastern front from MNR infiltration, while the army continues to fight against the rebels inside Mozambique. - Saturday Star

Help SA to be like Zimbabwe - Moscow

MOSCOW - The Communist Party daily Pravda yes-ri terday urged Britain to use its influence for change in: South Africa in the same way it had helped Zim-: babwe to become an independent state.
"If flexibility and readiness for compromise, which made British politicians famous, are attributable to them to this day, is it not time to consider that the principle of national reconciliation which led to success in Zimbabwe ... could remove the seat of tension in South Africa as weil?" the paper asked.
Zimbabwe had emerged as an independent state after parties to a seven-year civil war in the former British colony of Rhodesia attended the 1979 Lancaster House: conference in London, it said.
"If London made use once again of the mediatory, levers in its possession, this could raise its prestige not only on the black continent but all over the world," wrote commentator Vsevolod Ovchinnikov, a formet London correspondent and author of a popular book on the British way of life.
Commenting on British Prime Minister Mrs Margaret Thatcher's visit to Kenya and Nigeria, Pravda said her attempts to mollify black African states, angered byt. Britain's opposition to sanctions against Pretoria, had failed.

Instead, she had created a storm by describing the banned African National Congress movement as a "tera rorist organisation", it said.

The Soviet media has recently started portraying Mis Thatcher in a more positive light, crediting her with helping to build bridges between Moscow and Washing.

|  |  |
| :---: | :---: |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
| ganisations to keep Terencein á foster home. |  |
| ${ }^{4}$ | and would quil |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
| turneiditrozinmbabve. |  |
| Sole |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |

Argus Africa News Service

BULAWAYO. - A car bomb has blown up outside a house in a suburb here, injuring three people believed to be members of the African National Congress.
The blast, the first of its kind in Bulawayo, occurred about 9 pm yesterday in Trenance on the northern outskirts of Zimbabwe's second largest city.

A witness said two cars were driven into the grounds of the house. One was left near the house and the occupants sped away in the second.
Guards on duty at the house fired shots at the speeding car. Shortly afterwards the parked car exploded, demolishing part of the house.

Declined

One of the three people taken to Mpilo Hospital is said to be in a critical condition. Police, army and other security units cordoned off the area.
In Harare this morning an official at the ANC office said the was not able to confirm that the people injured in the Bulawayo bomb blast were ANC members.

He said: "We are still trying to establish what happened:" He declined to say whether there was an ANC house in the suburb where the blast occurred.
There was no immediate comment from the ANC's headquarters in Lusaka.
Police in Bulawayo kept reporters away from the scene of the blast this morning but said a statement would be issued later.

Middle-class

Police cordoned off the smalliolding shortly after the blast A police spokesman said reporters and photographers would be given access to the scene later today when initial investigations had been completed.
Trenance is a middle-class black population

In Harare last October a car bomb outside a suburban cinema injured 17 people, three of them seriously.
The bomb, blamed on South African agents, was believed to have been aimed at an antiapartheid activist, Mr Seremy Brickhill, one of the injured.
Last May there was ba predawn rocket attack on an ANC office in Harare $A$ y ear before that South African commandos raided ANC premises in the Zimbabwean capital, blowing up buildings.

HARARE - Zimbabwean police have yet to identi fy the mutilated bodies of two men, believed to be supporters of the African National Congress, who were killed by a massive car bomb explosion on Monday night
The government has blamed South African agents.
In Harare, Government Information Director Mr Ezekiel Makunike said: "It was obviously South African agents. It follows the pattern as happened in Harare. The targets are consistent. It can't be anyone else. There is no other way of looking at it:"
About 9 pm on Monday the occupants of a known ANC house in Bulawayo's northern Trenance suburb had just finished supper when two cars drove into the grounds. An explosion followed soon afterwards.
Yesterday, searchers reported finding bundles of ANC revolutionary literature in the ruined building.
An unknown number of occupants of the house are beingtreated under guard in Bulawayo hospitals. -Own Correpondent and Sapa-AP

 JOHANNESBURG.
There is speculation in Farare that South African agents planted the bomb in Bulawayo that killed two people and injured three others.
The condition of one of the three, who are all believed to be members of the African National Congress, was described as critical this morning.
The Identities of the two dead people were still unknown and reports in Harare indicaned one of the dead may have been an occupant of the car carrying the huge bomb.
Exiles and Zimbabwe government officials appeared convinced the bombing was the work of South African intelligene agents.

A convicted South African spy, Paisen Pesanal Ndlovu, testified at his trial in Bulamayo last year that he was shown a sketch of the house that was bombed by his South African controllers in 1986.

He said he was asked to make a sketch of the gates of the house.

The explosion occurred at 9 pm on Monday at the house in Trenance, Bulawayo. - Sapa:
 damaged by a car-bonk. Two people were killed.

Robert Mugabe is begin- tees without bias); and  couple of hours for her

ning to accumulate as many pangolins as Ronald Reagan has baseball caps.

The pangolins, rare, scaly ant-eaters, are continually being presented u mr Mugabe as a token of good fortune and as a traditional sign of fealty to the chief.
In the photographs which accompany the ritual, the creatures usually curl up, and it looks as though Mr Mugabe is inspecting the largest lettuce at a rural show. It has become something of a national joke.
The pangolin count should go even higher now that Prime Minister Mugabe has become President Mugabe.

He is now an even bigger chief, replacing the purely ceremonial has inadvertently who tributed so much to the tributed so much to the gaiety of nations.
Britain's statesman, the late Lord Soames, once had a discreet word in Mr Mugabe's ear about the consequences of founding a republic with a President named Banana, but the point was not taken
The constitutional changes are supposed to help bring about "unity" or, more accurately, uni formity.
Mr Mugabe is a great admirer of regimented communist states such as North Korea. But quite apart from the tribal divisions which have made the one-party state so difficult to engineer, the rapid deterioration in security over the last sidmonths (culminating inthe massacre of 16 whites at Esigodini in November) means that 1988 will be a testing year for Zimbabwe.
The remaining 120000 whites observe these developments with a certain wry detachment. It is only white liberals who expected a black Utopia after indepen dence who are visibly dispirited, even bitter. The Right-wing cynics knew how it would turn out. When the 30 white seats in Zimbabwe's parliament were abolished, their replacements, effectively Mr Mugabe's appointees, included some of the most uncompromising members of the old Rhodesia Front

The saintly Judith Iodd (daughter of the former Prime Minister, Garfield Todd) who Garfleld Todd who fought UDI and the Rhodesia Front for 20 years, came nowhere in the ballot.
The value of these white political appoinwes to Mr Mugabe is ant they are completely ioyal (they have nowhere else to go); they are neutral (the white tribe no longer counts, and therefore can be trusted to chair committees without bias); and they are noticeably efficient.
Social mixing across the colour line still tends to be awkward and ostentatious. At an impromptu Christmas party I watched a loud and leathery farmer tak ing bets from bemused blacks on whether he could extract a cork from the bottom of an empty wine bottle using only a napkin. The blacks seemed bemused by the futility of the by butint of the bellow of triumph inal up smilingly up smilingly.
Only occasionally do you glimpse the tension beneath the surface. On my third visit to the immigration department to acquire some pointless piece of paper I gave up waiting after 40 minutes waiting after 40 minutes. building I to leave the a "security" pass I had signed on the way in had to be countersigned by the person I had seen. Since I had seen no one I was trapped.
A young white woman in the same position tried to bluff her way past, shouting: "Why are you doing this ? It's stupid."
Three glowering security guards advanced on her, and she retreated to the lift in tears.
I signed her paper she signed mine.

But it is the collapse in rural security inevi tably compared with the war which preceded independence, which in occupies many whites Now as thany whites Now, as then, guerrilla activity and plain bandiThy go hand in glove. however between south however, between south where Matabeleland, where disaffected remnants of Zipra and army deserters roam the bush, and the eastern border with Mozambique, where guerrilla ac tivities of the Mozambique National Resistance are now a daily, though largely unreported event along the entire 800 mile length of the border.

To reach the border I drove down the lovely Honde Valley, through villages where the main local pastime seems to be waving and grinning at visitors. This is actually a cunning African way of getting you to stop, so that the chil dren can ask for money and the adults for a lift The mountains, rising above the rich, red plain, have been eroded into weird and fantastic shapes. It is a setting for mystery and legend.

The road turns to dirt and eventually runs out in the Aberfoyle Tea Estate, where a small country club has a mir aculously well-stocked bar. In places like this you could swear that nothing had changed since UDI.

While waiting a But parliament's most husband to finish a game of snooker, an drank sherry and water drank sherry and water ness and recalled boisterous times during the terous times during the war, when troops released "accidental discharges" through the ceiling. It used to be a good vantage point to see the tracers arcing through the night, but we came under attack only from a squadron of large flying ants, drawn by the light. This problem was solved by a power failure.

At the beginning of last month the MNR hit their first white farm on the border (their usual targets are black villages in the communal lands). The army can be seen everywhere, but the tea estate also employs a militia of 30 men , half of them armed, to provide extra security for key installations such as the local super such as

The provisions there would keep the MNR going for weeks. During the war, Robert Mugabe's Zanla guerrillas used the area for transit, passing through under cover of darkness to at tack deeper targets. The MNR does much the same.
If there is murderous skirmishing on the border, there is also political in-fighting in Ha rare, even, in a muted way, over the constitutional reforms
These give the executive presidency fairly sweeping powers If Parliament passes a vote of no confidence in the President, one op tion he has is to dissolve Parliament. An article in the magazine Moto expresses a common fear: "The future president of Zimbabwe, long after Premier Mugabe has joined the ranks of the ancestors, may be a man falling far short of his qualities - another Amin - and the people will be lumbered for al most eternity unless the soldiers come to their rescue."
The institutions bequeathed by the British have, of course, been "adapted" - colonised, really, like a house abandoned to the flora and fauna of the African bush. There are plans for a new parliament building, and mace and other paraphernalia will eventually give way to something more " Zim babwean", probably designed by the North Koreans.

Since independence, parliament has been hampered by the absence of a proper consultative process. There are no White or Green papers: important legis papen sometimes turns up in MPs' boxes on the

Peter Taylor: Harare

notable failing has been having made their own in reassuring minority Parliament has, however, acted as a useful safety valve on sensitive issues like unemployment and corruption. Grumbles in the House of Assembly have sometimes served to warn the party fat cats that the "povo" are Zimbabwe's road ne work is still incompa rably better than most in black Africa, but the ancient smoke-belching buses are continually breaking down for lack of spares. Sitting by the roadside in burning heat or cascading rain you tend to look on the party Mercedes in a dif party

There is no culture of millions, the senior comrades will try to prevent the "trickle down" effect of corruption. This would be extremely hypocritical, but good for Zimbabwe.

The British legacy has: also been colonised by a new form of tribalism. Far from being redundant in a modern Marxist nearly-one-party. state, the tribal system is increasingly used by: politicians to cultivate a secure power base. The result is a hybrid which partly resembles medieval Europe, where thi king rules with the consent of powerful regional barons, and par. tly the American Congress, where the ie of a representative success is the amount c

EDGAR TEKERE . . . ousted from government; but still one of the most influential men in Manicaland.
corruption
babwe, as there is in Ni geria. you don't always have to grease palms to get things done. But parliamentary inquiries have still revealed an alarming amount of fiddling. It is rare to turn a tone and find nothing beneath it.
Mugabe himself is the only one who appears to have stuck to the "leadership code" which Zanu-PF itself is basically an amalgam of three tribal factions: the Zezuru (Mugabe's tribe), the Manica, and the more populous Karanga. A. coalition of Zezurus and Manicas currently controls the party and government machinery, but the arrival of Ndebeles in the Central Committee, Politburo and Cabinet could upset the balance. There are some ethnic links between Karangas and Ndebeles, and dark mutterings can be heard about an alliance of the two.

But the face-saving formula of "unity" is unlikely to make much difference to the "dissi dents" problem. These wandering gangs seize on festering grievances like squatting and land redistribution. Since independence the government has resettled only 40000 families, many on cooperative farms which have proved a disaster The soaring birth rate has raced way ahead of the government's plans and the government itself has forcibly removed thousands of squatters from the Bulawayo area.
The ill-fated religious community at Esigodini was, of course, unarmed - a rare event in Matabeleland today. Most farmers and their wives are armed with German G3 automatic rifles and most ranches have three or four militiamen, some of whom accompany the farmer at all times.

The farmers themselves, linked by the old "Agric-alert" radio network from the war years, have formed quick reac tion "sticks" to go in hot pursuit of dissidents. Army reaction times to an attack are much slower than during the war, and they usually only follow a trail for a few hours before giving up. The farmers, employing their own trackers, will go for days. Their success rate appears to be high, and, not surprisingly, there is some sensitivity about crack white "sticks" shooting blacks, even dissidents

There is no doubt that the government has neglected Matabeleland. In a symbolic way, you could see this at the memorial service in Bu lawayo for the Esigodini victims. Not a single government minister bothered to attend. A disturbing report has also surfaced that ZanuPF youth brigarle members went on the rampage near Bulawayo in mid-November, beating people up for not attending a meeting addressed by Mr Richard Hove, the Minister of Mines. The report said that the Minister him self used a stick to thrash a number of people, including a deputy headmaster.
It is certainly a rum way to bring about "unity".
In Zimbabwe, there is a great gulf between the stratospheric issues of principle and the bread and butter issues. At the gleaming new conference centre there are endless international gatherings to denounce apartheid or stimulate Third World solidarity.

Following the ReaganGorbachev agreement, the government controlled Herald carried a front page banner headline: "PM Hails Arms Pact on Behalf of NAM".

Mr Mugabe is the current chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement, and Zimbabwe's status in the world is believed to derive from such things.

For ordinary people the issues are not apartheid or international relations, but prices, wages and unemployment. Even the Intercession Book at the Anglican Cathedral in Harare reflects a certain materialism. During the war it was filled with heartbreaking pleas for peace, but now one reads: "I wish for a prayer to help me pass my diploma in marketing"; "Thank you for all the assistance in my High Court case": "God help me to get back my hi-fi".

In the rural areas there are some considerable achievments to the government's credit: infant mortality has halved since independence, but there is a huge problem of unem-pidyment for schoolleavers. Some are packed off to co operatives. A boy with three good O-level science passes complains: "I cannot just offer myself to these self-help jobs which will end up damaging my brain and lowering my degree of thinking. I cannot use my knowledge of science and mathematics simply for hard labour'.

The teacher I spoke to on the Mozambique border whose school motto was Knowledge is Power, shook his head sadly and shrugged. "Many go to the city to become loafers or pickpockets. It discourages those who are still at school. Their hopes are killed".
Harare's pickpockets have become so skilled that they recently removed a man's shoes, while he was dozing in a beer garden. Woken by the rain, he hung his socks out to dry: they were stolen too.
Zimbabwe is still in a chapter of transition, still trying to find its own way in a world where the dominant ideas are European in origin. Of nothing is this more true than women's liberation, a distinctly un-African notion. The practice of "lobola", the price paid for a bride, and basically a compensation to the father for the inconvenience of having a daughter, is still widespread. In the rural areas it is paid in livestock; in the towns in cash or other goods. I know of one family row which has erupted because a Ford Anglia, given in part exchange for the bride, broke down shortly after the marriage.

Recently a law was passed obliging fathers to maintain their children. Zimbabwean women have an average of six children, usually by several fathers. The Minister for Women's Affairs, former guerrilla Mrs Joyce Teurai Ropa Majuru (the two middle names mean Spilled Blood) subsequently condemned women who "made a business" out of claiming the maintenance money. This provoked a furious row with the feminist Women's Action Group, whose leadership is whitedominated.
On top of everything else, a feminist lobby!

SOWETAN Africa News Service

BULAWAYO - Two people were feared dead after a car bomb devastated a house used by the African National Congress in Bulawayo on Monday night, local radio and press reported yesterday.
The government has blamed South African agents.
In Harare, government information director Mr Ezekicl Makunike said: "It was obviously South African agents. It follows the pattern as happened in Harare. The targets are consistent. It can't be anyone else. There is no other way of looking at it."

State-owned Zimbabwe radio said two unidentified residents were killed when the bomb, exploded in a house occupied by South Africans on Monday night.

PRESIDENT Mugabe of Zimbabwe.

The Chronicle newspaper published here by the state-controlled Mass Media Trust, earlier reported three people, believed members of the guerrilla-backed ANC, were injured in the 9 pm blast. It did not identify the victims, but said one person was in a critical condition.
The blast, the first of its kind in Bulawayo, occurred in the Trenance suburb on the northern outskirts of Zimbabwe's second largest city.

Explosion

A witness said two cars drove into the grounds of the house on Monday night. One was left near the house and the occupants sped away in the second.

Guards on duty at the house fired shots at it.
Shortly afterwards the parked car exploded, demolishing part of the house.

Police, army and other security units cordoned off the area.

In Harare last October a car bomb outside a suburban cinema injured 17 people, three of them seriously. The bomb, blamed on South African agents, was believed to have been aimed at an anti-apartheid activist, Mr Jeremy Brickhill, one of the injured.
In May last year there was a pre-dawn rocket attack on an ANC office in Harare.
A year before that South African commandos raided ANC premises in the Zimbabwean capital, blowing up buildings.

ANC:officials in both Harare;and Lusaka could not immediately be reached for comment.

©HARARE - while the Zimbabwean : Government and gove'inments all over the worla refuse to recognise the black states" of ${ }^{\text {' }}$ Transkei, Bophutatswanaki: Ciskei and Venda states) as independent; some Zimbabwean companies are according them this recoghition.
, Some or all of these nations: can phe found listed as "countries" on educational material intended for Zimbabwean children, in : a diary called the Zimbabwe Diary, in insurance policies and in the literature of a local motoring organisation.
Even the Zimbabwe Posts and Telecommunications Corporation, a government parastatal, lists some TBVC states among the countries of the world in a number of its documents, including those listing telegraphic charges and telex country codes

A school calendar. rmap ' printed In:' Zim$\cdots$ babwe not only treated them on a par with genuinely independent countries but displayed flags of 30 "nations", leaving out finozambique, Angola I anduranzania.
Bit, the calender in. cluded six homeland flase
Wwas said the calendat had already been aforibited to schools. spanas

Plans Lor African defence force

INKOMO BARRACKS（Zimbabwe）the establish－ renewed its suppor yefence Force，when the new ment of an African Deeen Nkala proposed the de defence minister Mr Enos Nkara pilitary syllabus． velopment of a common African of 40 Tanzani－ Reviewing a passing－out parado have just com ans and eight zimbabweans wourse at this mili－ pleted a four－month paratroop course ar course was tary establishment，Mr．Nkala sards the attainment Zimbabwe＇s contributiontion in defence of inter－African co－ope that an African continental
We are all aware thablished for various force has not yet been establs structures have reasons，although on been defined，＂he said the establishment of a com
One of the pillars is the esto a mon African military syllabus to create continent mindamong the de military assistance that Zim
Mr Nkala said the military assistania Militâry babwe had received from the TanzaTT）and the
－
wit
Advisory and Training Team（TMATT），and the paratroopers course for the Tanzanians，weikeved ful demonstrations of defence co－operation． through inter－African derence o－es train under a
＂When＂African defence for means also that we common African syllabus sy side in anti－imperial－ shall be able to fight side by side in our train－ ist battles＇because of the commonality or ing skills and experiences，＂he said：－Sapa

Eの，＊

arecmeque motysha：9

tonatogictaxtiots

surysad

wIHRTm
15040\％

Bomb victims were black, sasy

From MICHAEL HARTNACK

BULAWAYO. - The two victims of Monday's car bomb at an African National Congress house in Trenance suburb here were both black, official sources confirmed yesterday
Three other people were injured, one of whom is still in a critical condition at Mpilo hospital, where a police guard has been mounted at his bedside.
One of the theories put forward is that the bombers hijacked a car-and possibly a driver - known to the Zimbabwean police guards on duty at the rambling property. The explosivepacked vehicle, a Renault Five with Zimbabwean number plates, was therefore able to drive up the long approach to the colonial-style house, stopping outside the kitchen and bathroom area
One of the two occupants then leapt out and fled in a second vehicle, which was following. The other occupant of the first car was killed when the bomb detonated seconds later.
Human remains and debris were strewn over a wide area. The victims have not been named.
Sources: say the wife of the ANC secretary-general, Mr Alfred Nzou was due to have stayed.in the house last weekend, and the belief that high ranking members of the ANC's "Umkhonto we Sizwe" military wing were in attendance could have been the reason for the attack.
No official comment has yet been forthcoming from the Zimbabwean government, but the two national newspapers have unhesitatingly blamed South Africa. The Bulawayo Chronicle recalled that plans of the

Car bomb not SA's, says Pretoria  Defence Correspondent

THIS WEEK'S bomb explosion in Bulawayo, which killed two African National Congress members, was set off not by South African agents but by a power-seeking faction of "the ANC South African Communist Party alliance", a spokesman for the Ministry of Defence said from Pretoria yester day.
In a statement, the spokesman said: "It has been known for some time that undercurrents exist in the leader group of the ANC-South African Communist Party alliance."
The spokesman dismissed as "a typical example of the ongoing propaganda war" allegations that South Africans had been responsible, saying that the explosion resuilted from an internal struggle in which younger ANC and SACP members were trying to take control.

Trenance house were among the items of intelligence-supplied by a Zimbabwean, Paisen Ndlovu, who was last year jailed for an effective 14 years for spying for South African Defence Force intelligence officers at Messina.

In an editorial, the Chronicle said the attack "brings home to Bulwayo for the first time the reality of the menace vand the potential of the threats from the racist Pretoria regime".
 canty to solving the country's rapidly warsboth to unemployment crisis, it is essential both to increase foreign currency allocations and raise investment levels substance and raise investment levels substantially, the survey concludes.

Economic ministries speak gloomily of

found $27 \%$ of the 122 respondents to be more andimistic compared with $12 \%$ a year ago and $16 \%$ in mid-1987In June more than $40 \%$ of the sample was predicting reduced output and sales but by Economists this ratio had fallen to only $23 \%$. mont. The are perplexed by this improveexpectation that after drought, a strong rebound is likely in severe tyre. But although good rains have fallen since the beginning of December, the start to the season has been a poor one.

held up far better they consumer spending has past two months a marked slowed, but in the sumption has become apparent. One economist says Zimbabwean industrialists are sheeplike in their opinion-forming, rushing from extreme pessimism in mid-1987 to unjustified optimism six months later.
The university survey disputes the Confederation of Zimbabwe Industries' optimisreached a turning point industrial sector has 1987 more than g point, pointing out that in output was being adversely affected by the foreign currency crisis.
The UZ survey warns that the adverse long-run effects of a sustained policy of mmevident. It says are becoming increasingly operating at $65 \%$ of capacity increasingly obsolete capital equipment. also warns that industrial growth will. It tinue to be constrained by inadequate import capacity and depressed levels of industry investment.
If industrial growth is to match the rate of population expansion and contribute signifimounting concern among top officials, who feel that a growing number of important economic decisions are being made by the politicians, often flying in the face of expert advice. One such decision is to go ahead with the expansion of the Kariba South electricity power project, despite advice from internetional consultants to the contrary.

The project will cost more than US $$ 200 \mathrm{~m}$ and with international donors like the World Bank refusing to support it, it will have to be funded on a very costly turnkey basis. A second major decision concerns the plan to build a railway to serve Harare's satellite city of Chitungwiza at a cost of more than US $$ 300 \mathrm{~m}$ and a third the planned rehabilitation of the Zisco steel complex which will cost upwards of US $$ 200 \mathrm{~m}$
There is also controversy within governmend on the future of the wage freeze due to end in December. There is speculation that former Prime Minister Robert Mugabe will celebrate his elevation to the executive presidency by announcing a general wage rise Minister Dow a huge hole in Finance Minister Bernard Chidzero's 1987/1988 budget. $\alpha$

C

$\qquad$ ц! $\qquad$

tackle the real causes of the present economic problems that lie in the se-However, these do not effectively foreign exchange cutbacks, and a wage

 पךмоля

 '0 0 0 0 0 0 0
0 0 vere and the economy would probably vave to be placed on an emergency restrictions with SA, the economic con.

 fuәudojəАəp səomosax ueumq ui, osd piños yueq әपद pịs $\ddagger$ iod

 yurg pıo car bomb which exploded at an ANC house in Zim－ babwe southern city of Bulawayo，the ANC saig here yesterday
AnyANC statement confirmed occupantso the house on the northern outskirts of Bulawayo were members of the ANC． The statement said shots fired by ANC． from the suburban bungalow detonated the carbomb， killing two saboteurs on Monday night： The ANC said two cars approached the heure fore the blast．
＂Our people became uneasy when the two cars stopped and one person dashed from the first carsto the second car＂an ANC spokesman said．They be－ came suspicious and fired the vehicles and this exploded the car killing two of the attackers Zimbabue bas blamed the car bombing on South， African agents but has made no further comment／ Hospitalofficilstssaid three people，were injured

$\because \ddot{i}$
，
＂茹＂＂wh

By DON JACOBS: Harare
THE African National Congress and the Zimbabwean Government were last week acutely embarrassed by a report from Lusaka saying armed ANC members fired on a car which blew up in Bulawayo.

Zimbabwe's own semi-official news media picked up the reports which quoted an unnamed ANC spokesman as saying: "Our people became uneasy when the two cars stopped, and one person dashed from the first car to the second.
"They became suspicious and fired at the vehicles, and this exploded the car, killing two of the attackers."
ANC headquarters is expetted to issue a categorical denial that any of its personne in Zimbabwe every carry arms.

Repeated statements have been made by the authorities here that the only ANC members in the country are unarmed refugees and civilian diplomats.

Any suggstion that ANC members possess weapons might justify Pretoria's claims that the banned organisation's operations here are a cover for inflation across the Limpopo.

Mystery still surrounds the incident in Bulwayo's Trentance suburb on Monday night.

Two cars managed to get past a line of Zimbabwe police guards at the ANC-occupied house in Jungle Road.

They covered the long disdance up the driveway and one of them drew up at the back of the old colonial-style house before shooting broke out.

A shattering explosion followed which tore the roof off the building. A car was seen speeding from the scene.

Secret paper on Renamo ${ }^{6}$ clears' SA $_{1}^{\text {sinnem }}$

Sunday Tlmes Reporter A SECRET briefing paper by an organisation representing business interests in Mozambique and Zimbabwe suggests that South Africa would not let the Renamo rebels come to power through force

This finding is at odds with constant Mozambican accusations that South Africa still supports the rebels.
The paper - by the Beira Corridor Support Group admits that Renamo rebe activity has placed severe strains on the country.

Link

The Support Group was set up by business and govern ment to open the rail link between Zimbabwe and Beira, which has been under constant rebel attack for the last seven years, and to try to restart economic activity in the war devastated country.
Among the main concluslons of the report:
© There is now little difference : between the baskc economic policy positions of the two parring parties in Mozambique.
( Interuationally thert are no substantlal political Interestsitprepared to back Renamo fort, power. , Q Renamo:activitles have created conditions of eco; nomic, social and political collapse in Mozambique. But with increasing international support and a new and positive South African strategy Frelimo's position can only improve.
The report documents South African support for the rebel movement up to the signing of the Nkomatl Accord in 1984, noting that it has since scaled down considerably.
"There are so many weapons in Mozambique that it has been quite simple for Renamo to sustain its position," it observed.
Among signs of a positive new South African approach was the signing of an agreement to rehabliltate the Ca hora Bassa power lines.

It seems clear that the position of Frellmo can only improve as its policy of economic reform takes root and Western assistance gathers momentum. South Africa's new strategy of seeking economic and political linkages with neighbouring states will reinforce this shilt," says the report.
*The report observes that thearight-wing lobby groups in the Urilted States which supportediRenamo have become more powerful, despite the deterioration in the organisation's competence and standing.

pace

THE massive car bomb which wrecked a suburban villa used by the ANC in Bulawayo, Zimbabwe, carly this week could have claimed the lives of two of the people who planted it.

Forensic experts picked fragments of human Clesh out of the scorched garden on Tuesday.

Reporters saw parts of at least one body scattered over a wide arca, mixed with the twisted pieces of the car that held the bomb, apparently a Renault 5.

Police at the scene refused to give casualty figures. An official in the Zimbabwe capital, Harare, who declined to be named, said two pcople died, possibly those who planted the bomb.

Three people were injured and taken to Bulawayo's Mpilo llospita! but no detalls of their condition were available.

There was no statement from the government of President Robert Mugabo, but previous bombings againsi the ANC in Zimbabwe have been blamed on South Africa.

The Bulawayo Chronche reported that two.cars had driven to the house up the cunlit dirt track from Jungle Road. One drove away, pursued by shots, white tho other exploded, dlgging are crator aboul. 60 cm doep in the drlveway,

One end of the house, including a bedroom, a bathroom and lavatory, was demolished by the blast.
Inside the bedroom, among the wreckage, clotios, shoes and personal oddments, there was a deep pool of blood.

In other rooms lay piles of South African newspapers.

On top of the pile was the Johannesburg-based daily newspaper The Star of September 16, 1987, with the headline "Magnus warns frontline states on terror against SA".

South African Defence Minister Magnus Malan has [requently warned Zimbabwe and other black-ruled states to stop harbouring the $\triangle N C$ or risk reprisals.

Zimbabwe gives strong political support to the ANC but has denied the ANC used its territory as bases for raids into South Arica

One of the neighbours in Jungle Road, Shanc Holmes, said on Tucsdny he was sitting watching a video $\ln$ his house when the bomb went olf.
"The next thing I knew, I was sltting on the floor," he said, pointing to the shatterod ceiling, Hghts and windows of hils brick bungalow, some 200 m rom the villa used by tho ANC.

Eamily can now visit spy in Zimbabwe jail

By MICHAEL HARTNACK
Harare
CONVICTED South African spy Odile HarIngton has had her first visitor at Chikurubl maximum security prison slace she was Jailed in November for 25 years for trying to inflitrate ANC guerrilla ranks in Zimbabwe.
The 27 -year-old doctor's daughter from Parktown, Johannesburg, was allowed a 40 -minute conversation in English with the head of the South African mission in Harare, Mr Johan, Viljoen, who requested diplomatic access quested diplomatic seven weeks ago.
"She' was looking much better than the last time I saw her in August," Mr Viljoen said.
"She is physically and mentally in good shape. She asked me all sorts of quesin South Africa Stre gong on in South Airica. She is hungry for news.
very well treated was being very well treated."
Mr Vilfoen sald the skin contracted due to prison had during her pre-trial detention appeared to have cleared up. fothis was the first visit she has had since her conviction.

Things go better By PATRICIA CHENE FOR Amerington FOR American TV vlewers the real thing will soon become even more real. thls week it? would begin airing three dimensional ads In May - 3-D, that is, - for consumers who are r Watching through ${ }_{\text {i }}$ special glasses.  The ads are the result of nety technology which al. llows viewers without the 3 clearly fon'two dimenstons Three-D enjoyed brief popularity In the '50s, when patrons watched special. effects fllms through tinted glasses:  Sin It never took off, howeverergbecause' whthout they glasses the pleture was - glasses the pleture was blurred.  OH Hew 3 TD  The first ad - + a' 60 . second slot for Coca-Cola ing the last 10 to alred dursegment of the season's fin segment of the season's finat eplsode of Moonlighting whtch, ABC sald, would also $50 \ln 3-\mathrm{D} . \ln _{2} 8 \mathrm{f}$  Coke chose Moonilghting because of the show's wililagness to experiment with the effect, company offlclals safli.  The soft drink manufac-  turer will distribute the glasses free, or at minimal cost, through grocery stores and fast-food elialns.

ODILE HARINGTON She Is hungry

I have made inquiries and family vislts will now be al lowed. If her mother (South African artist Eone de Wet) wants to visit her, we will try to make the necessary arrangements.
"On Christmas Day I went to Chlkurubl with a parcel from her lamily. Today she told me she had been allowed to recelve the food but not the toiletries. toiletries. Whe occuples herself daily She wants to the library. teaching liplomrol cor a pondence course at Unisa, and I will arrange for regiher."
Mr VIljoen said he could not comment'on speculation that Miss Harington might be exchanged for one or more of the convicted ANC espionage accomplices now in South African jails.

Gardening

They include Marion Sparg, a former fournalist, Who is serving 25 years for planting a bomb at pollce planting a bomb at pollce headquarters at John Vo Square, Johannesburg.

- "The subject has not con up." Mr Viljoen said.
During her trial it was disclosed that Miss Harington was then detalned at Chikurubl women's prlson, where she was able to do gardenling. There have been unconirmed reports that she is now the solltary occupant of a women's maxlmum securIty section.
St': is allowed one visitor ano une fetter a month, and oo write one letter three times a year. She is allowed a food parcel at Christmas, on Zimbabwe's independence annlversary (April 18) and Heroes Day (August 11) Heroes Day (August 11). Sentencing her to the maximum 25 -year jail term the Judge President Mr Jus tice wison Sandura said belleved "a more sald belleved "a more approprecution by a firing squad.

Envelope

Claiming that she had been recruited and sent to Zim babwe In October 1008 by a outh Arrican securlty policeman named Geoff, the amateur spy was compromised within weeks of clalming refugee status.
An envelope of intelligence data was insufficiently sealed, and the Zimbabwean police guard she asked to post it became suspiclous.
In it were plans on In it were plans of the ANC house Yesterday Odile's fatier, Dr Jack Harington, of Johan nesburg, - told the Sunday Mrs de Wet had been adyised that family visite were now to be permitted.
"Oh, thal's marvellous. I will be talking to her mother and we whll arrange to go to see her as soon as we can," he sald.

SUPERSTAR AT $13 \ldots$... Chrlstlan Bale who playe the lead role In Steven Splelberg's

Oh what a tragedy

NORMAN KEAN, 54, producer of Oh Calcutta, the longrunning Broadway play that its naked performers, stabbed to death his wife Gwyda, 53 , and then leaped Friday, New own death on Friday said.
Drumsticks! BRITISH rock drumper Vinnie Reed has won lfis weight battle after being told, 121 kg was not enougli for the band Mammoth. He now tunes in.
at 140 kg . at 140 kg .
CHD delivery ${ }^{\text { }}$
DETECTIVES swoped on a house in Ashford, Kent, England, to arrest a theft suspect wifós baby: $b_{3}$
$\therefore \rightarrow$

Adelmarie's pari

a

19

unc

等 African hom there. Perhaps other homelands had not been ir holidays the
because they were not so important to businessmen and thei diary, Mr Bruce Beale, said he was a businessman not a poli Asked whether he was aware that Zimbabwe did not re public holidays in the region, rather than listing Transkeic Diary which places it between Namibia and Zambia in its

2045241

BULAWAYO - At least three men have been detained here in what was described as a wave of hysteria following last Monday's car bomb attack in the city which left two people dead.
Q The three men known to be detained are all Zimbabweans. They are Mr Rory Maguire, $37, \mathrm{Mr}$ Trevor Demain and Michael Howard, ages unknown

A lawyer acting for them, Mr Hugh Bisset said there had been funny business in Bulawayo all day with car chases and friends of the detained men deny. ing knowing them, PMrbisset said he him self was unable to go home as a crowd was picketinghishouse.
Police were reported to have raided Mr Ma guíre's home in Burn side surbub yesterday afternoon and takenhim and eight members of his family to the central police station
The family members détained included Mr Maguire's elderly par-ents-in-law, his 15 - yearold son Wayne, gand his nephew and niece Shayne and Helen Jor daan, aged eight and four:
After nearly two hours Mr Maguire's family, was allowed to return home but they were not per mitted to see him and were not given any reason for his detention, his wife, Mrs Jülia Maguire said last night.
When Mr Bisset went to the police station, police denied any knowledge of the detention of Mr Maguire or his two friends.
A former member of the Zimbabwean Central Intelligence Organsa tion, Mr Kevin Woods, is also believed to be in police custody in Bulawayo. - DDC

5 detainees hidden, lawyers barred

HARARE Lawyers acting Lume whites detained 'in Butlawayo at the weekend have still not been granted access to them.

Grave concern has been expressed at the refusa of the Zimbabwe security authorities to reveal the whereabouts"of the five, or even confirm that they are being held whem

Nö reasons: hayebieen suggested for the action but Bulawayo is in the grip of a wave of tension fol lowing the January 11 car-bomb explosion which killed two people at a house occupied by ANC supporters.

A large contingent of heavily armed security force members cordoned off the home in Bulawayo's Burnside suburb where one of the detainees, Mr Rory Laguire, lives and refused to let anyone speak to his wife Julia
The service station run by Mr Laguire in Fife Street was forced to close, and placed under armed guard.
A workmate of Mr Laguire, Mr Michael Howard; A workmate of Mr Laguire, Mr Trevor Demaine; a former officer of the Zimbabwean Central Intelligence Organisation, Mr Kevin Woods; and Mr Woods' ex wife, Jane; were believed to be held at secretiocations in various police stations.
The 1 awy acting for the five, Mr Hugh Bisset, intends renewing efforts to see them. The British High Commission in Harare is understood to be monitoring the case, as Mr Howard holds a British passport:-DDR babwe and have killed scores of people living along the eastern border. He accused Mr sithole of collaborating inth Mozambican rebels who have made incursions into babwe and have killed scores of people living along the tried for subversion if he came home.

He accused Mr Sithole of collaborating with MoEmmerson Mnangapwa, said Mr Mr Sithole would be tried or subversion if he came home. country") Last Ndabaningi Sithole and alr other poititical exfles, so so the they can come and participate in the affairs of the ment should declare an amnesty to our president, Rev shua Nkomo.
Zanu's executive feels it is vital that "our governbabwe Afican People's Union (Zapu) led by Mr Jo-7üzur!

owner is also detained

Argus Africa News Service BULAWAYO. - Mrs Julia Macguire, wife of Bulawayo garage ownè - Mr Rory Macguire, who was arrested on Sunday, has also been held.

She was taken from her home about 11 pm last night.
Armed guards had been on duty at the house during the day. ${ }^{*}$

Mrs Mackuire's arrest was confirmed by her lawyer who was unable, to gain access to Mr Macguire or his associates who were also arrested on Sunday for unkniown reasons.

FOUR OTHERS

Six peoplee, including Mr and Mrs Macguire, are being held. The others are understood to be Mr Michael Howard, Mr Trevor Demain, Mr Kevin Woods and his former wife, Jane.
The six's detention came almost a week after two people were killed when a car bomb blast wrecked a house occupied by African National Congress members in Bulawayo.
The car was said to be a Bulawayo registered yellow Renault 5 .
A spokesman at police headquarters in Harare said there was no record of arrests of the people named above.

Inquiries would be made.

VISITED

In Bulawayo, a lawyer rep resenting some of the detained people was himself held for questioning for several hours yesterday after he had visited Mrs Macguire at her home.
Police guards have also been placed at the homes of Mr placed and Mr Woods.

Mr Macguire is due to appear in court next week on allegations of smuggling car parts worth more then R200 000.

He last appeared in court in Bulawayo two months ago when bail wa set at about R25 000; a surety of R45 000 was required and he had to sur render his travel documents., $\%$

from Michael Hartnack

HARARE - Another three whites were reported to have been detained in the Harare area yesterday, as the Zimbab wean House of Assembly prepared to meet for a premature sitting to renew the state of emergency.
Human rights activists here had hoped that after the December 22 unity agreement between President Robert Mugabe's ruling Zanu/PF party and Mr Joshua Nkomo's Zapu party, the 22 -year-old state of emergency would be allowed to lapse, and with it the government's powers to order indefinite imprisonment without trial.
The latest arrests bring to 17 the number of people detained since the January 11 car bomb explosion at an African National Congress house in Bulawayo.
All but one of those being held are white.
Sources, say, however, that the detentions are not directly connected to the blast.
They are, however supposedly linked to "weapons and bombings", Bulawayo lawyer Mr Hugh Bisset was told.
He has so far been denied access to his clients.
When the House of Assembly convenes, the new Minister of Justice, Mr Emmerson Munangagwa, is expected to request a further six month extension for the state of emergency, on the grounds that South Africa is planning further "destabilisation" infiltration, and that Mozambique resistence fighters may launch renewed cross-border raids.
With 99 of the 100 seats now in the hands of the MugabeNkomo alliance, the government is assured of the 50 votes it needs.
The emergency was first sought by Mr Ian Smith's Rhodesian government on November 5,1965 , six days before its unilateral declaration of independence from Britain.
Under it, Mr Mugabe and fellow African Nationalist were detained at Wha Wha prison camp until Mr John vorster's 1974 "Detente" initiative.
Security police are understood to be scrutinising contacts the 17 detainees had with South Africans, and recent visits they may have made to the Republic.
The latest to be detained are believed to be two more members of the Bawden family from Shangani, and a second Mr Michael Smith.
Another person of that name, and his wife Eileen were detained earlier at a farm in the Chakari area

Four members of the Bawden family from Shangani were also picked up to Bulawayo.
All are believed to be Zimbabwean citizens.

The South African-based brother of Mr Kevin Woods, 35, who was detained in Zimbabwe on alleged security charges with his wife Jane, has angrily dismissed allegations that his brother might have been involved in national security matters.
Mr Sam Woods of Welkom, said he was "absolutely sure": his brother was not guilty of any possible national security charges.
Mr Kevin Woods was a formerly a policeman who served both the Rhodesian - and after independence - the Zimbabwean governments, his brother said.
"Kevin was certainly no radical and not at all politically motivated," said Mr Sam Woods.
He said he had been in contact with International Red Cross for details of his brother's detention.

Mr Woods said his brother, while still a policeman, was once commended by the government of Mr Mugabe for his involvment in the discovery of the arms cache allegedly accumulated by Mr Nkomo. - Sapa

[^0]
Church banning due to screams  BULAWAYO - The Zimbabwe Assem- Nanded the church, said: There was too

 blies. of God Africa church has beenf Muuch noise, too much screaming and all banned from holding sermons at several that. It was not good for us."secondary schools here because of what Headmasters said the church taught able" levels of screaming during confe- pupils that if they failed in school, it was sions, Ziana, the national news coner the wish of God and it was pardonable reported yesterday.
Headmasters of secondary schods But the church, which claims to have said the meetings were noisy and dis- the largest Christian following in the turbed classes.
The headmaster of Luveve Secondary School, one of the schools that has country, was adamant that it had cordial relations with most schools, "except for a few". - Sapa.
 hoped that after the December 22 unity agreement between President Robert Mugabe's ruling Zanu (PF) and Joshua Nkomo's Zapu the 22-year-old state of emergency would be allowed to lapse, and with it government's powers to order indefinite imprisonment without trial.
The latest arrests bring to 17 the number of'people detained since the January 11 car bomb explosion at an ANC house in Bulawayo which killed two people. All but one of those held are white.

Sources, say, however, the detentions are not directly connected with the blast They are supposedly linked to weapons and bombings", Bulawayo lawyer Hugh Bisset was told. He is not being allowed access to his clients until today, 4 , Whenthe House of Assembly convenes this afternoon, the new Justice Minitister Emmérson Munangagwa is expected to request a six-month extension on the grounds that SA is planning furirther destabilisation infiltration and Retíàmo may launch renewed cross-border raids

 $\qquad$

兂界

흘

and 0 0 0
0 0 whole mentality of re－ spect for law and indi－ vidual integrity．It de－ sudroyed

忈

јु

$\rightarrow$

管等 ueomy чทีos e uI

 чччм киә！гоs su！peл
 웅
0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0

 0 0 0 0 0 n $\qquad$

．

 fore his death

 5ㅗㅡ․
 ？
711！ in Followingithe bombing of house

 nected withzy lat week bomb
卦ARARE，Simgabwe police $\qquad$ 12
3
8 6䋨
数数

What exiles believe is the real bombs target: An ANC-Zim rift

AS Zimbabwean police this week announced arrests in connection with the recent bomb blast at a Bulawayo refugee residence, South African exjles voiced fears that they were now the targets of a new kind of bombing campaign designed to cause maximum confusion.
*Exiles believe the recent spate of bombings have oeen designed to try to create the impression of disunity within their ranks, or to muddy political waters between them and their allies.
Zimbabwe police have not themselves released names, but their announcementoón Wednesday night of

Hèld - while platents waited

A SOSHANGUVE doctor says he had to leave patients - one of whom was later admitted to hospital for a cardiovascular complaint - unattended whent he was arrested under Emergencyl regulations at his surgery last week.
Dr George Mukhari, a conumunity leader in the township, claims he was taken by security police from his surgery at Falala Shopping Centre in Soshanguve shortly after 2 pm on Monday 11 January. He was questioned about Soshanguve community organisations for almost two hours at the Compol Building, Pretoria's police headquarters.
Mukhari, who is president of the Soshanguve Sports and Recreation Association (Soscrea), an affiliate of the United Democratic Front, told the Weekly Mail:
"I was busy with a patient when the sister in charge came in to inform me that two white Afrikaans-speaking males wanted to see me. After finishing with the patient, I asked the sister to show them in.
"One introduced himself as Ser" geant Sarel Botha and told me he was instructed by a Captain Loots to detain me under Emergency regulations.
"I asked to telephone my wife - a request that was acceded to. Later I asked if I could get another doctor to come and assist, realising there were over 15 patients waiting, amongst them a cardiovascular patient. This request was turned down. Instead, Botha told me the sister could take care of the patients.
"I was taken to Compol Building where I was questioned at length about the activities of Soscrea and the Soshanguve Youth Organisation (Soyo).

By VUSI GUNENE
"Throughout the interrogation I was wamed they had powers to detain me for as long as they wished. I was also told to co-operate and give information on what is happening in Soshanguve. I refused on the basis of the Hippocratic Oath and my conscience as a Christian.
"After two hours of questioning I was told I should leave. I arrived at the surgery after five hours and found it crammed with patients.
"I found my patient with cardiovascular ailments still waiting. I had to refer the patient to Garankuwa Hospital, as his health had deteriorated."
Asked to comment on the allegations, the Squth African Police public relations division issued the following statement:
"We confirm that a doctor from Soshanguve was questioned by the police on or abouit 1988-01-11. We are not, however, prepared to identify him (for obvious reasons).
"..We reject the allegation that the police were unconcerned about the patients and this is borne out by the fact that he was allowed to contact his wife, given the opportunity to take his motor car home, and after he was questioned, he turned down an offer to be taken home.
"There is no reason why the police would not have further obliged him and permitted him to make another telephone call to arrange for a substitute doctor."

Evicted squatters 'ordered to go'

EVICTED Noordhoek squatters engaged in legal action to have their sites and homes restored to them have denied they were given any choice in the matter of their removal.
Affidavits filed by Cape Provincial Administration officials, police and the owners of the land they lived on until December 2 last year state a decision was taken to give the estimated

By HOWARD BARRELL,

 ": Hararedents".
This is seen as a possible reference to the car bomb at a suburban shopping centre in Harare in October which anti-apartheid activist couple Jeremy and Joan Bricklill survived.
Unofficial accounts of the bombing say that only Zimbabwe Police Support Unit members, guarding the rerugee residence, opened fire in the Bulawayo incident, and that this occurred only after the bomb had exploded.
These accounts contradict à disputed Associated Press report purportedly quoting the ANC' as saying from Lusaka that their members had opened fire.
Exiles believe that the two bombs aimed against them in Zimbabwe since October and this week's blast in Lusaka were designed to cause maximum confusion. Only luck, or the ineptitude of the bombers, avoided what could have been serious muddying of political waters.
They point out that, in Harare in October, the bombers used exactly the same model of vehicle to carry the explosives as that owned by the Brickhills - a Citroen Club.
The two cars were parked alongside each other. When the car carrying the bomb exploded, the petrol tanks of all neighbouring vehicles, apart from the Brickhill couple's, exploded.
Had the Brickhills not survived the blast and not filled up their fuel tank immediately before the blast - so leaving insufficient oxygen to allow the fuel to explode - all important initial press and olher reports may well have concluded that the Brickhills were themselves probably carrying the bomb.
Because of Jeremy Brickhill's past association with Zapu and his wife's past relationship with the ANC, this might initially have caused havoc to the relationship between the Mugabe government, on the one hand, and the ANC and Zapu, on the other.
In the case of the Bulawayo bomb, had one or more of the bombers not apparently blown themselves up, the car bomb blast may well have been presented, initially at least, as a case of unstable ANC explosives going off by accident.
South African intelligence has meanwhile suggested to some journalists that the Bulawayo bomb resulted from internal ANC feuding.
There is no evidence either from within the ANC's councils or from the circumstances of the blast to support this assertion.
But this may well have been anothe possible presentation, had the Bulawayo bomber or bombers not apparently died by their own ineptitude.
This week's Lusaka bomb appears also to have been designed to try to create the impression of internal ANC tensions. But, in the event, the bombers did not manage to detonate it yelose enough to any of the ANC leadership to make out a plausible case.

|  |  |
| :---: | :---: |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  | al.:-nongress

"Lawyers"sald the iatest arrests wore mado In Harare,

Blacks join whites in Zimbabwean exodus

HARARE - Zimbabwe's chief immigration officer has confirmed that the renewed exodus of whites forecast by economists did take place at the end of 1987.

For the first time since the post-independence mass outflow of skilled whites halted in 1985, Zimbabwe suffered a net loss in migration. Economists say job uncertainty was the main cause of their departure.
An interesting feature, however, is tha almost as many black professional people packed their bags as whites.
Chief immigration officer Elasto Mugwadi revealed rarely disclosed racial statistics when he said 2388 blacks left, compared with 2584 whites, 319 Asians and 44 coloureds.

German freed

HARARE West German : businessman Mr Heinz Taube arrested in. a security crackdown by̆ Zimbabwean police last week, was freed on Saturday, his wife said. "He is at home but does not wish to speak to anyone," she said.
. West German embassy officials refused to comment, but diplomatic sources said Mr Taube was released after their intervention:
变 Mr Taube, who owns an electronics business in the Zimbabwean capital Harare, was arrested with one of his local employees last week as part of a police probe into a car bomb in Bulawayo on January 12 that destroyed a house used by the African National Congress (ANC):
One person was killed and three injured in the blast, which the government has blamed on saboteurs linked to South Africa.
At least 17 people have been arrested in the investigation, mostly from Bulawayo's white farming and business community.
Nobody has yet been. charged:-Sapa-RNS

Mugabe and Simon Muzenda.

To keep everyone happy, Mugabe has increased the number of ministers from 24 to 32 , while the number of deputy ministers has been raised from five to 18 . The swollen government has been sharply criticised for the creation of unnecessary ministerial posts. An obvious example is the post created for the former deputy education minister, Joseph Culverwell, who has become minister of sideline some of the more outspoken government ministers from the previous administration, such as former transport minister Herbert Ushewokunze; former labour minister Fred Shava; and former justice minister Edison Zvobgo.

The critics say that the five former Cabinet members demoted to non-Cabinet party posts have been "bought off," when they should - more properly - have been sacked. But other experts make the point that with Mugabe saying that his reform is intended to establish the supremacy of the party over the government, these new ministers could turn out to be more powerful. Restructuring government by creating more jobs is simple. It is going to be much more difficult to integrate the two parties at grass roots level, in an enduring atmosphere of mutual antagonism.
Above all, the new administration must start making some tough economic choices that have been repeatedly postponed - such as new long-haul aircraft for Air Zimbabwe, a post-freeze wage and prices policy to take effect in April, a higher maize price, and a decision on economic sanctions against SA.

 $\bullet$ COMPUTERSHOP. BBM HOUSE 12 WALTER PLACE. WATERVAL PARK. MAYVILLE 1091 TEL: (031) 29-2111. - 19 BREE STREET, CAPE YOWN $8001:$
TEL. (021) $21-4420.111$ MAIN STREET, JOHANNESBURG 2001. TEL: ( 011 ) $331-0211$. 81 ZASTRON STREET, BLOEMFONTEIN TEL- $(051$ ) 89457 -

Longest  were taken into cus－was among the first to  nected racketeers．

and refused to speak to the press．he $\mathrm{Mr}^{\text {t／}}$ Harper holds dual British－Zimbab－ wean citizenship and will be free to make a new life for himself in Britain，and Zimbab－ wean born Mr Austin is thought to have a claim by descent to both Brit－ ish and South African citizenship．

Zimbabwe may meanwhile make pub－ lic its evidence of an alleged South African ＂destabilisation plot＂ when the Australian when the minister，Mr Bill Hayden，visits Ha－ rare next week．
Among items known to have been recovered in a series of recent raids are explosives， detonators，timing de－ detonators，timing di－ vices，and a communist

Daily Dispatch
Correspondent
HARARE－The long－ est serving white secur－ ity detainees in Zim－ babwe，Mr John Austin， 39，and Mr Kenneth Harper，44，have been freed after nearly two years in detention under the Zimbabwean state of emergency．
The decision to re－ lease the two former customs if officers comes as two others were arrested in Bula－ wayo，＇in＇the wake of the January 11 car bomb explosion out－ side an African Nat－ ional Congress house there．
According to legal sources，a Canadian housewife，Mrs Susan Annandale，40，and a Zimbabwean， Wayne Hoskins，19， were taken into cus A total of 23 people have been detained in the latest series of ar－ rests－ 22 of them whites－but only 13 are still thought to be in custody．

Potential criticism of detention in Zimbabwe has，however，been pre－empted by the re－ lease of Mr Austin and Mr Harper．
Amnesty Internat－ ional and other human rights organisations have expressed con－ cern at a possible abuse in case of the two with regard to the state of emergency， which gives the govern－ ment the power to or der indefinite deten tion without trial．
The British High Commission in Harare welcome the release of the two，paying tribute the tenacity with which their legal rep－ resentative，Mr Simon Bull，had fought for their release since their initial arrest in February， 1986.
They won six suc－ cessive court battles to have their im prisonment declared unlawful and in bad faith，but each brief taste of freedom was swiftly followed by their re－arrest．
While the authorities claimed to have a two－ paragraph＂secret document＂which sug－ gested Mr Austin and Mr Harper had been spying for South Africa，the two sug－ gested they had been ＂framed＂by well con－

Prior to their arrest they had helped break international smug gling of hard drugs and stolen cars．
Though unwilling to let the men go，the authorities often took a strange attitude to－ wards them．On one oc－ casion，when police transport failed to ar－ rive at court，they strolled through the streets of Harare to the entral police station， escorted only by a con－ stable．
This was in contrast with the massive mili－ tary precuations mounted to guard the self－confessed South African spy．${ }^{\text {f }}$ Miss Odile Harington
Mindful of previous re－arrests，the two yes terday went to ground

```
```

    ."E 6af -a゙
    ```
```

```
```

    ."E 6af -a゙
    ```
```

```
```

!}

```
```

!}
!!L

```
```

!!L

```
```

```
```

#% %%

```
```

```
```

#% %%

```
```

```
```

6"4*

```
```

```
```

6"4*

```
```

```
```

&%,5%莫品

```
```

```
```

&%,5%莫品

```
```

```
```

#5%ES. HE!

```
```

```
```

#5%ES. HE!

```
```

```
5%,年:
```

```
5%,年:
```

```
is: I:7y
```

is: I:7y
\therefore

```
\therefore
```

Harare security detainees freed  HARARE - Former customs officers Mr John Austin, 39, and Mr Kenneth Harper, 44, were freed by the Zimbabwean authorities late on Thursday after nearly two years in detention under the state of emergency.The decision to release the longest-serving white security detainees came as two more people were arrested under the state of emergency in Bulawayo, in the wake of the January 11 car bomb explosion at an ANC house there.

A Canadian housewife, Mrs Susan Annandale, 40 , and a Zimbabwean, Mr Wayne Hoskins, 19, were taken into custody this week, legal sources confirmed. A total of 23 people have been detained in the latest series of arrests. - Sapa

Zimbabwe frees two: Now for real spy plot

WITH evidence at last of an alleged real South African spy plot, Zimbabwe this week moved to defend itself against charges of abusing security detention powers.
It freed Mr Neil Harper, 44, and Mr John Austin 38, who have spent nearly two years imprisoned by ministerial order.
They were tantalised with shortlived freedom on four previous occasions, when they were speedily re-detained after winning courtroom battles.
The two former high-ranking Zimbabwean customs officers yesterday went into hiding with their families.

Friends said they were physically in good condition but "bewildered".
They were planning to have a long talk with their wives about their futures which may well lie abroad after their prison ordeal.
The release of British-born Mr Harper and dual Zim-babwe-South African citizen Mr Austin clears the way for the authorities here to mount a propaganda spectacular next week when Australlan Foreign Minister Bill Hayden is in town.

Espionage

It will be over the arrest of a whole network of alleged South African spies and the seizure of explosives, detonators, timing devices and a Soviet rocket-iauncher.
Zimbabwean security sources believe that since last September they have latd bare the largest foreign espionage operation ever mounted by Pretoria.
Since September, 29 people - 28 of them white - have been detained under the state of emergency in connection with the alleged plot.

At the weekend 19 were still in custody but others may soon be freed, lawyers belleve, to be called as witnesses later .when a major security trial will take place in the Zimbabwean High Court.

Some of the white accused

By DON JACOBS Harare

could face the death penalty for treason.
When self-confessed South Airican spy Odile Harington was jailed for the maximum 25 years under the Official Secrets Act last November, Judge-President Wilson Sandura regretted his inability to have her shot by firing squad.

No mercy can be expected for local whites proved to have helped the South Afri can Defence Force.
Sources say the authorilies have irrefutable evidence of a South African plot to kill members of the African National Congress in Zimbabwe, in contrast to the flimsy "secret document" suggesting Mr Austin and Mr Harper spied for Pretoria

Whether you have R100 000 to invest or R100 a month to spare, it makes sense to get balanced, objective advice. But who do you turn to?

The Old Mutual Financial Adviser has one important advantage - a knowledge of our whole product range. His experience and skills range from pure life cover protection to pure investment. He'll be able to tell you what's in it for woul he orivine voit the facte.

alleged MNR  $36^{2}$

followers ordered
HARARE A Zimbabwean magistrate has or dered! a re-trial for seven alleged supporters of the Mozambique Resistence Movement (MNR), after accepting torture allegations against security police.

Mr Eric Matinenga recused himself, in the case of seven men from the Ndau-Shangaan tribal group, who were allegedly intercepted while on their way to South Africa for military training is.

The regional magistrate heard that the prosecu tion's case had been reduced to chaos by the loss of statements, said to have been made by the men who initially pleaded gưilty
After hearing medical evidence, Mr:Matinenga found there was probable substance in claims by six of the men that they were flogged with sjamboks, given electric shocks, and subjected to water torture
He refused to release them, however, ordering a re-trial, at which they will be able to change their pleas to that of not guilty.
Mr Matingenga said there was a high probability the men would flee into MNR territory if allowed to returnhome to the Chipinge area.
This was the first major court case inolving dis sidents from the south east, as opposed to the western Matabeleland area.
It raises important legal questions because the $M N R$ is'not formally' classified as a banned organisation in Zimbabwe, although the government has deployed up to 14000 troops against it since 1980
The case, begun early last year, but subject to in. numerable adjournments, has reinforced fears in Harare that the South African government still plans to foment rebellions in order to destablise Zimbabwe and Mozambique, breaking the 1984 Nkomati accord pledges to the late president Sa mora Machel.- DDC

Rhodesia 88 !  IN a bar at the Troutback Inn over-

looking the Nyanga mountains of eastern Zimbabwe, white farmers speak glowingly about the outcome of the black revolution they once took up arms to crush.
Taxes of more than 50 percent of income are high, they tell a group of Australian and British tourists. Fertilisers are sometimes not immediately available. And local labour is costly because the state has decreed a minimum monthly wage of about R100.
But they still own their farms despite independence fears that their properties would be nationalised.
And they still live comfortably in luxury homes with servants and swimming pools, travel abroad regularly on vacation and send their children to private schools in England, South Africa or Zimbabwe itself.
Little has changed for whites sice he British colony of Rhodesia became black-ruled Zimbabwe eight years ago.
The Troutback Inn, for decades a country retreat for well-heeled whites, is much the same.
Ties and jackets at dinner are no longer required There's no imported wine like there was in the days before independence. And the occasional black can be occasional black

Discontent

But for that, as the farmers tell their overseas guests, it could be the Rhodesia of yesteryear - a pleasant place to visit from time to time to angle for plump trout, stroll through the pine-scented mountains or play a round of golf of tennis.
Lameck Mutasa, 26, a caddy who comes from a tribal village an hour's drive away, tells a different story.
The seven-year war that transformed Rhodesia into black-governed Zimbabwe was waged because of land hunger, he says.
Whites, who lost the war,

kept the land. Blacks who won are disenchanted that wealth in the countryside is yet to be re-distributed.
"We are not against whites," he says. "But our people are still crying out for the land that is theirs."
Mutasa echoes widespread discontent among blacks about what has happened since President Robert Mugabe led their country to independence after a war that cost mainly 27000 black lives.
Official statistics tell part of the story. Communal, or peasant, land comprises 42,7 percent; commercial mainly white farmers 32,1 percent resettlement area 4,5 percent; small farms 3,5 percent and national parks and reserves 17,2 per cent.

Crisis

To his credit, Mugabe fulfilled pre-independence promises of free schooling and health care for the poor, most of the 8,2 -million population. But little has been done about the land crisis that triggered the conflict in Britain's last African colonial outpost.

Mugabe pledged that 162000 familles would be resettled in the first three years. By the end of last year, some 40000 families had been granted smallholdings been granted smallholdings and some 4000 whites - one and 70 of the population - cone tinue to occupy a third of the 156300 sq mile territory.
"It was easy for us to point fingers at the colonial rulers," says legislator Micah Bhebe. "But now whom should we point fingers at but at ourselves."
The government replies that it doesn't have the money to take over white land constitutionally under a willing buyer, willing seller basis.
White farmers wanting to sell claim wealthy black politiclans, civil servants and emergent businessmen often personally snap up properties that would otherwise be ideal for resettlement. They also maintain bureaucratic red tape delays transfers to the state.
Whatever the cause, the land hunger that led blacks to war has in peacetime given Mugabe's Government its most nagging headaches.
Troops and police have been ordered to use bulldozers and torches to destroy thousands of squatters' makeshift homes in operations reminiscent of what happens in South Africa.
And armed rebels in the Matabeleland province of Matabeleland province of ten won local support by citing the failure of the state to meet their demands for land.

Slaughter

Only last November, 20 armed men axed to death 16 white Christians including children living on two communal farms in Matabeleland in the bloodiest massacre since the end of the war.
The dissidents, according to police, were encouraged by a group of families who had been ordered by government officers off the farms a week before.
The slaughter, said then Home Affairs Minister Enos Nome aftairs Minister Enos nected to the squatting problem."
Dissidents have killed more than 70 white farmers and their families, as well as hundreds of black employees, in Matabeleland since independence, often leaving notes saying land is for Africans only.
Once again, the white farmers are armed just as they were when they were at the frontline of the insurgency.
In October, the then Local Government Minister Enos Chikowore deciared "total war" on squatters.
Some 40000 watched as their shanties were smashed before they were taken off in lorries to other parts of the country.
Most of the squatters were on land owned either by the state or by white farmers.
The state land is intended for legitimate resettlement, and the government argues that squatters are forestall. ing this programme.
The crackdown on those settled on white farms is less easy for outsiders to comprehend.
But some 4000 white farmers produce most of the country's export cash crops like cotton and coffee, tea and tobaceo and also half of the staple corn, enabling Zimbabwe to be one of Africa's few black states not only to feed itself but many of its neighbours.
Zimbabwe, Africa's youngest nation, seems conscious that food shortages elsewhere on the continent have triggered popular unrest and even led to the overthrow of governments.
"Food is a political issue," one of the white Zimbabwean farmers tells his guests at the Troutback Inn. That's why we're doing okay."

Resticm

Zimbabwe

HARARE. - Two senior white customs officers released late last month after two years in detention without trial said yesterday that they plan to leave the country but denied claims that they are going to South Africa.
Mr Neil Harper, 45, and Mr John Austin, 38, were released unconditionally on January 28 after being held for two years on suspicion of spying for South Africa. Both men vigorously denied the charge but were never given a chance to state their case in open court.
They were sacked from the top posts in the customs department while in detention.
In a statement issued yesterday by their law yer, Mr Austin and Mr Harper said they planned to seek new jobs in Britain or a Commonwealth country such as Australia, Canada or New Zealand. They both again denied spying for South Africa. - UPI

Continued from P38.
A supplementary Budget is likely to be necessary also because government spending is reportedly running well ahead of target, while some tax revenues are falling short. Extra appropriations will be needed for new aircraft, defence and education and to finance the substantial increase in ministerial posts announced at the New Year.

It is unclear whether government will use the supplementary Budget to increase indirect taxes on beer, cigarettes and possibly also petrol, or whether these will be left over until the July Budget. Either way, some increase in indirect taxation seems inevitable.

For management, the post-freeze strategy towards price control is all important. A large backlog of requests for price increases awaits approval. While the authorities will limit approvals as far as possible to avoid a deluge of price hikes, inflation will accelerate rapidly once the freeze is relaxed.

Some economists believe inflation will be at an annualised $16 \%-17 \%$ by the year-end, necessitating further depreciation in the Zimbabwe dollar, which has lost half its value in the past five years.

HARARE - Former Zimbab wean detainees John Austin and Neil Harper, released last week after nearly two years in detention, this week paid tribute to their jailers
In a statement in which they re-affirmed their innocence of allegations of spying for South Africa, Mr Austinand Mr Harper who were former senior customs offi cials said they were fit and healthy in mind and body when they were released from Chikuribi maximum security prison:
"Save for obvious constraints arising from the natural bounds of normal prison disicipline, we were generally treated with every courtesy and respect, as were our wives and families who came regularly to visit: and bring food for The cleanliness and discipline in Chikurubi Prison were in our view beyond reproach, they said.
Mr Austin and Mr Harper said they had been released without conditions They thanked the Minister of Home Affairs and other State officers who agreed to their release and affirmed their loyalty to Zimbabwe.
Our ultimate desire is complete vindication in respect of all allegations against us - the de tails of which we still have no knowledge as they are contained in secret documents which neither we nor our lawyers have seen and we can only hope and pray that such vindication will become a reality sooner rather than later" they said
Mr Austin, who was born here and Mr Harper, borm in Britain intend leaving shortly for Britain to look for jobs either in Britain itself or possibly in some othe Commonwealth country such as Aústrália New Zealand or Canada:
They had no intention of liv ing in'South Africa ${ }^{2}+\boldsymbol{y}$

Harare bomb blast $\frac{6,5}{6 / 48}$ remanded in custody 362

HARARE - Five whites accused of being South African saboteurs were brought to court here for the first time yesterday, handcuffed and manacled in leg irons.

Some 40 paramilitary police armed with semi-automatic rifles surrounded the magistrate's court building as they were escorted inside.
A farm manager, Mr.Michael Smith and a former Zimbabwean intelligence officer, Mr Kevin Woods, confirmed warned and cautioned state ments they had made to police when they appeared behind closed doors in front of a magistrate.

Three others - a garage owner, Mr Rory Maguire and two farmers, Mr Barry White and his brother, Mr John Bawden - remained under guard in Bawden courthouse throughout the day, the courthouse throughout be did not appear before the bench.
Attorneys said that the three are expected to return to court next week to confirm or dispute statements made to police.
They arrived at the courthouse under heavy armed guard and in separate cars to hear details of police allegations against them, a formality in Zimbabwean law before suspects are No charges were levelled and they were remanded in custody, court officials said.

The whites, Zimbabwean nationals from Matabeleland, were bearded, looked haggard and wore standard issue khaki prison drills. Mr Maguire was barefoot.
Their attorneys, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the magistrate dealt with other criminal cases first and did not have time to deal with all their statements to police.
The five were among 18 whites arrested after a car bomb killed at least one person in a house owned by the African National Congress in Bulawayo, the administrative capital of Matabeleland province, on January 11.

The government said one person was killed in the attack and blamed South Africa.
An undisclosed number of the other whites arrested since the Bulawayo whites arrest have since been freed:

Pretoria routinely denies Zimbabwean allegations that South Africa is responsible. - Sapa-AP

Pact started long haul to tribal unity  BULAWAYO. - One month after Mr Robert Mugabe and Mr Joshua Nkomo embraced at State House, Harare, on the signing of a unity pact between their two parties, the long haul to political and tribal peace in Zimbabwe has begun.

The pact has come after years of ill-will between the Shona-speaking peoples, who for the most part support Mr Mugabe's ruling ZanuPF , and the minority Ndebele followers of Mr Nkomo's Zapu party.
Although Mr Nkomo has been made second Vice-President to. Mr Mugabe and two other members of his party are now ministers, Zapu has in effect been swallowed by Zanu-PF.
The dislike between the Shona, three-quarters of Zimbabwe's population, and the Ndebele (or Matabele) goes back to the mid-19th century, when the Ndebele, a Zulu people, moved north from South Africa.

For a time during white rule the two tribes were united in Zapu under Mr Nkomo, the "father" of the nation, but in 1963 Zanu was formed.
The division has never been completely tribal, and the leadership of both parties has always been mixed, but the 1980 and 1985 elections firmly cemented Shona support for Zanu-PF and Ndebele backing for Zapu.
Since Mr Nkomo was thrown out of government in 1982, Zapu members have had little say in running the country.
Matabeleland has been by-passed by most of the, admittedly limited, development in Zimbabwe, and has been virtually occupied by a mainly Shona army, which has periodically

Mr Joshua Nkomo . . . the "father" of the nation.

Mr Robert Mugabe . . . embraced Mr Johua Nkomo. committed atrocities against the Ndebele people.
The military troubles started in 1982 when the "dissident" activities began and bandits started robbing villages, attacking white farms, and destroying government offices.
The government from the start claimed these were real dissidents operating on Zapu instruc tions, and detained, tortured and killed large numbers of Ndebele. Zapu and most people in Matabeleland, including many whites, believe the dissidents are under orders from Zanu-PE to discredit Zapu.
Both claims are possibly partly true, but it seems most likely the dissidents are independent robber barons.
Matabeleland has missed out on clinics, roads, good teachers and rural development such as dams and irrigation. The schemes that have resettled Africans on vacant white frms in Mashonaland have been almost entirely absent in Matabeleland.
Bulawayo, capital of the area and once the leading industrial town in central Africa, has faded while Harare has grown.

New buildings have shot up in Harare while 100 companies have gone into liquidation in Bulawayo since 1980 .
Last year the 50 -yearold Gloag Ranch Mission School in Matabeleland was burned down by a bandit leader. The British and Americans between them gave more than $£ 15000$ (R52 500) to help rebuild the school while the government in Harare contributed nothing.
"The people knew that if the school had been in Mashonaland money would have been available," said a Western diplomat.
Everyone realizes that action must follow the words of unity. Recently Mr Nkomo held a joint rally in Bulawayo with his fellow Vice-President, Mr Simon Muzenda. The reception was positive but muted. People are waiting to see whether unity means peace, jobs, dams.
Both Zanu and Zapu supporters agree that money is needed to improve health facilties and get farming back on its feet.
One of the worst droughts this century has just ended in Matabeleland, and 600000 people are depending on food relief.

BUEAWAYO - The Zanu (PF) secretary for administration and culture, Mrid Maurice Nyagumbo, yesterday ruled out the possibility of including Bishop Abel Muzorewa's UANC and the NRev Ndabaningi Sithole's Zanu in the unity accord signed between the ruling party and Mr Joshua Nkomo's PF Zapu, the national news agency, Ziana, reports
Addressing fo joint Zanu (PF) and PHZapu rally with Zapu president Mr Joshua Nkomo in Gwanda, 127 km south of Bulawayo, Mr Nyagumbo said the two parties could not be included in the unity accord because they collaborated with the Smith regime to impede Zimbabwe's independence,
TH want young Zimbabweanis to know. that a black Zimbabwean job-seeker was lissued with a pass allowing him seven days to firind employment in town, at the end of which period he was: deported to his communal home. Black people were not allowed to walk on pavements and we even bought bicycles through the window.Sy Yet after our release from detenGion in 1975 Bishop Muzorewa and Reverend Sithole joined the enemy and became part of the evil system. Bishop Muzorewa even recruited the unem-: ployed and the school leavers to fight iagainst the liberation forces of Zipra fand Zanla and to kill people who coloperated with the freedom fighters:
"Sithófe sent recruits for training in"

Amin's Uganda. How can we unite with. people who committed unforgettable evils? Do not ask me again why we did not unite with such people because I am fed up with that question," said a seemingly irritated Mr Nyagumbo who is also a senior Minister in the president's office.
He said Zanu (PF) and PF-Zapu had known for the past eight years that the important component of unity was missing in Zimbabwe.
In his message to the huge crowd, Mr Nkomo, who is also a senior Minister in the president's office, said there would be no return to disunity in Zimbabwe because the unity accord signed between the two parties was for all Zimbabweans, and not just for the leadership
"There will be no return to disunity because the accord signed last December 22 is for all the people irrespective of race or tribe. It is not unity for President Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo only but every Zimbabwean," he said.
He said the two parties were first given the assignment of achieving independence for Zimbabwe and this they had done.
"The second assignment was to bring unity and I can tell you these were not éasy tasks. It took us three years to accomplish unity," he said.
Mr Nkomo read the unity agreement paragraph by paragraph "so that everybody can understand its meaning $\dagger$ fully"

| "I know some Zimbab: weans tremble at the mention of socialism, We shali' "therefore explain thé order to avoid panic.  The Zapu leader also said the security situa tion in Mátêbelelana should be put right.  "Property is being des: troyed, boys are being ordered to cut off the heads of their fathers men and women have deserted. their communal homes because they fear ban   |
| :---: |

HARARE - The only black person among the group alleged to have been involved in the bombing of an African National Congress house in Bulawayo on January 11 appeared before a Harare magistrate yesterday, reports Ziana, the national news agency:

Mr Phillip Masiza Conjwayo, a for mer member of the special branch of the then British South Africa Police, appeared before magistrate Mr Charles Hungwe to have the statements he made to police confirmed.

Mr Conjwayo is facing allegations under the Law and Order (Maintenance) Act involving murder, espionage, sabotage, illegal possession of arms of war and failure to report the presence of dissidents to the police.

Others who have already appeared before the courts to have their state ments confirmed in connection with the bombing are Mr Rory Burt Maguire, a Bulawayo company director; Mr Guy Thomas Bawden from Shangani, near Bulawayo; Mr Kevin Woods, a former officer in the Central Intelligence Organisation and Mr Anthony Michael Smith, a Chakari farmer. Sapa.

|  |  |  |
| :---: | :---: | :---: |
|  |  |  |
|  |  |  |
|  |  |  |
|  |  |  |

皆

І иәл! әмqеquit 40
$\square-\quad \square$

Zimbabwe has been effectively

 given a last warning by the South African Government to stop guerilla actions being launched across its borders.Cross-border strikes into Zimbabwe by the South African security forces would be inevitable if that country again turned a blind eye to guerilla activities launched from its territory, Government sources indicated today.
However, they indicated it was unlikely any immediate action would be taken against Zimbabwe following the rocket attack on a Limpopo farmstead at the weekend.
No-one was injured in the attack, in which RPG7 rockets, grenades and automatic rifles were used on the home of Mr and Mrs Cyril Fisher, 100 m from the Zimbabwe border.
Foreign Minister Mr Pik Botha issued a stern statement last night, accusing Zimbabwe of treating South Africa's protests over insurgents with levity and warning that South Africa "could be forced to take the necessary steps" itself.
He said: "Zimbabwe stands warned that South Africa will not tolerate continued off-handedness on matters which profoundly affect its security."

Replyis unlikely'm.

The Zimbabwe government has made no considered reply to the South African note of protest over alleged guerilla infiltration and is unlikely to do so, ,"
If past events are anything to go by, there will be no formal answer from Harare to Pretoria.
President Robert Mugabe's government has no political or diplomatic relations with South Africa and in that sense it does not talk to Pretoria.
Notes from the South African Government, as was the case on Saturday following the attack, are handed over by the South African Trade Representative in Harare to an official of the Ministry of Trade and Commerce.
Zimbabwe's Information Minister, Mr Witness Mangwende, said earlier that the South African claim that the attack was launched from Zimbabwe was "a pack of lies" and was designed to divert attention from South Africa's internal problems.
In the protest note, Mr Botha said the attack was carried out by "elements who crossed the border from Zimbabwe and who afterwards returned to Zimbabwe".
South African security forces have launched follow-up operations and warned farmers in the Messina area not to use farm roads unnecessarily until they have all been swept for mines.

HARARE: Zimbabwe has of ficially thumbed its nose at South African accusations and warnings about alleged guerril la incursions from its territory and labelled them a pack 0 lies" $\mathrm{H}=\mathrm{H}$, M, Inis statement last night, Foreign Minister D D Nathan Shamuyarira said Dietoria's verbalyattack indicated how desperate the situation there had become.
The: warning to zombabwe were an attempto to divert at tention from that situation he Wismissing the claim that guerrillas had crossed into the Transyall from Zimbabwe to attack a farmhouse on Saturday morning, Dr Shamuyarira said: How could anyone enter and leave an area protected oy an electrified fence guarded by a huge military base, thousands of blod dhirsty soldiers, ano armed civilian tarmers?
 WW HETBIONIC
Meanwhie, the Ministev of Fóreign Affairs, Mr Pik Bôtha, said in Cape Town he would not react to histrionic declarations" from a government that tortured people until they said what was demanded of them.
I do not react to histrionic declarations of this nature, "His (Dr Shamuyarira's), call on the international community is, as far as 1 am concerned, a oke because most govern ments in the world that are still worth something are of the opinion that Zimbabwe is mak ind a mess of the country's management and economic planning Mr Botha said taxpayers $\mathrm{min}^{-1}$ the United Kingdom and Europe were not prepared to cone tinue to pour moneyg admint istration ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ Z Zimbabwe.
Dr Shamuyarira said Zimbabwe had not provided military bases for any organisation fighting South Africa. and had never itself launched cross-bor-s der attacks.
He said it was Zimbabwe who should be complaining to the international community about destabilisation and crossborder terrorism carried out by Pretorad ${ }^{\text {and }}$,

SA SAbotage ring smashed, says Harare

HARARE. - Zimbabwe yesterday claimed it had smashed a South African sabotage network responsible for a seven-year campaign of bombings and assassination attempts.

In a hard-hitting statement, the Foreign Minister, Mr Nathan Shamuyarira, for the first time directly accused South Africa of a Bulawayo car bombing on January 12.

One person died in the explosion.
The statement - issued just 24 hours after SA warned Zimbabwe of possible cross-border action if ANC terror attacks continued to be launched from that country - broke a month-long government silence on the investigation into a group of Zimbabweans arrested after the Bulawayo bombing, which destroyed a transit house used by the ANC.
Referring to the recent Bulawayo car bomb, Mr Shamuyarira said SA agents had hired a driver from a labour exchange, given him a car packed with explosives and asked him to drive it to the building - where he was blown up.

Six men, all but one of them white, were remanded by a Harare magistrate last Friday on murder and sabotage charges linked to the Bulawayo bombing and other attacks.
He said Zimbabwean security forces had recently smashed "an extensive network of South African saboteurs and agents who were involved in various acts of sabotage and attempted assassinations inside Zimbabwe.
"The network was based on farmers and other pro-Rhodesia elements in the Bulawayo and Fort Rixon area. Their statements have exposed the extensive

Tonoge 3 , s,

MR Pik Botha last night said of Mr Shamuyarira's remarks: "I do not react to histrionic statements of this nature, especially not from a government that tortures people until they say anything that is requested of them.
"His call on the international community is, as far as I am concerned, a joke because most governments ... still worth something are of the opinion that Zimbabwe is making a mess of the country's management."

nature of South African destabilization from 1981 to 1986 , such as the attacks on Inkomo arms dump in 1981, up to the recent car-bomb attack in Bulawayo."
The arrested agents had also disclosed how they obtained arms and were paid through South African banks, he said.

Mr Shamuyarira also cited the case of selfconfessed SA spy Odile Harrington, sentenced to 25 years' imprisonment last year for trying to infiltrate the ANC.
He said Pretoria should stand warned that it could not solve its internal problems through military adventures into Zimbabwe or other neighbouring frontline states.
Mr Shamuyarira's statement followed Sunday's warning by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr Pik Botha, who said the SA government would protect its interests if Zimbabwe failed to take Pretoria's security interests seriously.
The warning was issued after Harare authorities rejected as "a pack of lies" a diplo-matic- complaint. from Pretoria over a weekend rocket attack on a farm just inside South Africa's border with Zimbabwe.
Mr Shamuyarira said Zimbabwe believed the rocket attack was contrived to cover up South Arrica's own destabilization activities against Zimbabwe.
"How could anyone enter and leave an area protected by an electrified fence, guarded by a huge military base, thousands of bloodthirsty soldiers and armed civilian farmers?
"The statement of Pik Botha is an attempt to divert the attention of the world away from South Africa's acts of state terrorism and destabilization, including the recent bomb expiosion in Bulawayo," he said.
"Zimbabwe calls upon the entire international community to take note of the dangerous situation that is developing in our region and calls on all friendly and progressive nations to render military and material assistance to Zimbabwe and the frontline states," the statement said. - Sapa and Own.. Correspondent ter, Mr an Smith, dismissed as "absolutely ludicroup a claim by a Zimbabwean Minister last night that the West German politician, Dr FranzJosef Strauss, was paid by the Rhodesian governmont to act as its propagandist.

The Zimbabwean Foreign Minister, Dr Nathan Shamuyarira, said on television that he was able to disclose that Dr Strauss was paid "month by month" by the Smith regime to support its case in Europe.
Dr Shamuyarira, who criticised Dr Strauss for visiting South Africa, described the Bavarian leader as a right-wing reactionary who was confusing matters in southern Africa.
Mr Smith said from his. home that Dr Strauss had appreciated Rhodesia's attempt to stem the tide of communism. It was ludicrous to suggest he had been paid to express its views.

Sโ̣

 matic weapons on police stations.

 1selq 12ypoy
leave an area protected by an to have smashed a South Afrielectrified fence guarded by a; can network of saboteurs

Shamuyarira asked: attack a farmhouse early on Saturday morning, Dr Nathan Shamuyarira asked:

 'euemsiog pue gnbịquezoud
'ouposet pue eviny qinos Kq

 Shamuyarira said slast innight Wretoria's verbal attack indicated howsidesperate the situation Foreign Minister Mr Nathran

 HARARE - Zimbabwe has offiThe Star's Africa News Service. $c^{6}$ call $^{6}$ a $1 e^{9}$ claim is attack: SA's Cross-border

和

 2 ,

 Velvet 3

South Africa is offering Zimbabwe the velvet glove ... or the iron fist.

Senior Government sources said today South Africa stood ready to negotiate a peaceful settlement of its differences with Zimbabwe, as it did with any other country in the region.

But sentiment is also high in South African Government circles that if Zimbabwe wants a war it can have one.
Relations across the Limpopo have deteriorated in recent days CrOSS-bOrder $\begin{aligned} & \text { to the point that South Africa } \\ & \text { not warned Zimbabwe it will }\end{aligned}$ not tolerate any further crossborder guerilla raids without counter-attacking, and Zimbabwe has accused South Africa of running a sabotage network in its territory responsible for a seven-year campaign of bombings and assassination attempts.
The rhetoric from both sides is increasingly bellicose, and the South African military is certainly determined that the African National Congress will not be allowed to operate safely from Zimbabwe, or any other neighbouring state, even, if that means running the gauntlet of further sanctions because of South African cross-border strikes.

Wasteland

Government sources said today South Africa did not want to be responsible for an economic wasteland in the region.
It would be far better to cooperate with South Africa's neighbours, as in the case of recent projects agreed to jointly by South Africa and Lesotho, Mozambique and Botswana.
Zimbabwe claimed yesterday to have smashed a South African network of saboteurs operating in its territory.

Harare directly accused South Africa of involvement in the January 12 bombing of a Bulawayo house, in which a man died, and called on all "friendly and progressive nations" to give it and the Frontline states military aid and material assistance.
South African Foreign Minister Mr Pik Botha hit back immediately, accusing Zimbabwe of torture and saying its call to the international community was "a joke".

The claim was made by Zimbabwean Foreign Minister Mr Nathan Shamuyarira who also said the recent rocket attack on a Messina farmhouse was contrived by South Africa to cover up its destabilisation campaign.

Mr Botha said: "Some time or other that government will have to account to its own people. I hope that day comes earlier rather than later."

Mr Shamuyarira said statements from the "arrested agents" exposed the extensive nature of South African destabilisation.

- See Page 16.

Daily Dispatch Correspondent

SA sabotage ring

HARARE - Zimbabwe said yesterday it had smashed a South African sabotage network responsible for a sevenyear campaign of bomb. ings and assassination attempts.
A statementisisued by the Foreign Minister, Dr Nathan Shamuyarira, directly accused South Africa of a car bombing on January 12 against a house in Bulawayo, in which oneperson died.
Six men were re manded by magistrate last' Friday on murder and sabotage charges linked to the bombing and other attacks.
The statement followed a warning by the South African Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr Pik Botha, who said the government would protect its interests if Zimbabwe failed to take Pretoria's security interests seriously.

He warned Zimbabwe after the Harare authorities rejected a complaint over a rocket attack on a farm just inside South Africa's border with Zimbabwe at the weekend.
Dr Shamuyarira said Zimbabwe believed the attack was contrived to cover up South African destabilisation.

The statement of Mr Botha is an attempt to divert the attention of the world away from South Africa's acts of state terrorism and destabilisation, including the recent bomb explosion in Bulawayo."
He said Zimbabwean security forces had recently smashed "a network of South African Smashed $\frac{310}{210}$

saboteurs and ägents who were involved in acts of sabotage and attempted assassinations inside Zimbabwe.
"The network was based on farmers and other pro-Rhodesia elements in the Bulawayo and Fort Rixon area.
"Zimbabwe calls upon the international community to take note of the situation that is developing and calls on friendly and progressive nations to render military and material assistance to Zimbabwe."

Responding to Dr Shamuyarira's remarks, Mr Botha said last night: "I do not react to histrionic statements of this nature.
"His call on the international community is, as far as I am concerned, a joke because most governments of the world that are still worth something are of the opinion that Zimbabwe is making a mess of the country's management and economic planning and he ought to know this."-Sapa-RNS.

Editorial opinion P8

Tension brews over sabotage ring ${ }^{(3)}$ claim

HARARE - Tension is mounting between Pretoria and Harare after Zimbabwe's claim to have smashed a network of South African agents responsible for a seven-year campaign of bombings and assassinations.

Six. Zimbabweans have been remanded on charges of murder and causing explosions to await what is likely to be the country's most politically charged trial since independence.
Legal sources say the trial is likely to be delayed for months as the government has said it will call around 100 witnesses:
The accused have yet to hear the full charges against them and decide whether to plead guilty or not guilty.

For the moment, defence lawyers say they are co-operating with the investigation in the knowledge that they risk the death penalty, frequently applied here.
The six have supplied their interrogators with what one Zimbabwean official, who declined to be named, described as "an amazing amount of information".
Because of Zimbabwe's tight rules on pre-trial publicity, the government"has so far released little information on the case, seen here as highly embarrassing for South Africa.
The secrecy was broken on Monday by the Foreign Minister, Dr Nathan $\because$ Shamuyarira, prompted', Zimbabwean officials say, by a statement by his South African counterpart, Mr Pik Botha.
Mr Botha was angered by Zimbabwe's brusque rejection of South Africa's complaint to Harare about a rocket attack last Saturday on a farm near the border.
The Zimbabwean minister said he believed the incident was contrived, and officials here said they were suspicious of the speed with which Pretoria complained, a mere five hours after an attack it said took place around 3 am .

Dr Shamuyarira for the first time publicly accused South Africa of organising what he called "an extensive network of South African saboteurs and agents" who had given details of attacks dating back to 1981.

Mr Botha said he would not react to what he termed the "histrionic declarations" of the Zimbabwean minister.
Dr Shamuyarira blamed South Africa for carrying out the car bomb attack on January 12 on a house used by the African National Congress in Bulawayo.
His statement gave a grisly clue to the riddle of the identity of the person who died in the blast, and whose remains were scattered with the wreckage of the car around the garden of the isolated singlestorey villa, an ANC transit house.

Dr Shamuyarira said the South African agents hired a driver from the labour exchange, gave him the car loaded with explosives and asked him to drive it to the house where he was blown up.

Legal sources say the six detained men are also likely to be charged with responsibility for an earlier car bomb which exploded in a Ha. rare shopping centre cax park on October 13, injuring 18 people.

MR BOTHA
The most seriously injured victim was Mr Je remy Brickhill, a Zimbabwean linked to the ANC.
Dr Shamuyarira's statement linked the group to one of the earliest sabotage operations after Zimbabwe's independence - the destruction of tens of millions of dollars worth of arms and ammunition at Inkomo barracks, 30 km from Harare in August 1981.

Diplomats say that despite the tension, routine relations between South Africa and Zimbabwe, who are political foes, are likely to stay on an even keel.

Zimbabwe has no diplomatic relations with South Africa but is forced by economic reality to maintain trading and transport links with its biggest commercial partner.
After independence many white Zimbab ${ }^{2}$ weans, appalled by the arrival of the guerilla leader, Mr Robert Mugabe, at the head of a new government, threw in their lot with South Africa; moving "dōwn South" in local jargon.
Others, allegedly recruited by South Africa, stayed on.
A series of spy cases in the first years of independence mostly ended in anti-climax, and most of those arrested were either released for lack of evidence or escaped in time.
Some of the remaining 100000 whites now fear that a dramatic sabotage trial ending with death sentences for whites the first since indepen dence - will re-open racial wounds which have healed over the past eight years.

These fears are particularly strong in Bulawayo and the nearby ranching country of Ma tabeleland, the home area of the arrested men.

- The Pan Africanist Congress and the ANC denied yesterday that they crossed into South Africa to launch the rocket attack on a farmhouse near the South African/Zimbabwe border on Saturday. -SapaRNS

$\hat{0} \mathrm{SA}$ and Harare tense

HARARE - Tension is mounting be tween Pretoria and Harare after Zim babwe's claim to have smashed a network of SA agents responsible for a seven-year campaign of bombings and assassinations.

Six Zimbabwien white, have been remanded on charges of murder and causing explosions to await what is likely to be the country's most politically charged trial since independence.

Legal sources say the trial is likely to be delayed for months as the government has said it will call around 100 witnesses. The six accused have yet to hear the full charges against them and decide whether to plead guilty or not guility

For the moment, defence lawyers say, they are co-operating fully with the investigation in the knowledge that they risk the death penalty, frequenatly apy plied here.
The six have supplied their interrogators with what one Zimbabwean official described as "an amazing amount of information"
Because of Zimbabwe's tight rules on pre-trial publicity the government has so far released little information on the case, seen here as highly embarrassing for SA. - Sapa-Reuter.

By Gerald L'Ange,  The Star's Africa News Service

The growing tension between South Africa and Zimbabwe is cause for anxiety throughout southern Africa.
Confrontation between the two most powerful countries in the subcontinent, if carried to extremes, could badly hurt not only themselves but several other countries, especially Zambia, Malawi and Zaire.
Much of these countries' foreign trade is with South Africa or passes through the Republic's ports and transport system. It could be choked off by a closure of the Zimbabwe-South Africa border.
Zimbabwe itself is heavily dependent in the same way on South Africa, its major trading partner through which 90 percent of its overseas imports and exports pass.
And South Africa is vulnerable in that a border closure would threaten its trade not only with Zimbabwe but with countries to the north - a trade which forms the bulk of the Republic's R3 billion-a-year economic interchange with Africa as a whole Relations across the Limpopo have steadily been eroded over the past few years by Pretoria's allegations that Zimbabwe is sheltering African National Congress insurgents and Harare's allegations that South Africa is deliberately destabilising Zimbabwe.
The two issues have boiled up coincidentally in recent days: South Africa has claimed that insurgents who attacked a

Zimbabwe 5 SA: economic links, hold off clash ${ }^{3}{ }^{3}$ gho  farmhouse near Messina last week came from Zimbabwe; Zimbabwe has claimed to have uncovered a South African espionage network with the arrest of a number of whites in that country.

The resulting exchanges between the two countries' Foreign Ministers have reached a level of acrimony seldom seen in the past.
In response to South Africa's threat to "take the necessary action itself" if Zimbabwe failed to stop the cross-border insurgency, Harare dismissed as "a pack of lies" the allegation that the Messina attackers had come from Zimbabwe.

SECRET FACILITIES

If South Africa were to carry out its implied threat to attack perceived ANC targets inside Zimbabwe there is little doubt that the relatively powerful Zimbabwean security forces would resist vigorously and and a costly conflict could ensue.
South Africa might face a problem in identifying such targets, for the ANC would want to keep secret any facilities it might have in Zimbabwe, apart from its office in Harare - which has already been attacked and damaged by South African commandos.
Another alternative open to Pretoria is to strike at bridges or other elements of the Zimbabwean infrastructure as a way of coercing Harare to crack down on the ANC.
An even more indirect method perceived by some analysts is for Pretoria to use the Renamo insurgents in Mozambique to strike at Zimbabwe either by stepped-up attacks on the railway lines through Mozambique or by direct attacks on installations inside Zimbabwe.
A partial or total economic blockade is the best non-military option.
While South Africa sold Zimbabwe $\mathrm{Z} $ 275$ million (about R330 million) worth of goods in 1985 (18 percent of its total imports), the Republic also bought $Z $ 175$ million (about R210 million) of goods from Zimbabwe.
While this formed only a small percentage of South Africa's imports it represented 11 percent of Zimbabwe's total exports and about 60 percent of the manufactured goods (as distinct from raw materials and foodstuffs) exported by that country and made in factories employing about 30000 people.
ie c.unp sure ub pue niomd u! yerine Crepigin:

 sisonbar si! dn 8u!yoeq jo plovar ie sey eolifv yinos urZ wpij 'sioxpeile aqi unop yoen oi gutyelsopin

 Lu Previous verbal attacks and threats against

 (a)

HARARE--Six Zimbabweans may have:o wait months, jefore they are tried on charges of murder and causing explosions.

Legal sources say the government has indicated it will call about 100 witnesses in the trial which is expected to be the country's most politically charged since independence
4 heysard the six deta charged with an earlier men arealso likely to be Harare shopping centrer car bomb explosion in a were injured on October 13
Secrecy surrounding the trial was broken on Monday by Foreign Minister Dr Nathan Shámuyarira prompted; Zimbabean officials say, by a statement by his South African counterpart Mr Pik Botha: - Mr Shamuyarira, for the first time, publicly accused Pretoria of organising what he called an ex tensiye network of South African saboteurs and agents" who had given details of attacks dating back to 1981 . He blamed Pretoria for the masive car bomb attack on January 12 on a house used by the ANC in Bulawayo.
For the moment, defence lawyers say the six are co-operating fully in the investigation in the know ledge that they risk the death penalty A Zimbabwean official who declined to be named, said the six had stuppled danamazing amount of information"

Because of Zimbabwe's tight rules on pre-trial publicity the government has so far released little infor mation on the case, seen here as highly embarrassing for South Africa.
Mricotha, wo was angered by zimbabwe s brusque rejection of South Africa's complaint to Harare about a farm rocket attack on Saturday, be came involyed in an exchange of words with Zimbabwe which led to Mr Shamuyarira's remarks. The Zimbabwean Minister said he believed the incident was contrived.
The Pan Africanist Congress and the African National Congress hayedenied crossing into So the frica to launch the rocket at ack, zimbabues national news agency Ziana, reports: Reuters HARARE - African artists a nd. intellectuals will hold a conference in Zimbabwe next month and stage an open-air concert to highlight the plight of children in Southern Africa, "the organisers said.

"The group of communicators who will gather in Harare will be expressing solidarity with the suffering children and parents inside South Africa, in the frontline states sand in Southern Africa in general," Zimbabwe's minister of state for political affairs Naomi Nhiwatiwa told a news conference on Tuesday.
The March 1-5 convention, organised by the United Nations Children's Fund Development, follows a meeting in the Senegalese capital Dakar last March by 50 musicians, playwrights, film-makers, academics and journalists who reviewed the state of the African child.
The Harare symposium is expected to draw 150 participants, including musicians Harry Belafonte, Miriam Makeba and Hugh Masekéla, both exiled South Africans, Nigerian author Chinua Achebe and South African antiapartheid churchman Allan Boesak.
Zimbabwe's first lady, Sally. Mugabe, charlady of the Zimbabwe Child Survival and Development Committee, and Graca Machel, widow of Mozambique's first president Samora conference.

[^1]

E

$\qquad$

$\qquad$

$8m Harare phy prain  HARARE - A British will, Clufr Oil Holding oil and mining group announced plans yesterday to invest $$ 8,2$ million US in two low grade gold mines in Zimbabwe. In the first major for eign investment of its Gomwe, said. will import technology developed in Australia capable of refining low. grade ore, the financial controller for the company here;:Mr :Godfrey Goit prices.mHARARE - A man wanted by the Zimbabwe police in connection with the bombing of an African National Congress house in Bulawayo last month and now said to be in South Africa has been named in court as Christopher John Bawden. $19 / 2188$

A Bulawayo court on Wednesday heard he was a fugitive being sought. on treason charges which sonnetuñ" Mr van der Merwe's lawyer said his client was acting only as a "good Samaritan" when "he agreed to look after the weapon and the money.

He was an innocent victim, said the lawyer.

Mr van der Merwe, who was detained for 10 days, was fined R110 for contravening the Firearms Act.
Bawden travelled across the border with a man $_{\text {n }}$ named in court as Williams.
It is understood that he wassdetained for interrogation earlier this month but has since been released.

Zimbabwe's Foreign Minister, Dr Nathan Shamuyarira, said this week that an extensive network of South African agents and saboteurshad been smashed.
included the attack on the house occupied by ANC members:
Five other whites including Barry Bawden and Guy Bawden have, already appeared in court accused of being members of a South African sabotage ring and are being held in custody.

Mr Christopher (Kit) Bawden's name came up when a Beitbridge garage owner, Mr Nicholas Johannes van der Merwe, pleaded guilty to contravening , the Firearms Act.

He admitted being found in possession of a revolvér and a firearms certificate in Bawden's name : Bawden had left the gun and R7000 with him on January 14, saying he was going across the border to South Africa and that the police had refusied to store the weapon.

The Bulawayo house was blown up on the night of January:11.
was an $18 \%$ decline in the value of farm output."
The main casualties were maize - down $80 \%$ in volume at only 400000 t - and tobacco, where realisations fell $22 \%$ to $$ 278 \mathrm{~m}$. Prospects for an improvement this year hinge heavily on rainfall conditions in late February and March. In mid-February, most rainfall-recording stations showed be-low-average rains. Thus hopes of a bumper maize crop have dissipated.

Grain industry sources believe the country's commercial growers will deliver no more than 300000 t -a modest increase on last year's drought-affected 250000 t - but there are still hopes in government circles for a much-improved communal crop harvest.

Communal (peasant) growers delivered only 150000 t of maize last year and industry sources say the best to be hoped for in

ZIMBABWE Watching the skies

Zimbabwe needs another two months of good rains - lasting until mid-April - if the most optimistic harvest forecasts are to be realised.

After a very late start to the season - in many cropping areas, rain started only in mid-December - farmers say the rains must continue until late April, which would be abnormal. Last year, crop sales declined more than $23 \%$ to $Z $ 950 \mathrm{~m}$, but this was partially offset by a $34 \%$ jump in livestock realisations, primarily beef. The end result |  | FINANCIAL MAIL FEBRUARY $19 ` 1988$ |
| :--- | :--- |

1988 is about 450000 t . This would give total deliveries from both large and smallscale growers of a maximum of 750000 t .
With annual consumption running close to 1 Mt , this implies a further reduction in the maize stockpile - estimated at 700000 t and no maize exports in 1988/1989. Furthermore, if February and March are dry months, Zimbabwe could find itself having to import maize early in 1989, though at this juncture it seems unlikely.
The tobacco industry is forecasting a smaller crop than last year's 130 mkg but one of higher quality. Tobacco prices plunged $30 \%$ to $217 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$ last year, mainly because of the poor-quality, drought-affected leaf. The weather has been kinder to growers this year and a high-quality crop of 115 m kg is envisaged - provided rains last until mid-March.

There is much speculation and disagreement over the likely level of prices on the auction floors when they open in April, but if the weather remains relatively favourable, growers believe a price of $300 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$ is possibile. This would be lower than the record 313c earned in 1986 but a substantial itprovement on last year's dismal performance.
The value of agricultural production decline $$ 300 \mathrm{~m}$ last year, and it looks increasingle unlikely that all of this will be recouped in 1988. Higher maize and tobacco realisatons could bring in $$ 140 \mathrm{~m}$ and increased revenues from sugar, cotton, horticulture and soyas should push the revenue gain well above $$ 200 \mathrm{~m}$.
But it looks as though the industry will have to wait until 1989 at least to regain its, 1986 levels.

 areonpa pue＇sisoo jeotpour parnsu！ －un Ked of sure ubitedures ןeวh aqL．

 jo Suiquioq a $\ddagger$ SEM Snounou 15OW

 －Miv qinos 10j моiq roleur e aq IITM OZ 7noqe uory x！s－dnois 2पl II －qns uejufv qnos iofeur e st sumper

 S！วप วnว！faq sianjosqo Kuein them that it is South Africa and its

‘N甘W77ヨM \＆ヨLヨd Kg

 SUUITOIA quOQ

HARARE - Zimbabwe claims to have smashed an extensive network of SA saboteurs and'assassins, but a spectacular series of trials planned for later this year may turn out to be "Hamlet without the Prince".
Bulawayo magistrate Preece Knomo was told on Wednesday that a key figure sought by the Central Intelligence Organisation (CIO) - Christopher John Bawden - had escaped to SA on January ${ }^{2} 4$
Prosecutor Phillip Mandongwe said Bawden was wanted to stand trial on the capital charge of treason, after the bombing of an ANC house in Bulawayo on January 11.
Two members of Bawden's family - Barry Desmond Bawden and Guy Thomas Bawden - are among a group of six men who have been remanded in custody in Harare, on charges of murder and contravening the Law and Order Maintenance Act.

The Bawdens are a prominent farming family from the ShanganiFort Rixon area east of Bulawayo.

All six of the accused have report${ }_{4}$ edly made statements to the police implicating themselves in five attacks on the ANC.
It has not been confirmed whether their case is connected with the detention, since last September, of six other whites on suspicion of spying for Pretoria.
A government-appointed secret tribunal has recommended the unconditional release of one of them, Squadron-Leader Jack Lewis-Walker, but President Robert Mugabe has issued an order overriding this.

Lewis-Walker, a senior public servant since his retirement from the air force, continues to be held with Richard Laban, a Canadian, Geoffrey Mee, an Irish national, Patricia Brown, who holds a British passport, Ivor Harding, a Zimbabwean post office security officer and Harding's son Clive.
The detainees' review tribunal has ruled reasonable grounds exist for continuing to hold Mee and Laban, but has yet to examine the cases of the other three.
Many of the statements allegedly, made to police by the "Bulawayo Six" are said to lead back to former Rhodesian Security Police Chief Superintendent Geoffrey Price, now allegedly employed by: the SA security services.
Price's name emerged again last November in the trial of 27 -year-old Odile Harington, gaoled for 25 years for an attempt to infiltrate the ANC.
 HARARE $A$ man wanted by the Zimbabwe Po lice in connection with the bombing of an ANC house in Bulawayo last month and now said to be in South Africa was namedin cout yesterday as Christopher John Bawden
A Bulawayo court heard he was a fugitive being sought on treason charges which included the at tack on the house occupied by ANC members.
Five other whites, including Mr Barry Bawden and Mr Guy Bäwden, have already sappeared in courtaccused of being members of a South African sabotagering and are being held in custody.
Mr Christopher (Kit)'Bawden's name came up when a Beit Bridge garage owner, Nicholas Johannes van der Merwe, pleaded guilty to contravening the Firearms Act.
He admitted being found in possession of a revolver and a firearms certificate in Mr Bawden's name Mr Bawdel had left the gun and R7000 with him on January 14 , saying he was going across the border to South Africa and that the police had refused to store the weapon.
The Bulawayo house was blown up on the night of January 11 .
Vánder Merwe's lawyer said his client was acting onlyas a "Good Samaritan", when he agreed to look after the weaponand the money:
4 He was an innocent victim of the outrageous acts perpetrated by agents, said the lawyer.
Van der"Merwe, who was detained for 10 days was fined Rl10 for contravention of the Firearms Act.
Mr Bawden travelled across the border with a man named in court as Williams, It is understood he was detained for questioning earlier this month but has since been released.

|  |  |
| :---: | :---: |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |

HARARE - Mr Tiny Rowlands controversial multi-national corporatín, Lonrho, opened do nations yesterday to a Zimbabbean fund aimed tikcompensating victims f South African "desta bilization" attacks with a R2 300 cheque.
Mr KA Mills a local executive of the corporation, which has frequent ly been lambasted by black Africa's politica chiefs for alleged" "neocolonialist" "ambitions" presented the money to the patron of the "Heal the Wounds"' campaign, Mr Didynus Mutása, on the grounds of a block of flats devastated by a bomb blast last May, Officials said R54000 was needed to repair damage caused to Earls damage cause an bomb Court when the flat of a Zimbabwean woman, who was: killed, and her husband, anANC adminhusbana, afficial istrative official. , tid Thee officials sadd R1 16 to help victims of three bombings blamed three bombings: on South Africa.

SAs long guns put pressure on Angolans

Whay JOAO SANTA RITA

 bifg if Africa News Service万JOHANNESBURG. - South African troops were this aweek involved in a major bata tle around the ghost town of CCuito Cuanavale as thousands wofeAngolan government $\because$ troops tried to ease the pres$\therefore$ sure of the long-range G-5 and $G$-6 guns which have al$\rightarrow$ most destroyed the strategic mantilary post.© $1, \cdots$ Dozens, if not hundreds, of soldiers have died since last 1.year in the battle around the e town, but informed sources dsaid this week the irony was fs that neither South Africa nor Whe rebel movement Unita i, , want to occupy it nis...The sources said that three wor'possibly four Angolan parmy brigades, each with 1 about 1500 men, were fighthing with their backs to the Cuito River facing South Afri*ca's long fange artillery and

w. "边, "Ghost town"

W"uThe Unita and South African positions are about $20 \mathrm{ki}-$ lometres from the Angolan defensive positions and from ${ }^{5}$ there they can easily shell Cuito Cuanavale with their G Cuito Cuanavale with their Gsaid. ${ }^{2}$
${ }^{1}$ "Cuito"'Cuanavale is now a ghost town and no one lives "there:"
$\therefore$ The; Angolan and Cuban command for the sixth military region, which includes Cuito cuanavale, was withdrawn't to a position about 20 km to the north on the road between the town and the important"military town of Menongue
The soprces saidit seemed that Angolans goveriment Eroops had tried to pushthe South African and 9 Unita' ${ }^{\text {ºs }}$ osi-tions. farther east.
"IIf they can push them eastwards then Cuito Cuanavale will be out of range of G the guns,", they said.
$8^{\prime \prime}$.The sources said it was wrong to assume that South Africa and Unita wanted to take Cuito Cuanvale.

Pretoria and Jonas Savimbi's Unita rebels were inter"ested in keeping the town as ) "an abcess" to draw Angolan troops from other parts of the country.
"The strategic interest lies to the north along the Benguela railway and it is there that within the next few weeks there could be major developments," they said.
On Monday the Chief of the South African Defence Force, General Jannie Geldenhuys, said Unita had achieved "resounding successes".
On Wednesday Unita said it had killed 92 Angolan government troops and 17 Cubans in a 10-hour battle near Cuito Cuanavale.
Angola's government also reported fierce fighting in the area this week, saying that both sides had heavy casualties.
Angola said on Thursday it had driven back a big South African offensive near Cuito Cuanavale in a four-day bat. tle.

More than "70 South African soldiers were killéd, two planes were shot down and more than 20 tanks and armoured vehicles were demoured vehicles. were destroyed in the fighting," the Angolan Defence Ministry said in a communiqué carried by the news agency Angop.
Giving rare details of its own casualties, the ministry said 25 government soldiers had been killed and five tanks destroyed before 7000 South African troops were repulsed.

Fresh fighting

The offensive, which began on Sunday was over but Pre toria was putting in more reinforcements and fresh fighting could be expected, said Angop in a report monitored in Lisbon.

- In December General Geldenhuys said that South Africa was withdrawing its troops from Angola in a manner tak- ${ }^{-}$ ing into account "operational circumstances",
This week he said the withdrawal was taking ionger than expected and added that operational advantages announced last year could not be sacrificed.
He warned that to protect these advantages it was necessary to take "limited offen sive action by the Defence Force from time to time to safeguard the operational advantages".
by GERALD L'ANGE - Argus Africa News Service JOHANNESBURG: - The an gry flare-up in the war of words across South Africa's borders in the past week indicates a significant hardening in Pretoria's attitude to the frontline states.

Foreign Minister Pik Botha's unusually sharp reaction to government rhetoric from Harare and Maputo suggests that Pretoria is losing patience with its unfriendly neighbours.
A skunk it might be in the eyes of the rest of the world but in its own eyes South Africa is a regional power and it clearly is determined to act like one.
It is partly in this capacity that South Africa is sending its troops to fight in Angola currently in the action around the strategic town of Cuito Cuanavale, in which the deaths of four SADF soldiers were announced this week.

And it is partly in its role of regional power that Pretoria has taken an increasingly nononsense stand towards the frontline states.
The harsh exchanges with Zimbabwe and Mozambique indicate a sharp deterioration in relations with South Africa, alrelations with South Africa, although it 'remains to be seen whether this will persist.
But the exchanges seem to signal a South African attitude that is becoming increasingly hard-nosed.
Thus when South Africa protested to Zimbabwe after ANC insurgents, allegedly from Zimbabwe, attacked a farmhouse babwe, attacked a farmhouse near Messina on February 13 and Harare's Information Minister dismissed the allegation as "a pack of lies" Mr Botha responded strongly.

Offhandedness

South Africa will not tolerate continued offhandedness on matters which profoundly affect the security of South Afrifect the security of South Arrca, he said. ca," he said.
He warned that in future the Republic:"could be forced to By h his he cleary meant steps against ANC insurgents seen to be operating from Zimbabwe. It was strong language. by any diplomatic measure.
Through the system of verbal semaphore that is understood in capitals around the world, Zimbabwe has clearly got the message: Next time we may - and almost certainly will - strike back across the border.

Pretoria has since made it clear that while it wants harmonious relations with Zimbabwe and all its neighbours it will not shrink from hostilities against them if they invite ac tion.
Mozambique received equally short shrift a few days later when President Joaquim Chissano rejected the offer of a iregional conference by President Botha, saying there could be no such summit until there had been changes in the Republic's policies.
"The South African Govern-" ment has had enough of this hypocrisy," Foreign Minister Botha stormed, and virtually withdrew the offer of a regional conference as far as Mozam. bique was concerned.
He said there was no point to such a meeting until Mozambique itself made changes within its own borders.
He obliquely pointed to the fact that the Frelimo government has never held a fullydemocratic election and is unable to defeat the insurgent movement that is fighting a war to force it to respect democracy.
Saying that Maputo had privately contradicted its public clairn that the Republic was the biggest backer of the Ren- ? amo rebels, Mr Botha warned that South Africa would in future "expose Mozambique's hypocrisy at every opportunity".
He thus appears to have told Maputo that the diplomatic gloves are now off and Pretoria will no longer keep a discreet silence when it thinks the Frelimo government is doubledealing.

Get respect

Mr Botha's outburst ignored the fact that the situation he slammed in Mozambique had existed when the offer of a regional conference was first made - and nothing had changed except that President changed except that President in South Africe before the offor in South Africa before the offer could be accepted.
What clearly angered Pretoria was Mozambique's refusal to accept Pretoria's policy of gradual reform and meanwhile negotiate regional-issues of common concern. ", "nt Mozambüquë, like Zimbabwe, has refused to treat South-Afri' ca as the regional powernit obviously is. Pretoria does not like it and obviously has decided that if it cannot get negotiation it will at least get some srespect.
will does not mean that it will give up its efforts to improve relations with its neighbours. But it is doing so primarily as the regional power, a concept that is held not only by the politicians in Pretoria but also by the military leaders who influence their decisions.

It is as the regional power that South Africa is appion ing the issue of settlement SWA/Namibia and Angola and it is possibly encouraged this approach by what it 5 :: as the increasing irrelevance the United States in this part ular issue and in Southern Afi ca in general.
For more than six mon: South African forces have :engaged in fighting in At: on a scale unprecedented sin their first brief invasion an withdrawal in 1976
The announcement of $:$ : death of the four soldiers in ': Cuito Cuanavale action mis after Angolan claims th South African troops have been fighting alongside the ${ }^{-}$ ita rebels to deny ḡvenim... forces the use of the town its strategic air base.

SADF chief General : Geldenhuys has insisted South African troops are wii drawing from Angola but der "operational" circu" stances - ensuring that in ${ }^{+1}$ process Unitas lose none of advantages gained in the r cent fighting.
The South African inioviv ment in the Cuito Cuana: battle may have been suit: tial and certainly has been fective, with the ultra-1.:range G5 guns apparent playing a decisive role.
The objective seems to be prevent the Cuban and Su: backed MPLA forces fin launching another offeñsi: against Unita this year and increase the pressure on t. MPLA to negotiate a sety? ment with Unita.

a401 ：गur
if they invite ac－家的 received equal－ a few daysis later ait Joaquim？Chis－ the offer－ofiatire－ enée by President there could beno ：until there had in the Republic＇s

＇African Govern： ${ }^{-}$enough ofxthis Foreign：Minister $=2$ ，and virtually offer of a region－ as far as Mozam asmand． was no point to iīp until Mozam raute changes with－ Oders．an bstars vopinted to the Frelimo govern－ Fir held a fully－： sotion and is un－合 the insurgent that is fighting a it to respect de－

$\because$ Maputo had pri－： cantivited its public the Republic was backer of the Ren－ MreBotha warned Africa would in fu－ ：Mozambique＇s hy． －$y_{3}$ ，opportunity＂．
－ize to have told to the diplomatic now off and Pre－ longer keep a dis－ when it thinks＇the wiment is double－ Th，
－respect －outburst ignored
thetsituation he Mozambique had ＇the offer of a re－ forence：was first and nothing had $=$ nat President $\rightarrow$ demanded reform ：－before the offer mathas

－$y$ angered Pre－

 $\because$ Pretoria＇s policy reform and mean－ ＂ataregionah－issues a mike zimbabwe， －to treat；Southinafri－ Ejinial poweyit ob－ obviously has＂decid cannotigetinegotia－ Lytheast thet，spme ins with its 50 in in regional so pring is held regional poweri－ is held not in in ＂in Pretoria but initary leaders
ncir decisio

that South Africa is approach－ ing the issue of settlement．in SWA／Namibia and Angola and it is possibly encouraged in this approach by what it sees as the increasing irrelevance of the United States in this partic－ ular issue and in Southern Afri－ ca in general．
For more than six months South African forces have been engaged in fighting in Angola on a scale unprecedented since their first brief invasion and withdrawal in 1976.
The announcement of the death of the four soldiers in the Cuito Cuanavale action comes after Angolan claims that South African troops have long been fighting alongside the Un－ ita rebels to deny government forces the use of the town and its strategic air base．
SADF chief General Jannie Geldenhuys has insisted thal South African troops are with－ drawing from Angola but un－ der＂operational＂circum－ stances－ensuring that in the process Unitas lose none of the advantages gained in the re－ cent fighting．
The South African inyolve－ ment in the Cuito Cuanavale battle may have been substan－ tial and certainly has been ef－ fective，with the ultra－long－ range G5 guns apparently playing a decisive role．
Whe objective seems to be to prevent the Cuban and Soviet－ backed MPLA forces from launching another offensive against Unita this year and to increase the pressure on the MPLA to negotiate a settle－ ment with Unita． nentan
by DAVID BRAUN
Weekend Argus Political Staff： MESSINA．－The South Afri－ can Government yesterday shook a clenched fist at the Af－ rican National Congress and the frontline states，saying： ＂Enough is enough，＇next time we send in our troops＂．
The Minister of Defence， General Magnus Malan，and the Minister of Foreign Affairs， Mr Pik Botha，were reacting to last week＇s rocket attack on a farmhouse on the banks of the Limpopo river，and to yester－ day＇s attack on First National Bank at Oshakati．
Mr Pik Botha effectively de－ clared that South Africa＇s re－ gional detente policy was dead．

And General Malan vowed to ＂eliminate＂the ANC wherever it might be．

Follow－up

The next time terrorists crossed the border South Afri－ ca would take follow－up action， he said．
The Ministers were speaking on the swollen banks of the Limpopo at the scene of the at－ tack on a farmhouse outside Messina．

They were accompanied by General Georg Meiring，Officer Commanding Northern Trans－ vaal Command，farmers and a group of political and military correspondents．

They inspected the scene of the attack and walked to the river to look across the border at Zimbabwe．

News of the Oshakati attack reached them while they were there．

General Malan said that he and Mr Botha had come for the sake of the South African peo－ ple．More than the lives of the farmers was at stake，he said．
＂We are not against Zimba－ bwe as such．But I have made a＂public statement that wher－ ever the ANC may be in Africa we will do the necessary．
＂I＇m afraid we＇ll have to think in terms of crossing the river next time，and not with－ holding our troops，＂he said．

Given chance

Mr Botha said it was impor－ tant to point out that Zimba－ bwe had been given a chance． South Africa had urged Zimba－ bwe to try to find those respon－ sible for the rocket attack．
The response had been that South Africa was telling a pack of lies，and the whole matter had been treated as a joke，Mr Botha said．
＂The SA Government has now had enough of this．We have just had enough ．＂

Mr Botha said later there should be no mistake about the Government＇s feelings towards South Africa＇s neighbours．
＂We have repeatedly invited them to talk to us to sort out our problems in peace．Now they have demonstrated that they are not interested．They think we are going to lean over backwards until we fall over，＂ he said．
＂As far as I＇m concerned there＇ll be no more talk of a re－ gional conference，not from our side．It＇s up to them to take the initiative：＇
＂We are no longer interested in the neighbouring states．We are going to get on with our own business and stabilise our situation－and we will suc－ ceed．＂

＂No peace＂

Earlier Mr Botha said there would not be peace and pros－ perity in Southern Africa while there was violence such as the rocket attack and the Oshakati incident．
He said：＂We will have to act against the violence，even if it means more boycotts and sanc－ tions．
＂If we have more boycotts and sanctions，which we do not want，it will hurt our economy and delay our economic recov－ ery．But to give in to pressure of this kind（of violence），means the whole of Southern Africa will be governed by violence，＂ he said． Mr Botha and General Malan made direct appeals to the or－ made direct appeals to the or－ dinary people of Zimbabwe to resist terrorists using their ter－ resist terrorists using their ter－ ritory to cross into South Afri－ ca． Mr Botha said it was in these
Mr Botha said it was in these people＇s interests to stop such terrorists or they would have to pay the price．
General Malan said he had nothing against the people of Zimbabwe． ＂But there is one thing I will do，＂he said．＂Wherever the ANC is we will eliminate it．If Zimbabweans find themselves in between then I feel very sor－ ry for them．＂
General Maian said he would investigate extending the boun－ ty system，whereby rewards could also be paid to Zimbab－ weans for information which led to the capture of terrorists． x resist terrorists using their ter－ to pay the price． P
$\qquad$

$\qquad$

Abstract

$\square$

$\square$ babwe court.

Is claimed all were involved in a number of the 'dirty tricks" of the sevenyear war that ended white year war that end minority rule.
ts
he four are allegedly now based in Pretoria, working THATC: に細

 The SADF yesterday said it was not prepared to be drawn into a trial by pubic innuendo.

HANGING

A spokesman added that the SADF believed the sub judice rules in all such cases should be respected.
Meanwhile, two of the five whites detained in connection with bombings in Harare and Builawayo were warned this week by legal advisers that they could hang if found guilty of treason charges.
They are Mr Michael Smith, a former permanent force member of an elite Rhodesian regiment, and Mr:Kevin Woods, whio worked until a year ago in the Central Intelligence Organisation.
If condemned to die they would be the first whites in either Rhodesia or Zimbabwe to be executed for political offences.

HOSTAGES

A black Zimbabwean, has also been charged with in: volvement in the bombings.
If the six are found guilty; all acts of sabotage almed at the ANC since 1982 will be accounted for. so in detention in : Zimbabwe is Mr John Bawden, 70 -year-old father of alleged South African agent Mr Christopher "Kit" Bawden.
His youngest son, Gregory, his brother Desmond, 65, and nephew, Tommy, have also been detained
They are allegedly being held in police custody as hos tages for the return to Zimbabwe of Kit Bawden.
Friends of the family fear they will be held indefinitely under the emergency powers.

WANTED

Legal sources confirm that efforts are being made to secure the release of the four.
Bulawayo magistrate Mr Preece Nkomo heard last week that Kit Bawden, 35, who works in Johannes burg but holds a Zimbab wean passport, was wanted to stand trial here on a capital charge of treason.
It arose from a seven-year serles of sabotage incidents culminating in the January 11 bomb blast at a Bulawayo housé, ocic pied by ANC members.
On January 14 Mr Bawden, a former soldier in the Rhodesian army, crossed back into SA through the Beit Bridge border post:
The Zimbabwean who gave him a lift Mr Richard Howard Willams has been detained since re turning home:

Zimbabwe's unions warned  HARARE - Zimbabwe Minister of Labour, Manpower Planning and Social Welfare, Mr John Nkomo, said this :week that the government and party may have to intervene in the labour movement to ensure effective leadership; the national news agency Ziana reports. (52) sin 292188 Opening a seminar of the Furniture and Cabinet Makers Union here, the Minister expressed concern that there were problems within the labour movement and said he had called the  ZCTU leadership to a meeting last week to voice his dissatisfaction.  In a speech read on hisisbehalf by a ministry official, Mr Nkomo said: "Time is fast approaching when government and party may have to intervene to ensure that only the most dedicated unionists with proven records are elected to lead the unions?  "The trade union's strength lies in your ability to run your affairs in a human-like manner in the interests of the workers," the Minister said. Sapa.

HARARE - The Vim-babwe Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU)
yesterday launched the first phase of a series of economictseminars to educate senior trade unionists on the econom and make them effective proponents for social change.
ZCTU vice president Jerry Jaricha opened the two-day seminar emphasising that the economics seminar laid the fourdation for effective participation of workers in the economy from an informed positon.
"The challenge is on the labour movement to come up with an alternative socioeconomic development strategy.
"To date, employers have articulated and, indeed, espoused their liberalisation model to which we must come up with alternatives," Jaricha said.
In a 50-page research document review-

Economics for trade unionistsing the economy, the ZCTU said the real problem "has been the attempt to find solutions to the woes of the economy by further acknowledging and servicing the very system we seek to transform".

This is an apparent criticism of the government measures to correct the adverse economic position which has seen the country failing to achieve the targeted $5,1 \%$ growth during the current five-year national development plan.

The ZCTU says the economy flagged during the past year "throwing out of balane the projected $2,7 \%$ annual growth in employment". - Spa. and a black, alleged by the state to be South African agents engaged in bombing establishments occupied by members of the ANC in Zimbabwe, appeared briefly in the magistrates' court here yesterday.
They were not asked to plead and were remanded to March 25.
The state alleges that all six, acting in concert, planted bombs and attacked five ANC establishments in Zimbabwe, one in Bulawayo where a person was killed on January 11.
The accused are: Kevin John Woods, 35, Bulawayo, Michael Anthony Smith, 34, of Balwearie Estates, Chakari, Barry Desmond Bawden, 30. of Kopje Ranch, Shangani, Phillip Masiza Conjwayo, 54, of Harare, Rory Burt Maguire, 37, Bulawayo, and Guy Thomas Bawden, 32, of Harare. - Sapa

Sabotage

6 appear. HARARE - Six meat alleged to bemembers of a South African sabotage ring tappeared briefly in court hered for further remand ${ }^{2}$ 網hile preparations continue for their trial.
The fine five whites and a bläder inan - were remandedsumastody for a monthsured
The State tham they planted abombs: and attacked $A N C$ premises in Harafe:andBulawayo. At the brief court hearing inetu. Mr Rory Maguite 2 Mr Kevin Woods, Mr Michael Smith, Mr Guy Bawden, Mr Desmond Bawden and Mr Philip Conjwayo.

|  |  7SEI paserjox seas 7IOлоро0M －әІІеиер лем       07 Səपsṭ＇ләләмоч＂HGVS әपL＂，  －u！ti eqesurduos of рачร！̣ Kโұшenbosuos pue quase $57!$ se u！！popresox suVS әq？әsneoәq   | －pądasse   seas qunoure ue sumiguoo haVs       －पо八 Sur peq 7ुолэpoom II poysv ．  retqiuren u！   әsqqequila ui fou sen fyosppoom      Oty pied u | ךечя p！es әaqequil ui sommos $7 е 47$ pəzıodәa osie dəded aчు          ＇əm子ледәр         |    ＇stsịinot se Su！peienbsew＇siopiex VS aqf אq paqoroudde uəəq pey 7fodopoom $7 \times 47$ poljodad seal 71 ＇əコexeH u！sixupptinq ssoifuoう       －poom pies ounq！id Kepuns әuL   SLOq！ग！ios uopuot to witf e 8uices |  ue －pooh pxeqjit pịes suaded aq̌  －s．jədedsмəu чеәм  －qequiz［ejənәs pue дәdedsməи          pịes ueusəyods әכגоя әouәjəa   sem＇әлexeh vo piea VS ue suipie     pịed Kipefiodea＇ueusseuisnq   |
| :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: |
|  | $\operatorname{mop} \operatorname{coc}$ | $881 e 1 b^{c}$ |  |  |  |

Pik Botha tells SA spy's mother not to tall to press

THE mother of convicted South African 'spy Odile Harington disclosed yesterday that she had been ordered by Mr Pik Botha, Minister of Foreign Affairs, not to discuss details of her visit to her imprisoned daughter early last week with the media
Mrs Eone de Wet told the Cape Times she had received a letter signed by Mr Pik Botha which stated that "any releases to the media will be handled by me or my department". Mrs De Wet, a well-known Johannesburg artist, visited her daughter in Harare's Chikurubi Jail last Monday. The 27-year-old Odile was convicted of spying on the ANC and sentenced to 25 years' 'imprisonment, .
Mrs De Wet-said she was happy to talk to the Cape Times'about the visit, but only if the newspaper could obtain permission from Foreign Affairs. "I am muzzled," she said.
A Foreign Affairs spokesman said yesterday that the department had to be approached officially today if the Cape Times wished to conduct an interview with Mrs De Wet.
"I assume that the minister will be interested in the trend of the interview. He might want to know how deeply political the questions will be," the spokesman said.

Mrs De Wet said some general details regarding the visit to her daughter were published in an Afrikaans Sunday newspaper after the report had been submitted to Foreign Affairs for clearance.

Odile appeared in good health.
She asked her mother for earplugs, aying the prison was very noisy.
Odile shared a cell with other women and asked her mother for books so she could study an African language:
$\qquad$

\%

 would not be tolerated.

 NOT TOLERATED

OInt.IO

HARARE-A Zimbabwean Supreme Court judge has granted self-confessed South African spy Odile Harington leave to appeal against the controversial 25 year jail sentence imposed on her last November.

Lawers sacting for the 27 year old arts graduate, who bungled an attempt to infiltrate the ranks of African National Congress here, yesterday confirmed that Mr Justice Alan Gubbay had reversed the appeal by an order given in chambers.

At her trial, Mr Justice Wilson Sandura imposed the maximum possible sentence on her under Zimbabwe's' Official Secrets Act, rejecting pleas for for clemenave, on the counsel, Mr Julian was "not a mata hari, but;:someone who is pathetically naive". 熵

Mr Colegrave also asked for the court to aceept in mitigation that she sufferedutorture, including sexual assault, while under intral intelligence the Zimbabyean central intelligence organisation.

Passing sentence, Mr Justice Sandura regretted his inability to sentence her to death.
The mastermind behind Odile Ha-, rington's totally abortive mission was mer chief superintendent in the Rhodesian police, now employed by the South curity branch.

Mr Price's name heen linked to the numbers of whites foltained an explosion on January wayo ANC house.

The head of the South African trade mission here, Mr Johann Viljoen, was unable to confirm persistchanged for Marion Sparg and Helene Passtoors, currently serving lengthy sentence in South African prisons for aiding the ANC.
It is not known when the supreme Court will hear Miss Harington's ap-peal-against sentence and conviction. A delay of up to a year may be expected. Her lawyers, are likely to plead that her activities caused no prejudice to the governc

Own Correspondent

HARARE. - A Zimbabwean Supreme Court judge has granted self-confessed South African spy Odile Harington leave to appeal against the controversial 25 -year jail sentence imposed on her last November.

Lawyers acting for the 27-yearold arts graduate, who bungled an attempt to infiltrate the ranks of ANC guerillas, yesterday confirmed that Mr Justice Alan Gubbay had reversed the High Court's refusal of leave to appeal by an order given in Chambers.

At her trial, Mr Justice Wilson Sandura imposed the maximum possible sentence on her under Zimbabwe's Official Secrets Act, rejecting pleas for clemency by her counsel, Mr Julian Colegrave, on the grounds that she was "not a Mata Hari, but someone who is pathetically naïve".
Mr Colegrave also asked for the court to accept in mitigation that she suffered torture, including sexual assault, while under interrogation by the Zimbabwean Cen tral Intelligence Organization.

Firing squad

Passing sentence, Mr Justice Sandura regretted his inability to sentence Odile Harington to death by firing squad.
The mastermind behind Odile Harington's totally abortive mission was alleged to be Mr Geoffrey Price, a former chief superintendent in the Rhodesian police, now employed by the South African security service. Mr Price's name has been linked to numbers of whites detained following an explosion on January 12 at an ANC house in Bulawayo.
The head of the South African Trade Mission in Harare, Mr Johann Viljoen, was unable to confirm persistent rumours that Odile Harington may be exchanged for Marion Sparg and Helen Passtoors, currently serving lengthy sentences in South African prisons for aiding the ANC.
It is not known when the Supreme Court will hear Harington's appeal against sentence and conviction.
A delay of up to a year may be expected.
Her lawyers are likely to plead that her activities caused no prejudice to the government and people of Zimbabwe.

HARARE

$\qquad$ - Four elderly whites are being detained here followin the arrest of their chil dren on allegations of murder and spying for oun Africa.
Lawyers in Bulawayo yesterday
contihued their efforts to obtain the release of Mr and 65 and 60 respectively, Mr John Bawden; 70
The - Maguires, son,
MRory; and their cousins Guy and Barry Bawden
$n$ are among a grotip of five young whites and Bone black ex-Rhodesian 'policeman who' have been temanded in custody in connection with a series of sabotage incidents.
These range from the 1981 explosion : at an arms dump outside Harare to the Jañuary 12 Bulawayo bomb blast.

1. The ${ }^{* / 4}$ Maguires, who are South Africari born, were detained at their flat in central Bulawayo late ion Tuesday and have been held incommunicado. The authorities have given no reasons for the arrests.
Friends of the Bawden's'fear thät "Mr John Bawden may be held until his son Christopher, who is wanted here on charges of high treason agrees to return fromesouth. Africa. He fled across the border on sanuary 14. W W W H
$\mathrm{Mr}_{\text {B }}$ Washington Sansole granted an order tint chambers late yesterday compelling the Bulawayo police to give lawyers access to Mriand Mrs Maguire. -
DDC

Beira port 'in chaos  (362) ROBINDREW Starol3/88

 HARARE-A chaotic stuation has developed at the por of Beira and $1 s$ threatening to halt traffic of goods to and from Zimbabwe through the Mozambique gat Way Acording to a report in the Financial Gazette, moccorang 80 , containers are awatiting clearance at the port and some companies have diverted traffic to the more expensive but efficient route to Durban.Managing director of the Beira Corridor Group, Mr Eddie Cross confirmed that a serious situation had arisen and high level discussions have taken place in Maputo and Harare.
Zimbabwean merchants have been urged in the past to divert traffic from South African ports to Beira, but at least three shipping companies are now said to be considering pulling ing conditions there ing conditions there complicated and it seems we are oing backwards," said Mr Cross.
There are also difficuities in keeping the port's entrance open for deepwater vessels.
$\because 2$

MUTARE (Zimbabwe) - The senior minister in the president's office and PF-Zapu president, Mr Josiua Nkomo, yesterday urged all Zimbabwéas to strongly support the unity accord signed between his party and Zanu (PF) to make it work.

He was addressing a joint rally with the vicepresident, Mr Simon Muzenda, at Sakubva Stadium in Mutare, where nearly 20000 people braved the scorching sun to listen to the two leaders, Ziana news agency reported.

Govt denies swop plan

Pretoria Bureau (2) (report) only gives rise to speculation which, in 6 The Minister of Foreign Affairs, $\mathrm{Mr}^{+} \mathrm{Pik}^{4}$ Botha, ${ }^{\text {w }}$ has denied any knowledge of a planned prisoner swop involving DutchBelgian national Helene Passtoors and South African ${ }^{3}$ citizen Odile Harrington, jailed in Zimbabwe for espionage.
'A' spokesman for Mr Botha's office in Cape Town, reacting to a morning newspaper report, said: "The Minister turn, leads to personal hardship for those concerned (20) 362

This is apparently a reference to the effect such speculation could have on Harrington, serving a 25 -year jail sentence in Zimbabwe for spying on the ANC.

Reports today speculated that South Africa would demand Harrington's release in exchange knows nothing about this for Passtoors, jailed for What is more, this kind of:": 10 years for treason.

| Prisoner swop deap ${ }^{1 / 188}$. |  |
| :---: | :---: |
|  |  |
| HARARE - Diplomatic but lawyers said this daughter last monthand |  |
| and legal sources in morning that, the spent 40 minutes with |  |
| Harare said yesterdayt | supreme court, appeal her̀, , \%, |
| that the $\dagger$ had no w could not goahead until $\because$ She said afterwards |  |
| knowledge of reported the record from the High: her daughter, a 2 |  |
| moves 6 to swop South | Court trial was available old Wits University |
| African spy Odile Last month a judge in graduate was physically |  |
| Haxington, for Helene chambers granted an well and mentally stong |  |
| Pastoorstserving a jail application for leave to - She was satisfied withthe |  |
|  |  |
| for her part in African, Her motheř, Mrs Eone treated. , Sowetan |  |
| Nationde.Congress, de? Wet, visited her Africa News Service, |  |
|  |  |
| Whathe head of the South: | $\square$ |
| WdricantradetMission, |  |
| M Johang Ciljon, said: |  |
| Hammotawteofany |  |
| Woyes jn that egardy |  |
| Whatington Was sen- |  |
| tenced las November to |  |
| 25 years in in isonment |  |
| for spying on the Anc.   |  |
|  |  |
| Induviction and semtengeig |  |
|  |  |

Zimbabwe join boycoit?

HARARE t Zimbabwe has notsyet decided whether to join the notye being organised by the supreme Council for Sport in Africa of the world cross country championships in New Zealand, the chairman of the nation's state-run Sports and Recrea tion Councils Mr Jacob Mudendá, said. $x$, mo
Zambia has aready announced its intention to puill out of the championships, to be held later this month in protest to the participation of the South African born runner, Zola Budd
Mr Mudenda travels to Blantyre Malawi this weekend for a meeting of Africas Zone Six Federation, which includes Lesotho, Botswana, Mozambique and Swaziland. - DDC $\rightarrow$ and

Harare out of NZ races over Zola

Own Correspondent

 BULAWAYO. - Zimbabwe has officially withdrawn from this month's world crosscountry championships in New Zealand, in protest at the inclusion of Zola Budd in the British team.A statement released here by the president of the Amateur Athletics Association for Zimbabwe (AAAZ), Mr Tony Warner, confirmed that a telex had been sent to the secretarygeneral of the International Amateur Athletics Federation in London, Mr John Holt, informing him of Zimbabwe's decision.
The government-sponsored National Sports and Recreation Council was thought to be about to ban Zimbabwean participation.

The Supreme Council for Sport in Africa had called on all states to boycott the New Zealand championships if the South Africanborn runner participated under British colours. Zambia had already announced its compliance.
Zimbabwe's Stanley Mandebele, one of the most promising runners in Southern Africa, would have had a chance to show his mettle in the 15 km event.
The Zimbabwean withdrawal bodes ill for this year's planned Seoul Olympics, which would encounter last-minute political problenis if Miss Budd competes.
Zimbabwe, which is a close friend of North Korea, narrowly turned down a plea to join a boycott by Ethiopia and Cuba in sympathy with the Pyongyang government.

President visits historic

 , Zimbabwe ruins ${ }^{1 / 48 / 3 / 8}$B!ik GREAT ZIMBABWE The West German Presidents? Mr Richard yon Wèzsaecker thiss-weekend flew from Haxare to Great'Zimbabwe - the stone ${ }^{\prime}$ walled remains of an ancient gold-rich kingdom after which this former British colony wás named.

It was, the third day of the Gerrman leader's 5 day state visit to Zimbabwe ${ }^{\text {mom }}$
He is on the third leg of a 4 fination tour of Africa ${ }_{0 S}$ which has alreadystaken him to Niger añdingeria.

He leaves Harare tomorrow for Somalia in the horn of Africa.
Mr Vo'n Weizsaecker, who is accompanied by his wife, Marianne, and keyogovernment officials from Bonng toured the great "Zimbabwe ruins 280 km south:of Harare.

Zimbabwe, means "thouses of stone" in Shöna, flourished as part of ${ }^{3}$ kingdom from 1200 to 1450 AD and was the name chosen by black ñationalist ${ }^{\text {to }}$ leaders like President Robert Mugabe for when Rhodesia became indèpendent April 18; 1980
Mr Von Weizsaecken, speaking at a welcoming banquet in Harare on Thursday night, spoke of the fascination European explorers and trayellers held for the old african city
He recalled that a German geographerpMr Sebastian. Muenster, wrote about it almost 500 years ago, and a German geologist, Mr Karl Mauch reported on his extensive studies of the ruins last century.

Mr Von Weizsacker described the ruins as a "world miracle."
"This monument is a symbol of your history," said the president.
After touring Great Zimbabwe, Mr Von Weizsaecker lunched with the vice-president, Mr Simon Muzenda at the nearby town of Masvingo (formerly Fort Victoria), the first main white settlement almost a century ago.
He then flew to the administrative capital of Matabeleland, Bulawayo, for a state reception hosted by President Mugabe.
Security was being tightened up in the city on the eve of his arrival. Armed dissidents roam the province and have been blamed for killing more than 60 whites and hundreds of black peasants since independence, sometimes in attacks close to Bulawayo itself.
President Robert Mugabe said Mr Von Weizsaecker's visit to Zimbabwe signalled a profound interest by both countries in expanding existing areas of co-operation between them.
"We regard it as a great honour that the Federal Republic of Gërmany has accepted our invitation to its highest man, its president, to visit our country," Mr Mugabe said.
President Von Weizsacker said Zimbabwe and Germany had relations in various fields going back some years. German sisters, belonging to religious orders, had been involved in bringing up young Zimbabweans and German experts were inyolved in various fields: in Zimbabwe.
"What has been missing was the opportunity to deepen political dialogue and exchange views," he said.
He praised Zimbabe's rural people for their involvement in production.
Since his arrival; he said, he had been received with open hearts and "shining eyes." He was sure Germans back home were watching his tour of Zimbabwe closely and were happy.
"We shall never forget the experience with the people of Zimbabwe," he said. Mr Mugabe told the guests that Mr von Weizsacker's visit would not have been complete if he had not come to Bu lawayo. - Sapa-AP

Varsity crowded  Sowetin 141,3185362

THE Zimbabwean Government may be tureedto build a second university because of overcrowding and limited vacancies for thousands of qualified students seeking. entry into the University of Zimbabwe.

This was reported by the Zimbabwean news agency, Ziana.

The President of Zimbabwe, Mr Robert Mugabe, recently said his government intended to look into the possibility of building a second campus for the present university or a new university. W,
"The university is becomingoverwhelmed by the recond numbers of students who qualified to enter it, but were turned away because of lack of space," he said:

The university is reported to be faced 41 en enormous constraints of limited capacity in lecture rooms, laboratories and residences.

Zimbabwe forced to use SA ports  harbour.  With the Pungwe  creased the proportion

\author{

* acust Daily Dispatch Y. Corresponden
}

HARARE - Zimbabwe has been thrown back on near-total reliance on South African ports due to Mozambican rebel sabotage of the railway line from Komatipoort to Maputo, and disruption at the Beira
$\qquad$

The assistant general manager of South African Transport System (Sats), Mr Jaipe Radyn, warned at the weekend that no more Zimbabwean cargo, bound for Maputo could be accepted until the current backlog was cleared.

River coming down in spate in central Mozambique, Zimbabwe's only completely independent trade lifeline to the Indian Ocean has been badly hit by flooding.
A crash programme of rehabilitation of the Beira corridor has inof Zimbabwean trade routed through the port from six, to thirty per cent.
In " the past two months, Zimbabwe has been forced to revert increasingly to South African ports.
The capacity of Beira has continued to fall pending the installation of overdue modernised facilities.
If the Beira and Lim= popo corridors could be restored to pre-1976 carrying capacities, Zimbabwe would be virtually free of any further reliance on Sats.

[^2]

colm Calloway, delivered truck-loads of war material to Zimbabwe for use by dissidents in their efforts to overthrow the government of Zimbabwe, the state alleged in the high court here yesterday, the national news agency, Ziana, reported.

In the dock were Mr Albert Sindiso Nkomo (also known as Tafara Ncube); Mr Derby Arab Nyathi; Mr Thembani Musonda (also known as Lenin Nyathi); and Mr Judia Ncube (sometimes known as George Thebe); who pleaded not guilty to four contraventions under the Law and Order (Maintenance) Act.
The four are alleged to have committed acts of terrorism or sabotage; recruited or encouraged terrorism or to undergo military training outside Zimpeople to undergo mintary for the purpose of furthering a political object and; illegally possessed arms of war and of-

According to the state, Mr Nhomo was a former Zipra deputy regional commander for security in the Lupane area and, in this capacity, had knowledge of various arms caches within the area.
In 1982, he held a series of meetings in Bulawayo with other former Zipra combatants with a view to fighting and overthrowing the government of Zimbabwe. It is alleged that he told his men to go back into the bush and carry out dissident operations.
The court heard that Mr Nkomo later fled from police into Botswana and was based at Dukwe camp. From there went to Francistown where he met Mr John Sibanda, the overall commander of the dissident operations in Zimbabwe. A dissident working committee was then formed and Mr Nkomo was nominated as deputy overall commander of the operations. The committee then negotiated for weapons Africa. - Sapa

From Michael hartnack

HARARE. - Evidence of alleged South African involvement in the early stages of the bloody rebellion which shook Zimbabwe's Matabeleland and Midland provinces in 1982 has been given in the High Court here.
Papers"placed before Mr Justice Ebrahim outline alleged negotiations. between former commanders of Mr Joshua Nkomo's Zipra guerillas and South African agents - principally a former Rhodesian special branch officer Malcolm Calloway - to obtain truck loads of AK-47 rifles, bazookas, explosives, ammunition, clothing and medical supplies.
Mr Callowaý allegedly handed over the supplies at Buffelsdrift, on the Botswana-South Africa border. They where then taken to caches at remote locations along the Botswana-Zimbabwe frontier.
One of four former Zipra guerillas on trial here, Mr Albert Sin diso Nkomo, who allegedly took command of dissident operations from Botswana after the death of Mr John Sibanda, was nearly shot by his comrades in Zimbabwe when they discovered he was supplying them with weapons from South Africa, and not from socialist countries, according to evidence produced.
Charged with Mr Nkomo are Mr Debby Arab Nyathi, Mr Thembani Musonda and Mr Judia Ncube, who allegedly played key roles in establishing the "Super Zapu" dissident rebellion in 1982, which claimed hundreds of lives, including those of 66 white farming community members.
The four have pleaded not guilty to committing acts of ter rorism, recruiting dissidents and possessing arms of war.
All the charges carry the death penalty.
The papers reveal the key role played by President Quett Masire's government in severing dissident supply routes from South Africa and handing over to the Zimbabwean security forces those ex-Zipra guerillas infiltrating the trackless 700 km Botswa-na-Zimbabwe border at the height of the Matabeleland un-

A former Zimbabwean refugee in Botswana, whose name may not be published by order of the court, yesterday testified that he was ordered to make contacts with Zapu parliamentarians, Mr Sydney Malunga and Mr Joseph Msika, and another prominent Zapu leader Mr Rodreck Nyandoro in early 1982. In February 1982 Mr Albert Nkomo invited him to meet Mr Calloway and negotiations for weapons supplies took place at Morang Motel, Francistown, and the Holiday Inn in Gaborone.
Mr Nyathi drove the shipments to the Zimbabwe-Botswana bor der after they were collected from Mr Calloway at Buffelsdrift, the witness claimed.
The case will resume on Monday.

- No immediate comment was forthcoming from the Department of Foreign Affairs on Pretoria's alleged involvement in the 1982 Matabeleland rebellion.
A spokesman for the department said the court record would have to be studied before comment could be made.

HARARE - A High Court trial resumes here on Monday in which there is an invisible accused - South Africa'
On trial are four men accused of acts of terrorism. aimed at overthrowing President Mugabe's government, , South Africa is alleged to have fuelled the dissident campaign with weapons and supplies $-4+4{ }^{4}+4$
The trial began on Thursday but was yesterday adjourned unexpectedly when a State witness serving 15 years for illegal possession of firearms denied telling police he knew the accused and had been involved with them He said he signed a statement because he was frightened:
OHe accused; Mr Albert:Sindisa Niomo is said to have been in overall command of dissident activities: $\%$. 4 , The alleged South African connection was raised in the summary of the State case, which said the first meeting be t teen dissidents and South African agents, led by Mr
Máthew Calloway a former Mhodesian Special Branch officer had taken place in Febriary 1983 across the Tati River, about a kilometre from the Morang Motel in Bóssyana :
The State alleges afurther meeting took pace and weapons consignments were laid on, In a statement, MrNkomo did not deeny meeting South Aricans in Botswana but said arms negotiations were led by two other men.
UThe State clains weapons and other equipment had been found in secret cachess ${ }^{2}$ atat
Also on trial are Mr Debby
Arab Nyathi, a Botswana national, Mr Thembani Nyathi
Und Mr Judiaia Neube
All were arrested in Botswara and deported to Zimbabwe.
Evidence is to be given that instructions were given to contachleading Zapu members, including Mr Josiuna Nomot

Reaction unit members examine the wreckage from the SADF bus which exploded in

Harington given leave to appeab  213188  michael hartnack  harare - A Zimbabwean Supreme Court judge has granted self-confessed SA spy Odile Harington, 27, leave to appeal against the controversial 25 -year jail sentence imposed on her in NovemberLawyers acting for Harington, who bungled an attempt to infiltrate the ANC, said yesterday that Mr Justice Alan Gubbay had reversed the High Court's refusal of leave to appeal by an order given in chambers. At her trial, Mr Justice Wilson Sandura imposed the maximum sentence under Zimbabwe's Official Secrets Act, and said he regretted his inability to sentence her to death by firing squad.

The mastermind behind Harington is alleged to be Geoffrey Price, a former chief superintendent in the Rhodesian Police, now with the SA security service.
SA Harare trade mission head Johann Viljoen was unable to confirm persistent rumours that Harington mayibe excrianged for Marions Sparg and Helena Pastoots. mp misoned in SA fot idine the ANC FIMCNIRE: ROBEERT BOTHA

为

"conservative South African ministers and politicians" turned down invitations to attend the three-day Interaction Council being held here to discuss problems of apartheid, Ziana, Zimbabwe's news agency, reports.
$\therefore$ The former Nigerian military head of state, General Olusegun Obasanjo, invited the South African Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr Pik Bo-

Constitutional Develop-: Thabo Mbeki. ment and Planning, Mr Chris Heunis.

General Obasanjo also invited leader, Mr. Andries Treurnicht and the leader of the Inkatha movement,. Mr Gatsha Buthulezi", Ziana said.

The African National Congress was also invited, represented by the Information and

In his rëplying letter, Mr Botha said: "I profess to be somewhat surprised that, against the background of the public statements on South Africa made during the annual sessions over the past three years of the Interaction Council, you should think that the South African Government could associate itself in any way with your organisation".-Sapa

Zimbabwean businessmens (os) have more optimistic outlook  showed an improvement  the August survey and one '  and mineral products

HARARE - The Central Statistical Office's latest business tendency survey, covering the last four months of 1987, indicates overall optimism in the business outlook of Zimbabwe's mining and manufacturing industries.

The CSO says the results indicate a general improvemeñt in employ? ment outlook.

Investment intentions for both sectors improved by about 16 percent compared with the previous survey in August.

Capacity utilisation showed a drop óf 12 percent for the manufacturing sector and no change for mining.

Orders and deliveries for both mining and manufacturing and indicated sustained growth in the manufacturing sector in the first four months of 1988 and a possible decline for the mining sector.

The main problem in both sectors continued to be shortages of imported raw materials and machine spare parts.
Manufacturers were divided for the purposes of the survey into 11 categories and of the 10 that replied to a question asking if they were more or less optimistic about the situation in their industry than four months previously, six expressed optimism, compared with three in in the April survey.
The exceptions were the drink and tobacco, textiles, wood and furniture, and others categories.

The degree of optimism was highest in the chemicals and petroleum products, transport and equipment, and non-metallic mineral products groups.

The mining sector also expressed greater optimism than in the previous four months.

Firms in both the mining and manufacturing sectors indicated higher investment, on balance, in 1987 than in the previous year, particularly in the non-metallic mineral products, foodstuffs, and metals groups and in the mining sector.

Textile and ginning industries indicated the greatest capacity utilisation, with 58 percent of the companies which responded reporting they were operating at full capacity.

The lowest capacity utilisation was in the 'metals and metal products group, with 92 percent-working below capacity.

There were no indications of significant shifts in the numbers employed in either the mining or manufacturing sectors but both anticipated a slight increase in employment in the first four months of 1988.- Sapa.
 African Foreign Minister Mr Pik Botha turned down an tivitâtion to attend the Harare meeting of the InterAction Council' of formér Prime Ministers and presidents because Pretoria could not associate itsérifinanway with the organisation.
This was revealed this wek 1 n correspondence released to Zimbabwe's domestic news, agency, Zana, by Inter-action which is holding a three day conférence in cosed session here to discuss regional conflicts, in Africa, ès pecially southern Africa and the Sudán.
Mr Bothásletter declining the invitation saidd "The Inter-Action Council professes to be concerned about build'ing g bridges. and promoting dialogue, yet it consistently attacks South Africazo the the strongest terms and: arrogates the right to prescribe how this country should be governed."
Mr Botha saidide did noty believe the Harare conterence wotid make any meaningful contribution towards solving South Africa's problems.

Stimulate

Council member, General Ob asapo, former head of Nigera's military governmentrand a) member of/ythe Commonwealth Eminent Persons' group which
4. tried to involve Prétoria in dialogue with apaitheid opponents, said in reply that the conference might have been an opportunity to break the impasse and to stimulate a non-confrontational positive dialogue:

Another South African minister, Mr-Chris Heunis, found the invitation strange, saying Tinter-Action had apparently claimed he right to charge, judge and convict his country y was naive to suggest he would attend the meeting in the company of some of the participants
Right-wing leader Dr
Andries Treurnicht said his policy was not to share a platform with representatives of the ANC which he described as a communist infiltrated and dictated organisation.
Other South Africans invited but not present were Chief Gatsha Buthelezi-(though Inkathathad a delegation here), Anglo American chite Mr Gavin Relly and MTSam Motsuenyane of the National Arrican Federated Chamber of.
Commerce.

HARARE - Despite the verbal barrages flying between the governments in Pretoria and Harare, thousands of Zimbabweans still trek south regularly on holidays, business trips, shopping expeditions and visits to families.
At certain times of the year, ahead of long holiday weekends or before school holidays start, the South African trade mission is hard pressed by the demand for visas.
People even queue up outside the building before the mission opens for business so that they can be early at the visa application counters.
The first three months of this year will probably see more than 25000 visas issued, up several thousand on last year.

One reason for this is the increased number of black shoppers crossing the Limpopo in search of goods from the northern Transvaal - goods not available or in short supply in Zimbabwe; where foreign exchange restrictions have cut imports.

SPECIAL LICENCE

4/4t government recently increased 'to R360 the valiefof duty free goods that people may bring into 6y 1 ut of goods that a person can import without hav ing toobtain a special licence.
$v^{2}$ venbers of a family travelling together are al10 wed to combine their allowances, which means that a farmily going south or to Botswana can even bring in o cheap second-hand car, an extremely valuable tem in Zimbabwe.
, 4 AHarare housewife, Mrs Heather Jones for the purpose of the interview, recently went on a 1600 km Shopping expedition from her home here to Pietersburg and back
She was away for four days two days on the road and two days shopping. Thie spent about R400 in Pietersburg supermarkets and brought back with her timed fish, French mustard, cosmetics, instant coffee, hairspray, a brand of deodorant she cannot get here bottles and formula milk for a baby she is expecting and black hair dye for her maid

GHOST TOWN

Pieetrsburg at midwee she found to be rather a ghostatown with shop assistants outnumbering the customers, but the opening there of a new hypermarket, could haye been partly responsible.
The journey made with two friends, took nine hourseach way by road; ncluding border formalities. "Eyeryone was very pleasant on both sides," she found Thesouth African immigration officer wondered if she yould make it back in time to have the baby in Zimbabwe or If she would taking back a little Pietersbinger.
 and said Arevexuno
Biack shopworkers whoidelped carryher goods to her car wanted to know whid life was like in the country to the north and wished her a pleasant trip home, Wfind myself being treated with sympathy and friendliness by everyone, saidMust Jones.
She found the lsame courtesy at security roadblocks on lonely stretches of road in Zimbabwe.
Athe South tafrican trade mission in Harare official said no racial recordsive kept, but manyof those applying for and being granted visas 依ere black people going on shopping trips.
Trangsplanes and buses alsobeavily booked at this time of the year with the easter and school holidays coming up

Dissident unrest  flares after white farm is attacked

from Michael hartnack

BULAWAYO - The dissident problem in Matabeleland. dormant for three months following the December" $22^{\prime \prime}$ unity agreement bétween Zañ"̈' (PF) and Zapu, flared into the open again yesterday when news was released of the first attack on a white-owned farm since the signing of the accord.
Yet another dispute between local Ndebele tribesmen and white farmers apparently lay be: hind the incident:

362
Last Noventther tribesmen helped agang of dissidents murder 16 white missionaries and their families in the eSigodini area, 20 km south of Bulawayo;föllowing a quarrè over trespassing cattle.
Zimbabwe's Minister of Home Affairs, Mr Moven
Mahachi, confirmed reports of an attack last Tuesday night on Mount Edgecumbe farm in the Kezi area, 60 km south of Bulawayo, in which'a R50.000 new imported tractor was burned out; 32 cattle and two horses were axed to death, and the homestead set ablaze.

The opner, Mr Chucks Connolly, was in Bula wayo when a gang of two men; armed with AK 47 rifles and ten unarmed "Mujibhas" (rebels sympathisers) arrived on the property under cover of darkness and beat up farm workers:
For the last four years of critical drought in southern Matabeleland, Mr Connoly häd reportdly allowed tribesmen from the neighbouring trit bal communal lands to graze their cattle on his ranges.
Following recent good rains, however, he asked peasant graziers to return their cattle to their own land. When this was not done, several head of cat tle were impounded by police Between, 1982 and December 1987, 80 menbers of Matabeleland's' white farming community were murdered - more than during the 1972-80 war for black rule in Rhódesia.
Conservationsts fear overwhelming ecological pressures ratherctháh pólitical ideology pose the gravest threat to restoring peace in Matabeleland, where President Robert Mūgabe's.government last year forcibly removed 20 oó illegal squatters.

Zimbabwe ex-combatants are still looking fo babwean ex-combatants are locked in a losing battle to find jobs.

The problem is not a new one. But the issue has been revived through a debate in Parliament initiated by a white member of the ruling party, Mr Sean Hundermark, who asked the House of Assembly to take note of the plight of the former guerillas.

About 60000 fighters went into the assembly points hurriedly set up in Rhodesia in 1979 after the Lancaster House conference agreed on a ceasefire.
Thousands were absorbed into the Zimbabwe National Army but about 36000 were demobilised.
For the first few years of independence, many of those who had run'away from school to join the liberation forces had money in their pockets for the first time under a scheme in which war veterans were given R240 a month while they sought to establish themselves in civilian life. But when the demob pay scheme stopped, thousands were jobless and still are.

Organisations were started to help them, the outstanding one being the Zimbabwe Project which placed emphasis on co-operative ventures in which 10.000 war veterans took part. The project director was Mrs Judy Acton, daughter of former Souithern Rhodesian Prime Minister Sir Garfield Todd.

Six years after independence Mrs Acton said most of the co-operatives had failed because of inadequate capital, lack of management skills, fraud and irresponsibility:
She said then the number of excombatants needing help was increasing.
In 1985 the demobilisation directorate estimated that half the $\mathbf{3 6 0 0 0}$ men and women who had been drawing an allowance were unemployed. The figure today could be as high as 25000 .

Mr Hundermark told Parliament that some ex-combatants had even gone to South Africa to look for work; "humbling themselves to cross the enemy border.".

Suggestions were made that when the government bought into private concerns, as it has done on a big scale, the concerns should be required to employ a certain proportion of ex-combatants.

Another white MP, Mr Andre Holland, a farmer, said he had taken on a number of former guerillas and found them the most serious workers and usually high disciplined.

Even though he and they had been on different sides during the guerilla war, they related well to each other.
Zapu MP Mr Sidney Malunga said a fund should be established to aid ex-combatants.
He also called for accurate comparisons of qualifications obtained in Easforn bloc countries With x those obtained in Western countries which were generally consideredhigher.
Many hundreds of guetillaw fighters obtained grants to study in East ernblocinstitutions
Analysts in Harare behieve however that the problem of jobless warDeterans will nót be sub stantally wreduced until the countrygets togrips With the rising level of unemployment generally, now regarded as the singlesmost importantinter: nalossue What is essential is more private investment; both domestiog andexter: nal But draw back re: main of lack of foreign currency, the system of labour laws and miniz mum wages which are Whighted against employz: ers, and central governe ment control over many of the functions which investors and businessmen feek shouldigbe left: to them wThe Star's Afri: caNens Service.cember 22 U, a symbol of the De-their two paity Accord betweenAfter eíght vos.mo, as a senior in the cold, Nkothe glare of the TV flor, is back in image as "Fath" Z lloodlights, his almost to tish zinibabwe", restored indepen to ts height before the 1980 independence elections.
And this weekend his return will be complete, when his Zapu Party will bo
gress ratifies the accord Zapu party con
Mugabe's Zapu's 14 seatt will swell
Mugabe's Zanu (PF) to 93 With wix white independents he can count on,
Onabe has an effective 99 seats splintter group ondabantingi Sithole's cent vote Muigabevents the 100 per bly for his long-cheris in the assemstate to be realised.
Since situised
States, accused her in the United zambique's Rent of aiding Moresponsible ${ }^{3}$ for ${ }^{2}$ R rebels and being against civiliañs on the e e attacks der, it seems unlikely the eastern borthe seat is expectely he will return: way soon:
So unity is the substantiv, There has at times bantive issue. mosity between the been deep aniThe Unity A Ac two partiest. downfor more than the was bogged details like the nan thre years over ty, and frequent wo the new partalks stalled over this gabe-Nkomo There is no doubt unity: they did not figh man wanted seven years to fight an Smithfor bal ground's.
onatibeleland NKOMo controlling Ma country the Mugabe the rest of the pened that is cxactly what had pened
The chances now are that unity change this, revealing a political mapurity after only eight years of indeperdence that is lacking in many othAfrican countries.

:Ssəxppy

:ssəxppy
Tadrodd notin rixini

other route

how Mr Joshuajukormo described the breakaway in $1963^{\circ}$ of his Zimbabwe African People's Union (Zapu) party when a groüp of African nationalists formed rival Zimbabwe African National Union (Zanu).
It has taken:25 years for the two to heal the rift.
This weekend will see one of the final acts in the process of uniting the parties, with the holding of the of President Robert Mugabe's Zanu (PF) - under Mr Mugabe's leadership.
In the 25 years in which the parties were rivals the feuding between them became so bitter at times that any possibility of overcoming the hatred seemed remote Hundreds, maybe thousands, of lives were lost in battles between their supporters.

In the early days after the split the fighting took the form of petrol bombings, assaults and brawls. But during the guerilla war the armed factions which were supposed to be fighting the common enemy - white rule - at times found themselves engaged in fierce battles with each other.
The Patriotic Front was launched to link the two, but each retained its own identity right through to the Lancaster House peace conference.

Triumph

Mr Nkomo wánted to fight the election under the Patriotic Fronit banner, but Mr Mugabe decided to go it alone and triumphed.

Mr Nkomo would not accept the offer to become the first ceremonial head of state of an independent Zimbabwe but he did join the first Cabinet in a Govi ernment of 'National Unity to keep alive the hope that one day his party would emerge victorious, either

And still lives were being lost. The post-independence mini-war in Bulawayo between rival exguerillas saw makeshift mortuaries piled high with bodies.

The Cabinet split after the discovery of arms caches, and for the next five years Zimbabweans continued to die at the hands of dissidents or fiercely tribalistic soldiers sent into Matabeleland to crush the rebellion.
Mr Nkomo, damned by Mr Mugabe as leader of a party which he likened to a snake whose' heăd must be crushed, fled the country. He was back several months later but as the dissident campaign continued the pressure mounted on Zapu. Its leading members were arrested and kept in detention.

Zapu claimed its supporters were being slaughtered Zanu (PF) officials were killed brutally by gangs of outlaws. In the face of all this Zapu's: administration all were closed by the government and its meetings banned.
Finally, serious negotiations got under way, but it was two years before Mr Mugabe and Mr Nkomo signed a piece of paper at an emotional ceremony last December committing their parties to unite.
Since then Mr Nkomo, now 70 and back in the Cabinet as a senior Minister, has thrown himself whole-heartedly into rallying support for the agree ment.
Sceptics

Weekend aftertor he and Mr Mer weekend ty, Mr Simgoaes depuhave stomon Muzenda, have stomped the countify Sceptics who said that the Ndebele people would never accept an agree ment which would see their Zapu party swallowed up by Zanir have had to think again' ${ }^{2}$, ${ }^{2}$ After this weelend's meeting, Zanu (PF) yiscto hold its special congress' to: agree to the merger.

ag 0. 0 0 0 0 0 0  －тоう әsəч7 јо әsneวag  04 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 $\square$ 8 0 0 0

品苞

IAN SMITH

雨

 B B ide O
O $\qquad$

为

 の花

萭号 to remove him，whatever en imp secures his own dent

 30
0 0 0 0 0 Professor Beach cited similar examples over

Nkomo's party merger with Mugabe's Talk of united front against South Africa.

Daily Dispatch Correspondent

HARARE Zimbabwe's main opposition party agreed at the weekend to a merger with President Robert Mugabe's ruling Zimbabwe African National Union (Zanu) party, moving him one step nearer his coveted goal of turning the country into a one-party state.

The opposition Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (Zapu) party of Mr Joshua ${ }^{\text {i }}$ Nkomo endorsed the merger idea at a one-day congress on Saturday

The closed meeting ended well ahead of schedule, indicating that there was little or no opposition to the merger among the 6000 delegates.
Mr Nkomo spoke at length on the merits of the unity pact he signed late last year with Mr Mugabe, saying it would bring peace and prosperity to Zimbabwe and result in a united front against South Africa and apartheid.

The Zapu delegates appear to have accepted the arguments favouring a merger with equanimity, pausing only for assurances that the two party structures would be merged "in toto".
There was no discussion at the Zapu meeting on how the party would be represented in the new joint central committee and politburo.
If Mr Nkomo already knows Mr Mugabe's plans on this issue he is not saying.
Neither is Mr Mugabe because he has a special unity congress of his own party next weekend, where the central committee and politburo ratios will be discussed.
Mr Nkomo's spokesmen say the party will not accept a merger which is clearly a simple take-over by the ruling Zanu-PF.
The real issue remains achieving agreement on the make-up of the two key party organs, the central committee and the all-powerful politburo and therefore allowing Mr Nkomo to convince his supporters he has achieved a fair deal.
Mr Nkomo indicated at the congress of his Zapu party on Saturday that there were serious differences in interpretation of the unity pact he signed with Zanu last year.
Mr Nkomo, seeking a unanimous vote of confidence in his decision to merge with President Mugabe's party, said he wanted to correct "a few misleading statements' published in the local press.

"Zapu and Zanu agreed to unite, to merge their two political parties and, therefore, it is wrong for anybody to say certain amendments will be made to accommodate Zapu members," he told some 10000 cheering delegates.
"There is no question of accommodation by one or the other. It is us accommodating each other," he said.

Mr Nkomo was apparently referring to a statement made by the Zanu information secretary, Mr Nathan Shamuyarira, after a central committee meeting which decided on Thursday to hold a congress on April 9 to ratify the unity pact.

Mr Shamuyarira, who is also foreign minister, was quoted by the local press as saying: "The special (Zanu) congress will deliberate on a number of things including the enlargement of the central committee to accommodate those coming from Zapu . . ."

MR NKOMO
Meanwhile, although unity remains a high priority in the minds of Zimbabwe's party leaders the increasing economic problems have begun to loom larger and will not necessarily be helped by party-political changes.

Government spokesmen and economic experts point increasingly to the slowing economy and steeply rising unemployment, the latter being regarded as a massive time-bomb that if not defused could obliterate any political peace achieved through unity.

MR MUGABE
Since independence in 1980 there has been little or no foreign or local investment with the result that new job levels have not ex ceeded 7000 a year.
Economists contrast this with the steadily rising number of new job seekers on the market annually, : currently standing at about 120000.

The gloomy forecasts and $\because$ dangers have prompted :: increasing calls from the private sector for relaxation of tight foreign, exchange controls, a clear-cut and attractive investment code and changes to the labour laws.

 hospital in -where the Bulawayo,

 2 0 0 0 0
0 0
 have not yet received HARARE - $\begin{gathered}\text { Hospital }\end{gathered}$

Zimbabwe's one-party dream set be realised after Zanu-PF congresss  is The Star's Africa News Service  cept that there cannot, and there will not

HARARE - Zimbabweans will watch with intense interest the next round in the move to unite the country's two main political parties now that Mr Joshua Nkomo's Zapu has given its blessing to the merger.
"A dream come true" was how Zapu publicity secretary Mr John Nkomo described the emotional ratification of the unity accord by 5000 delegates at a special congress at the weekend.
This Saturday will see the matching special congress of Mr Robert Mugabe's ZanuPF party.
Barring unforeseen dramatic developments, approval will be given.
But a number of highly sensitive issues will now have to be dealt with, among them the enlargement of the 15 -strong Politburo and the 90 -member Central Committee of the ruling party to accommodate leading political figures from Zapu.

The Sunday Mail speculated that there would be a lot of jockeying by leaders from the merging parties for inclusion in these bodies.
"People should be realistic enough to ac-be room for everyone at the top," the newspaper cautioned.
"Our advice to those whose hopes may be dashed is that they must put national interest before self-interest by not throwing a spanner into the works of unity in frustration."
Mr John Nkomo also warned that special care would have to be taken, adding that "nothing should be said or done by anyone to make the task of integration difficult".

UNDISPUTED LEADER

He said Mr Joshua Nkomo and Mr Mugabe would have to agree on the formula of integration but this should cause no problems unless people uttered "negative statements".
It has already been accepted that Mr Mugabe will be undisputed leader of the merged party, with Mr Joshua Nkomo sharing the deputy president's position with Mr Simon Muzenda, current deputy leader.
A vital element in the composition of the enlarged Politburo and Central Committee will be the maintenance of a tribal balance.

Because of their greater numbers, Shonaspeaking members will predominate over Ndebele-speakers. But within the Shona grouping itself there are regional demands that have to be met if the machinery of the party is to run smoothly.
One issue that is exciting interest is how much attention will be paid to the Leader ship Code that Zanu-PF adopted at its last congress in 1984 and which has been ig. nored by many of the people at the top.

Mr Mugabe warned recently that "the leadership has become a mockery and the confidence of the people in some lead:ers has waned".
Zimbabwean newspapers have said that the manner in which the code will be applied has become a test case for the leadership in the eyes of ordinary people who have seen the top politicians amassing private wealth in defiance of the code.

Although it has not been raised publicly, the question of Mr Joshua Nkomo's business interests, of which he has made no secret, will become a topic of conversation as the time approaches for his appointment to a leading position in Zanu-PF.

HARARE $-\cdots$ Zimbabweans begin an unusual exercise in soul-searching tomorrow to see if they believe the nation is adequately "dealing with the rotten apples" - the corrupted - of its society, the national news agency Ziana reports.
A two-day conference on bribery, fraud and corruption is to be opened in Harare by Chief Justice Enoch Dumbutshena.

Conference chairman Mr Tom Mswaka, said yesterday one of the main purposes of the conference was to show

with the rotten apples

that Zimbabwe, as a nation, must be seen to deal openly with the corrupted of society.
"They are completely unacceptable to Zimbabwe and this is what we want to demonstrate," he said.
The conference had' not been called, he added, because fraud, bribery and corruption were rampant in Zim babwe.
"This is not the case," he said. "But we must demonstrate our willingness to deal with these crimes and this conference gives a unique chance for Zimbabweans to put their heads together to discuss the situation."
Zimbabwe has had its fair share of major private and public sector scandals
But many Zimbab.
weans in influential gov. ernment and private circles belleve the country has hrough its courts and parliament, that, unlike other African nations, it is prepared to deal openly with corrupted individuals.
Despite this public concern with the level, in particular, of official corruption is regularly "Hardly a day passes without the media publishing a story or court case of bribery, corruption, fraud and theft," the conference brochure says.
"What is of greatest concern is the apparent increase in these crimes and the magnitude of flnancial losses incurred, and to a lesser extent the potential stigma that could be attached to a nation.
"Some nations appear to have accepted their scourge. Is Zimbabwe moving in the same direction?" Mr Mswaka said. - Sapa

Zimbabwean chief justice warns of rot of corruption

 The country's chief justice says no, though he warns the rot has started.An advocate in private practice, on the other hand, says he has heard it described by a Western diplomat as the most corrupt country in Africa.
$\because$ These were the conflicting views put to a conference in Harare on Tuesday on bribery, corruption, fraud and theft, the national news agency, Ziana, reports.

The chief justice, Mr Justice Enoch Dumbutshena, said: "I know we have had cases involving corruption but they are not as many as in other countries."
He said the important issue was that once corruption began creeping in, the rot had started and this was happening in Zimbabwe.
He told the 200 delegates that the condition of underdevelopment in many Third World countries created an environment in which crimes of corruption, bribery and fraud thrived.

People denied opportunities of making money before independence wanted to make up for this after independence.

POOR INVESTIGATIONS

He said after independence people who had had nothing of their own suddenly found themselves exposed to unrestricted opportunities.

There often seemed to a person little harm in taking 10 percent for every contract he handled, greasing palms with bribes to reach the top or juggling with figures to make money quickly, the chief justice said.

He pointed out that while unemployment, poverty and other social ills contributed to crime, multimillionaires were not uncommonly in ${ }_{8}$ volved in fraud and corruption.

He cited the Guinness scandal and the fraud of a wealthy Wall Street insider as examples of this in developed countries.
Advocate Mr Adrian de Bourbon told delegates that, while he hoped the Western diplomat who had described Zimbabwe as the most corrupt country in Africa was exaggerating, corruption had reached frightening levels in Zimbabwe.
He said he believed only a tenth of the crimes of corruption came to the courts in Zimbabwe.
People brought to court for corruption often went free due to poor investigations by the police, inexperience on the part of prosecutors or lack of understanding on the part of magistrates.

Although sentences for dishonesty in Zimbabwe were often greater than for murder, judicial action had failed to prevent it.

SMUGGLING A WAY OF LIFE

"I feel there is a marked reluctance to have certain people prosecuted for bribery," he said.
Corruption permeated virtually all facets of society in Zimbabwe, from the man in the street who sold his car at five times the controlled price, to the rural trader who did not correctly reflect his turnover because he wanted to avoid paying tax.
He said smuggling was almost a way of life for Zimbabweans and was considered an acceptable business risk.

There was no social stigma attached to exchange control contraventions. Such contraventions could even be considered an asset by some businesses.
Up to a third of the tax the government should collect was estimated to be lost to the exchequer because of tax evasion and this was detrimental to the countríy asita whole. - Sapa.

HARARE - Two Britons, an Irish. man, a Canadian and two white Zimbabweans, detained without charge as alleged South African spies for six months, have appeared in a Magistrate's Court here as a prelude to their trial; their attorneys said yesterday.
The six were denied bail when they were brought before a Harare magistrate on Wednesday, the lawyers, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said.
t © SECRETINFORMATION
They were not asked to plead:
They face charges under Zimbabwe's Official Secrets Act for allegedly supplying secret information to South Africa. The maximum penality is 25 years' imprisonment
Those detained are Mr Jack LewisWalker (54), a senior civil servant and former provost marshal in the Rhodesian Air Force, and Ms Patricia Brown (53); both Britons who have been longtime residents of Zimbabwe.
The others are Irishman Mr Jeffrey Mee (45), Canadian Mr Dick Laban (50) and Zimbabiweans Mr Ivor Harding (55) and his'son'clive (25)
They were arrested last September after Mr Ivor Harding was allegedy found at the Beit Bridge border post adjoining South Africa with detailed in' formation on Zimbabwe-based officials of the African National Congress.
The six accused were remanded in custody to April 20 No date was fixed for their triá, lawyers said.
A detainees review tribunal in Feb. ruary recommended the release of Mr Lewis-Walker ruling that he posed no threat to state security.

AIR FORCE OFFICERS HELD
But the government rejected the finding and ordered him back into detention, in the same Chikurubi maximum security prison on the outskirts. of Harare, where his son Nigel was siz: milarly detained with five other white Zimbab we A ir Force officers in 1982 $T$ The six officers held at that time were acquitted of charges of helping to blow up most of Zimbabwe's combat planes for the South Africans.
But they we ere detained for a further four months under emergency power regulations during which time courts established they had been tortured Released in December 1982 they were expelled to Britain- Sapa-AP

By ROBIN DREW, Sowetan Africa News Service, Harare

WHEN Zimbabwe enters its ninth year as an independent country next week (April 18), Mr Robert Mugabe will look back with April it wal of satisfaction on what was achieved in the past year rought. Zapu remaina different story: the country was in the grip of a savage Today all that is in the . problems plagued Matabeleland past. The all that is in the past. The euphoria of the Joshua Nkomo and M Mugabe dominates everything.

There will be, a plentiful harvest from the good rains and hopefully a boost for the foreign exchange supply from a much-better looking tobacco cröp.
${ }_{1}$ There has been a dramatic improvement in the security situation in Matabeleland.
Mr Ian Smith and his vocal supporters in the Conservative Alliance are out of parliament.
And to top it all, Mr Mugabe himself occupies the powerful new post of executive president from where he will be able to preside over other changes still to come such as the introduction of a constitution il one-## at the  Zimbab can look ahead with optimism  Take away apartheid, party state and an enlarged single chamber. parliament.

- Economy

The blot on ${ }^{\text {the }}$ the horizon in the face of all this is the situation in South Africa,

Seen from Harare, Pretoria stands to blame for many of the difficulties still facing the country, the most pressing of which is the huge cost entailed in keeping thousands of troops in Mozambique and along the eastern border to counter incursions by the MNR.*
Zimbabwe sees itself as a frontline state, +committed to supporting where it can liberation movements trying to overthrow the Pretoria Government, and thus a target for destabilis in one guise or another, ${ }^{\text {a }}$. goes the argument: and all the money, time and effort could be devoted to developing the economy and improving the lot of the ordinary people.
On the home fron there is no question that the most threatening development is the rapid growth in unemploy ment.
Within a year or two. 200000 new jobs will have to be created every year if all schoolleavers are to find work.
An impossible task everyone agrees, especially when faced with the reality that in the past five years only 35000 jobs were created.
A nationwide survey is being undertaken to sec how best to tackie the problem and there is renewed talk of a more attractive : investment code.

Mr ROBERT Mugabe
But it is. worth recalling that a year ago Mr John Nkomo, then in opposition as a senior icutenant in Zapu. challenged the government to open up the economy and be more pragmatic.

B Blot

"Unless we liberalise our economy, no one will come and invest here. And if we continue to take more loans we will. mortgage the country," he said then.
Today he occupies the key post of "Labour Minister in the government and is overseeing the study which will look at, among other things, the sources and pattern of investment.
Many who have Zimbabwe's best in terests at heart count on this realisation of the need for a dramatic attitude triumphing over the rhetoric of socialism which serves only to frighten investors away.

Mr Joshua nkamo

Recognition of the fac that Zimbabwe needs th backing of every competent person it can lay its hands on is one reason why the unity pact has been greeted so Much remains to be done to translate the unity accord into a working document. There are differences of pinion about the composition - of the central committee and the politburo, issues which will have to be settled before. vt the business of merging the parties at provincial, district, branch and cell level can begin.
But at this stage there is no suggestion of a breakdown though the eaders constantly warn of the danger of negative statements.
As far as most whites in Zimbabwe are concerned, their main preọccupation remains with the government's conduct of the economy

When the specially reserved white seats were abolished. the message went home clearly tha their political influence. limited though it had been, was now virtually nil.

White faces remain in parliament, but the ordinary man would be hard put to name many of them.

Periodic shortages of essentials, inflation and black market purchases which erode his income coupled with deep concern, about rising crime and inadequate police protection, are the issues which are constantly debated among whites.

Most of the 100000 members of the white community see no option but to leave politics to thejr eight million black brothers and sisters.

THE Sowetan today remembers lournalists around the country who are in detention: - Zwelakhe Sisulu, Editor of the New Nation, who has been In detention under the emergency regulations for 486 days

- Brian Sokutu, Eastern Cape freelance Journalist, has been Conviction for racist duty immigration officer has made history by be coming the first black person to be convicted since. independence on a charge of using racist insults to a white man.

4.

Gabriel Mugokó, 27, Was fined R230, (or two months jail), for telling $\qquad$ special patrol officer Mr Robert Bolton, he was the son of former Prime Minister. Mr Ian Smith.

He had pleaded not guilty to saying during an altercation outside a "Dulawayo night club: "Do not touch me. You Smith's son" policeman, but talk ${ }^{\text {Di0 } 14244808 ~}$
The magistrat ned Mugoko that Warbabwe's courts would deal mercilessly with anyone using racist or tribal insults.

More than a dozen whites have been heavily fined and given sus1980 for jail terms since 1980 for abusing blacks.

HARARE - The Zimbabwean government might soon withdraw troops from the western Matabeleland province because of a decline in rebel activity, Defence Minister Enos Nkala said yesterdayc Nkala said the decline followed the signing last December of an agreement to unite the ruling Zanu (PF) and former opposition (PF) Zapu parties.

"Recent developments' point to a zero dissident activity in Matabeleland and we can think of withdrawing soldiers from the area and assisting Mozambique to maintain her independence and sovereignty," Nkala said.
An armed insurrection broke out in Matabeleland in 1982 after veteran politician Joshua Nkomo was fired from a coalition cabinet.
The government said then that (PF)Zapu, whose powerbase is in Matabeleland, was behind the rebellion, a charge denied by the party.

The two parties have now agreed to merge and work for the establishment of a one-party, socialist state run along Marxist-Leninist principles, Zimbabwe has an estimated 12000 troops in Mozambique helping'the' Maputo authorities in their 12-year-old war against Renamo rebels.
The Zimbabwean soldiers are also guarding their landlocked country's trade routes to Mozambique's Indian Ocean coast. - Sapa-Reuter. national news agency reports.
During the same period sales of clear beer have gone up $22 \%$, a relatively modest increase of $2,75 \%$ yearly.
And a jolly old gin and tonic is rapidly establishing itself as a favourite tipple.
By any standards, despite the frequent admonitions by churchmen and politicians, Zimbabiwe's per capita intake of liquor is modest.
Cameroon has the highest individual beer consumption on the cohtinent or per capita consumption (pcc).
Cameroonians drink an average of 501 of beer annually for every man, woman and child in the country.
They are followed by SA with $42 I$. Zimbabweans come in around the 141 pec mark, which is really a mere trickle compared to the 1451 of the Germans.
The change in Zimbabiwean drinking habits is due to the rocketing costs of alcohol rather than abstinence - $\mathrm{Sapa}^{\prime \prime}$

ZIMBABWE $(362)$ Rising smoke

Zimbabwe's 1988 tobacco sales have opened on an upbeat note, with prices $41 \%$ higher than at 1987's opening.
Last year was, of course, a disastrous year, when a large and poor quality crop sold at an average price of Zim218c/kg - down 30\% on the record 1986 average. A better comparison is between this year's opening price of $270 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$ and that paid in 1986 ( 289 c on the first day).
Growers are hoping for much higher prices through the rest of the sales season, which lasts until September. Price forecasts range from $320 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$ to $360 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$. The previous record seasonal average was the $313 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$ of two years ago.
FINANCIAL MAIL APRIL 151988
Prices are higher this year partly because it is a smaller crop - no more than 105 m kg compared with 127 mkg last year - but mainly because the 1988 crop is a highquality one compared with last season's drought-stressed pickings.
Another factor is the general improvement in the world tobacco market over the past 18 months. There has been strong consumption growth - mainly in Third World countries - while manufacturers' inventories have declined.
Last year, the tobacco price rose $6 \%$ on the US market to US159c/lb (about US $350 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$ ). This underscores Zimbabwe's competitiveness because even if the industry achieves the hoped for average of $\mathrm{Zim} 350 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$ - at the top end of the forecast spectrum - this would equate to little more than US205c $/ \mathrm{kg}$ and a good $40 \%$ below last year's US price.

While growers are confident of substantially higher earnings this year, the mediumterm outlook still causes concern. Costs have risen $260 \%$ since 1981 , while the average price has increased $70 \%$. The industry remained profitable during this period for two main reasons. First, growers were able to improve quality (until 1987) and increase yields. Second, the Zimbabwe dollar depreciated $58 \%$ against the US dollar, the currency in which tobacco is traded.
These factors allowed growers to earn good profits despite a stagnant world market for Virginia flue-cured leaf. But since 1985, the Zimbabwe dollar has barely depreciated against the US currency, undermining the industry's competitiveness to some extent.

Fortunately, the rate of cost inflation slowed to around $5 \%$ in 1987, thanks to the price and wage freeze. But with farm wages increasing more than $17 \%$ since March 1, and government edging towards relaxation of the price freeze, cost inflation will escalate this year.
It is estimated that at least $70 \%$ of the 1400 growers made a loss last year. Many borrowed heavily from the banks and must now rebuild their capital base.
A problem on the marketing side is the anticipated reduction in South African purchases. Merchants say South Africans have been buying in Brazil this year, apparently because they believe it prudent to diversify their sources of supply, given Zimbabwe's frequently repeated support for economic sanctions.

乐我

Business Times Reporter

THE Zimbabwean Government is involved in a court battle over shares worth millions of rands.

In 1984, the 2 imbabwean Government expropriated shares worth $\mathbf{Z} $ 200$-million held by its citizens in SAxompanies.
panies.
Several $2 i m b a b w e a n s ~$
Hv ing in SA are resisting the expropriation. Some have pooled resources to fight the battle in SA courts.
In the three years since the expropriation, the value of the shares in contention has trebled in rand terms.
Joseph Edward Millwarde and Doris Anne Millwarde, now living in Cape Town, are suing Standard Chartered Nominees and the Reserve parce 000 in 1984.

The Rand Supreme Court case is vital for many other Zimbabweans. It could esta list a legal precedent.

interdict in May 1984 to restraln the defendants from expropriating the shares. The order was made final in sep. tember 1984, but the court tember that the shares be directed that the shaing the held in trust pending main action.

UnlawfuI

In a supporting affidavit to the application the Millwardes' daughtef, Anna Louse Hudson, said her parents se huson, said her parents could not ath loss.
In papers before Mr Jus Ice Kirk-Cohen, the Millwardes alleged that the prowardes alcuisition of their posed acquismoniscatory and shares was connscatiory beunlawfil - con result to their cause it would result in their cosing their shares and unlawful because the amendlawiul to the regulations had ment to the reassed constitutionnot be
They sald: "Any compensation offered in Zimbabwean currency ts inadequate, more carticularly in that such curparticularly locked and cannot rency is blocked the territoribe used outsimbabwe and ls al limits of Zimbabwe and is valueless in respect of the purchase of any asset outside purchase the teritorial limits of 2 im babwe".

Pressures

They claimed that the Zim mey regulations were babwean reg by SA courts. not recognised beek an order They now sek a are the declaring that they are the beneficlal owners of the benencs, and that neither Stanshares, anartared Nominees dard Charserve Bank of ZImzero, Minister of Finance, Economic Planning and 27, velopment, dated March 27, 1884.
1094. The statement sald: "Since The end of 1981 , the economy of Zimbabwe has been subjected to severe pressures as result not only of the im pact of the world recession, pact of of of three years of the but also or throught in the country's living memory.
"As a consequence of these ressures, the level of exprests has declined by over ports has deciling since the end of 1981. This has necessirated the taking of palnful atesures in order to ensure measures in orreer has continthat the cin a position to meet ued to be its external obingauate level maintain an adchnge availabillty Both the Government and the Reserve Bank have resorted to siguificant levels of external borrowing.
"The effects of these devel## opments have been severe.

 The economy has experlenced a progressive downturn since the beginning of 982. and in 1983 real gross dome ant product is estimat. ed to have declined by about $3 \%$ The recession has resulted in some decline in levels of employment and it has also meant that certactives have ment policy objectives have not been achleved.Dr Chidzero sald the "shares, at present valued at over $\mathbf{2} 200$-million form part of the forelgn exchange resources of Zimbabwe, and since 1948, the country has had the right in terms of exchange control law and regulations to acquire these resources.
$\square$ To Page 3
nor the Resere right to them. In support of thelr original pplication for an interdict, value of the shares. in terms quisition was done in terms of an amendment to the of an amendrol regulations. application for an atached a NO winner, so the Blue Chip Challenge -prize goes up another R200 to R600.
Players in Business Day's share game compete for daily cash prizes, which accumulate until there is a winner.
If you are not participating, why not get your own Blue Chip card? This is available free of charge. Telephone (011) 678-8211 or 678-4840, and a card will be posted to you.
Look up the shares allocated each day to the unique set of 10 numbers on your card, calculate the total price movement and compare this with the daily index. If they match, you're a winner. $\therefore \quad \therefore$ How to play - Page 7. top government post 362 blday 1814188
HARARE - Zimbabwean President Robert Mugabe, in an effort to implement a unity accord with his former chief opposition party, has named veteran opposition leader Joshua Nkomo to a top ruling-party post.'
Nkomo was appointed Interim Second Vice-President yesterday following a pact signed by Mugabe and the opposition chief last tDecember to merge their two parties which had been fierce rivals since independence in 1980. - Sapa-Reuter

Bluechip  A Ass, Cut Buthq TODAY'S INDEX:

 (+) R1,48 IF your thare price total movement equals (plus) $\mathbf{R 1 , 4 8}$ today, you are a winnerl Call (011) 678-8211 between 10am and 2pm today to make your clalm. -
TODAY'S PRIZE: R600

TODAY'S DAILY LIBTING - Pago 7
189488.

TSTaE11 premper accusec on ad

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir refused to comment yesterday on reports that Shamir and two other high Israeli officials approved the assassination of the PLO's deputy commander. NBC television, quoting unidentified sources, reported Saturday's assassination of Fatah military leader Khalil alWazir in Tunisia was a joint operation of Israel's intelligence service, the Mossad,

His assassination touched oit a wave of protests in the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank on Saturday. At least 15 people were killed and up to 90 wounded in the bloodiest single day of Palestinian rioting since protests began.
The NBC report said the attack was approved by Shamir, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defence Minister Yitzhak Rabin after Fatah guerrillas hijacked a bus and killed three Israelis last month.
"This story has the same status as all the other stories like it which have been published, and we don't relate to any of them," spokesman Avi Pazner said.

NBC said Mossad had asked three times for permission to kill al-Wazir, but each time Israeli officials refused to give permission. That changed after the bus attack. - Sapa-AP.

$\because \cdots$

ymemesmes 30 ,

Knoerl, 58 , sttgart, was slain at Empandeni Mission 20 km from the Botswana border late on Tuesday, only hours after President Robert Mugabe announced a general"aminesty for rebels' operating in the western province of Matabeleland.

Police recovered a note left at the mission tby the gunmen, but they did not immediately divulge its contents.
Catholic bishop Henry Karlen of Matabeleland visited the mission early yesterday,

He informed the church's secretariat Knoerl was apparently shot when he weint to the rescue of fellow West German missionary Johannes Banning; 40 who was being attacked with an axe.
The priest, wounded in the head and neck, was rushed to Central Hospital in Bulawayo for emergency surgery.

Karlen said the gunmen arrived at the. mission; run by the Marianhill Father's Missionary Organisation, after nightfall on Tuesday.
Armed with AK-47 semi-automatic assault rifles they ransacked staff houses for money, radios, watches shoes and clothing.
After murdering Knoerl and injuring Banning, the bandits forced, apother priest, identified as Father Lucas, and them to the Zimbabwe border With Botswana:
The two were later released and the getaway car burnt The banaits also burnt two mission cars arid dene lorry before they left The bandits are reportedy stilititside Zimbabwe, however, and the army is attempting to track them downe

Banning was reported to be irra stable condition after an operation yesterday morning.
The attack is the first on missionaries since the ruling Zanu-PF and Joshua Nkomo's PF-Zapu signed a unity agreement on December 22,
It was hoped peace could be achieved in troubled Matabeleland, where' hundreds of people haye been killed by bandits in the past six years. Sapa.

Gunmen shoot prieshexe another at Zim mission

HARARE Government troops were combing arms in western Zimbabwe yesterday for four, gune Who shot dead a West German Roman Catholic end wounded another missionary with an

Father Killian Knoerl 58 from Stuttgart, was ain at Empandeni Mission, 20 km from the:Botswa an er and whe he na border, ate on ruesdays West German mission went to the rescue or fellowing, 40, who was being ary Father Johannes Banning, 40, whded priest was attacked with an axe the bady wo taken to hospital in Bulawayo.- Sapa-AP

ZIMBABWE

Mine, all mine!

Following output growth of more than $17 \%$ last year, Zimbabwe's mining industry is forecasting even faster expansion in 1988.
Last year's mining growth came mainly from higher prices for most metals, but there was also a: $4 \%$ increase in the volume of production which reached its highest levels since the late Seventies. Average prices were up more than $10 \%$, with asbestos, ferrochrome, nickel, copper and gold all showing useful gains.
The most important mineral was gold, valued at $\mathbf{Z} $ 350 \mathrm{~m}$ and the country's secondlargest export after tobacco, which earned $Z $ 450 \mathrm{~m}$ in foreign exchange. Coal production increased more than $19 \%$ and the value of output $16 \%$ to $\mathrm{Z} $ 103 \mathrm{~m}$. Asbestos output rose $18 \%$ to 194000 t , valued at $Z $ 98 \mathrm{~m}$.
$\qquad$
The main source of growth again this year will be higher prices but there is likely to be a further modest increase in production volumes. Major increases in gold production are in the pipeline, with the British-based Cluff Oil Group and the State-owned Zimbabwe Mining Development Corporation both expanding output over the next 18 months. At current gold prices, these increases in output will result in a $50 \%$ rise in the value of gold production.
Last year's growth comes after a prolonged period of contraction in the industry. After doubling between 1964 and 1976, production volumes peaked out in that year, falling $12 \%$ by 1980 . Production of some major minerals is still levels of the Seventies.
Asbestos output in 1987 was $25 \%$ lower Asbestos output in 1at 800 t , is running than in 1979. Copper, nickel production, which reached a peak of 16700 t in 1977, is currently running at 10400 t . Against this trend, gold production has increased $30 \%$ since independence in 1980 while coal ouput - spurred by opencast production at Wankie colliery for the Hwange thermal power station - has risen ## more than $50 \%$ to $4,6 \mathrm{Mt}$.

 Apart from gold, where a small- and medium-s the next 18 months, no come on streaming investments are beingmajor new mining undertaken at present. This suggests again, with the exception of gold - that the surge in mining production is heavily dependent on buoyant world market prices which, most analysts believe, are unlikely to last much beyond the end of 1988 .
But for the immediate future, the outlook is bright with annual production forecast to reach $\mathbf{Z} $ 1,1 \mathrm{bn}$ in value this year.

Trouble brewing on set of Brink movie

 extras，whose romance with the wide screen soon evaporated aftera 12－hour－day of location shooting for which they were paid R28．
A＇squad of 30 white schoolboys were re－ quired to re－run the same try in a game of rugby from 7 am to 1 pm with further afternoon sessions，while 100 white spectators were required to applaud the

DR BRINK
try 18 times in succes－ sion．
Donald Sutherland，of Mash fame；South Afri－ can actress，Janet Suz man；and guest star Mar－ lon Brando are the big names in the screen ver－ sion of the Brink novel， which Metro Goldwyn－ Meyer hope will gain from the momentum of interest generated by Sir Richard Attenbo－ rough＇s Cry freedom．

While some extras black extras told the said＂never again＂，Sunday Mail that the those who had those who had lent cars， which were given＂TJ＂ number plates for back－ ground shots，were paid an additional R56 a day．
A film company spokesman denied that there were labour prob lems on the set，but lems on the set，but trouble burst into the open yesterday when the Sunday Mail carried reports of black extras＇ anger over their R28－a－ day fee．
They claimed they were due to be paid R187，but local whites in the production team had persuaded the French and American film makers that＂black Zim－ babweans did not need a lot of money for a liv－ ing＂．
They also claimed that the dog was earning R392 a week
A spokesman for the preferential rate given to the dog owner was ironic in an organisa－ tion seeking to expose apartheid＂．
Two Zimbabwean policeman，who volun－ teered to provide secur－ ity on location sets dur－ ing their annual leave， have walked out be－ cause of alleged unfair treatment
One of the＂shots in－ volved the Oriel Govern－ ment Secondary School being re－signposted ＂Dan Pienaar Seuns Hoerskool＂

The Zimbabwean in－ formation ministry＇s principal liaison officer with visiting film com－ panies，Miss Beverly Tilley，claimed that the Sunday Mail was damag－ ing the country＇s film in－ dustry prospects by run－ ning the story．

案 route for Zimbabwean traffic are reported in the latest issue of the bulletin issued by the Beira Corri dor'Group:

Last year, the port han died 2 million tons of cargo including fuiel but this year there has been a decline
For the past six weeks only one train a day, not always filled to capacity; has been running from Zimbabwe as against three to four trains a day being run last year.
The bulletin reports that Beira has been without electricity for extended "periods over the past four months which greatly ${ }^{2} \mathrm{~g}$ gravates the difficul operatingand living conditions there"
Electric power was re stored on March 16 but there was' still 'a water' shortage. Food and other shortages at the port have contributed to a marked.
decrease in labour productivity.
The bulletinireports that the resurfacing contract in the docks 1 is 14 months be hind schedule and the temporary container hard standing area is only 15. percent complete
- About 60 to 70 percent of port handing equipment is out of order on average at any one time.
At the end of February only seven of the 20 cranes complete but the cbntrac tor says the work will be completed by the end of the year:
The bulletin reports that cargo handling has been estremely erratic over the past 12 months Some ships reported satisfactory levels but others very poor loáding and discharge ratẻs.
It quoted the instance of a charter contract for 2500 tons of potash which al lowed two days and 12 hours for discharge
In the end it took nine days and 18 hours and the local companies paia
$$ 29000$ in demurrage

[^3]

(362) "How then can speakers. now expect son was killed by guerillas comes to terms and sometimes hold much for his wife who chokes to death from rallies that announce a purely party politian overdose of sileeping pills and alcohol.
Careful thought was marriage between the two major parties?" he asked. He said anyone propagating free enterprise, a multiple party parliament and freedom, of expression and criticism; and and who attended rallies for personal aldantage, gave a false impression of support to an agreement which would lead to apport most undemocratic one-party dictatorship. democratic one-party dictatorship Other whites interviewed by the national news agency, Ziana, maintained they siprallies.
integrate W.____
\[

$$
\begin{aligned}
& 0 \\ & 0 \end{aligned}
$$
\]

 $\frac{\text { Disrepair }}{\text { But while the } r a}$ and oferen hising she fing for

$\qquad$

 piezequ

Harare A-G to decide on alleged sabotents  HARARE The docket of a case involving six alleged saboteurs connected with bombings in Harare and Bulawayo had been sent to the attorney-general's office for his decision regarding prosecution, Zimbabwe's Deputy Commissioner, of Police (Crime), Mr Godyin Mabika said yesterday:Mr Kevin John Woods (35), of Burnside Bulawayo; Mr Michael Anthony Smith (34); of Balwearie Estates, Chakari; Mr Barry Desmond Bawden (30), of Kopje Ranch, Shangani; Mr Phillip Siziba Conjwayo (54), of Waterfalls; Harare; Mr Rory Burt Maguire (37), of Burnside; Bulawayo; and Mr Guy Thomas Bawden (32) of Borrowdale, Harare, are expected to appear in the Harare Magistrate's Court today for further remand.

They face an allegation of Mmurder arising out of - the death in Bulawayo on January 11 this year of a man killed in a bomb explosion, Sapa.

SA masterminded murder and sabotage, book claims

South African agents have been accused in a new book of the ganglandstyle killing of Zimbabwe police officer Superintendent Eric Roberts in Bulawayo in 1982 .
A chapter in theibook, "Zimbabwe's Prospects ", editediby Colin Stoneman (published by Macmillan), suggests that former colleagues in the Rhodesian police murdered him because of his investigations Into whites working against the Mugabe government.
A spokesman for South Africa's Department of Foreign Affairs said last night that it was aware of the book but preferred not to comment until the allegations had been investigated more thoroughly.
Alleged South African destabilisation of Zimbabwe is dealt with in a chapter by journalist Joe Hanlon, who says that whites who stayed on when Zimbabwe became independent were, in south African eyes, traitors to their race and became particular targets.
He also claims that white farmers were targeted by dissidents using South African-supplied ammunition and that South Africa worked hard to widen the Zanu-Zapu split:
Of the sabotage of Zimbabwean Air Force planes in July 1982, he suggests an even more devious plan was put into effect.
The air force was still dominated by whites who had served Ian Smith but who were now serving the new government, says Mr Hanlon. This made them traitors to the white cause. Some of these whites were blámed for the attack. Six were arrested and allegedly tortured before 'being acquitted and expelled from Zimbabwe, "Most other whites left with them, which grounded the air force for the next three years..."

DETAILS of President Robert Mugabe's proposed amnesty for his former political opponents, which have been disclosed here, rule out any possibility of mercy for Matabeleland sibility of mercy for help from South Africa's alleged front organization "Super Zapu".

Mr Mugabe's 1988 clemency order, published in a government gazette extraordinary, pardons dissidenis, their collaborators and supporters of Mr Joshua Nkomo's Zapu Party who fled abroad but specifically: excludes abroad, bu foreign states and those wagents of forelge interests of foreign states".
Pretoria reportedly set up the shadowy "Super Zapu" in 1982 as part of its "destablization" strategy against the destab frontline state neighbours, exploiting the breakup of Mr Mugabe's post-independence government of national unity.

Following the discovery of massive arms caches, Mr Nkomo had been sacked from the cabinet, taking his supporters in Zimbabwe's western Matabeleland provinces into the political wilderness until he signed a unity accord with Mr Múgabe on De cember 22, 1987 .
To celebrate the unity pact, which saw Mr Nkomo restored to senior sabinet rank, Mr Mugabe announced a "general amnesty" on April 19. Spokesmenfor the Ministry of Home Affairs have'said an undisclosed numAer of former dissidents have already taken advantage of it to surrender themselves to police in Matabeleland.
A ministrys statement listèd 16 Zapu supporters who, it said, had been omergency. Some had been in prison since June 1983
Three of those named are currently on trial in the High Court, accused of conspiring with a former Rhodesian police inspector, now allegedly working for the South African security services, Mr Malcolm Calloway. Judia Ncube, Albert Nkomo and Dëbby Nyathi have pleaded not guilty to colNyathing shipments of arms from Calloway in 1982, at secret rendezvous points on the Transvaal-Botswana porder and smuggling them into Matabeleland.:

Mr Justice Ebrahim was told this week their trial would continue in spite of the amnesty. Their detention orders had fallen away, but the judge was forbidden by ministerial certificate from granting them bail. If convicted, they could face the death penalty.
Among the estimated 100 dissidents still lurking in the Matabeleland bush is the notorious Morgan Tsango, who calls himself "Gayigusu" er) and is believed responsibie for the massacre of 16 white missionaries and their families last November at Esigodini, 32 km south of Bulawayo. Security sources say Gagigusu, a Zipraguerty sour mander during the 1972-80 Rhodesian war, may have disqualiRhodesian war, Mr Mugabe's amnesfied himself from Mr "Mugape Za"pu":elety by flirting with "Super Zapu of the ments in 1983-84 at the Matabeleland unrest
According to rural people in the province, sporadic incidents of vioprence are continuing, but on a reduced scale.

| DEAOWE |
| :---: |
|  |
| UnIECSy 562 |
|  |
| HES OL |
|  |
|  |
|  |
|  |
| The Star's Africa Nex Service |
|  |
| , |
| ates, who wourd |
| ies for South Afric |
| le |
| ates, are |
| lly excluded from |
| general amnesty in Zim : |
| babwe which thas been of |
| fered to dissidents ${ }^{\text {a }}$ a aissident |
| collaborators and Zapu polit |
| cical fugitives S |
|  |
| e amnesty was kannounced |
| last month and dissidents |
| have until the end of this |
|  |
| a free pardon. |
|  |
| UGITLYES |
|  |

A Government Gazette notice defines political fugitives' as members or former mem. bers of Mr Joshata Nkomo's Zapu party who left Zimbabwe to avoid ciminal pro. ceedings for offences com. mitted before April 19 to promote the objectives of Zapu:
Dissidents, the term given to rebels in Matabeleland who for the past five years have killed scores of people and destroyed government prop. erty and the homes and belongings of private individuals worth millions of rands, are offered a free pardon for any offence committed for the purpose of promoting or furthering any objective relating to the form or mode of government of Zimbabwe":

SUBVERSION

Certain categories of prisoners servin' jail sentences will alsö benefit from the amnesty, but it will not apply to people in jailfor murder armed robbery rape, house breaking theft, fraud, brib-- ery, corruption of for any offence involving Mandrax
The amnesty will not apply, to four alleged dissidents currenty on trial the the High Court on charges of subversion, recruitind people for bandit training, andypossess-

A lawyer for two of the acchused said defente counsel had met members of the government, including the W then Acting President Mr . SimoncMuzenda, after the

- amnesty announcement but had been told the four were not covered by the amnesty:

The lawyer, Mr Anale Mâtika, said he understood however that 13 other suspected dissidents, who had been held with the four accused, had been released
The men whose trial will resuife today are Mr Albert Nomo Mr Debby Nyathi, Mr Thembani Masonda and Mr Judia Ncube:
Mr NKomo the chef accused, is said by the State to have beebin charge of dissident operations in Zimbabwe, He is a, former Zipra combatant.

Zimbabwean court sets date for (362) Harington'  $:$ HARARE - The appeal of Odile Ha-  envelope of intelligence data to post

rington against her 25 year gaol term for attempting to infiltrate ANC rank's has been set by the Zimbabwean Su-" preme Court for October 10, a spokesman for the South African trade mission confirmed here yesterday.
Miss Harington, 27, who is the daughter of a Johannesburg doctor, was given the maximum sentence when she was convicted under Zimbabwe's'Official Secrets Act in the High Court last November.

The presiding judge, Mr Justice Wilson Sandura, regretted he could not sentence her to be shot by firing squad, and' refused her leave to appeal. This ruling was reversed in January by the Zimbabwean Supreme Court.
Her appeal is likelyto rest on contentions from her defence counsel that her short lived spy mission caused no prejudice to Zimbabwe itself. Posing as a refugee from apartheid she crossed from South Africa in October 1986 and was lodged at an ANC house in Harare's Mabelreign suburb, where her cover was "blown" after two months.
She had diven a Zimbabwean policeman: an inadequately-sealed for her:
The High Court judge refused to accept in mitigation of sentence her evi dence of a prolongued ordeal of torture under interrogation, which she had reported to a Harare magistrate It included sexual degradation ànd precipitated two suicide attempts.
It is believed that the Zimbabwean prison authorities have been keeping Miss Harington under 24 hour surveillance to stop any further bids at suicide-and her cell light is kept on all the time.
As àmaximum security prisoner she has: been refused permission to study for a Unisa correspondence course, and spends her days trying to learn Shona from her guards:
The South African Government has denied there are any plans to exchange convicted ANC sympathisers Helena Passtoors, and Marion Sparg for Harington. The latter was described at her trial 'as "not a Mata Hari, not a super-spy, but someone who is pathetically naive".

For the first three months of her sentence she wäs allowed no contáct with the outside world but is now permitted one visitor a month:-DDC

CAPE TOWN - The traffic tonnage handled by South African harbours for Zimbabwe has sharply increased in recent years, but has steadily declined in the case of Zambia and Zaire.
The Minister of Transport Affairs, Mr Eli Louw, was replying to a question from Mr Clive Derby-Lewis (CP nominated).
Mr Louw said traffic tonnage handled for Zimbabwe had increase from 415113 tons in 1983/84 to 541368 tons in 1984/85 and 963589 tons in 1986/87.

Figures during the corresponding years for Zambia were 238095,161224 and 61668.

In the case of Zaire ton nage dropped from 312537 to 310885 to 227512 . - DDC

dent leader, Gayigusu;
said to be the leader of the gang which hacked to death 16 whites including women and children at éa mission farm in Matabele land last November tias surrendered under Zim:
babwe's: amnesty terms
The officer command ing police in Mâtabele land South said Gayl?
gusu whose real name ts Morgan Sango gave him self up on Saturday with nine other dissidents.
Pardon
Dissidents who surren dered before the end of this month were offeteday fred pardon for crmes committed for the put pose of promoting fany objective relating to the form or mode of gove mentor Zimbabwe
The killers of the pils sionaries at the Community of $\because$ Reconciliation farms near Esigodiṇ left a note saying they were fighting for liberation. The dissidents were said to have been called to the farms by squaters who had been orderédoff the properties.

[^4]
2-al|II|

pioqeilo fuopissia

 S6UITOSW

 natamos (2,
 'sə!!!urej ino jo siaquau
 [1uәณ Suno popinssin, "sәлןәsuәч? sұนәр!ss!p $\rightarrow$

Notorious killer will (320 get amnesty pardon

The Star's Africa News Service ed like any other dissdent who had surrendene wi the time th 2 at dissidents 0 i HARARE - The Rimbabwean government will treat Gayigusu, the notorious dissident killer, like any other dissident who has taken up the offer of a free "pardon under the amnesty terms.

This was made clear today by a government spokesman who was asked if in view of the enormity of the crime committed by the gang said to have been led by Gayigusu, the amnesty would apply' to him
Last November the dis-silents massacred 16 men, women and children nat tut o mission farms in Matabeleland. The victime were taken singly into a room and hacked to death. is The spokesman said Gayigusu would be treatlimitallowed large in Matabeleland That is what is meant have surrendered under by reconciliation he the amnesty:

said.

Gayigusu gave himself up last weekend at Kezi in southern Matabeleland and was taken to $G$ wanda where the was being treated for an axe wound to his right arm.

ATTACK 5 g In church circles in Matabeleland there is speculation that the gang leader could have been injured in an attack on another mission station last month when a born priest was killedisk a reporter that he had That attack occurred been received very well on April 19, the day the by the government and amnesty $y_{1}$ was announced: Officially the pardon applies to crimes" commit-

In Bülawayó yesterday The Chronicle newspaper carried a picture of a former dissident; now dressed in a threepiece suit who was in town with his wife to collect money owed to him by his former employer; He thad been a machine minder with National Foods before taking to the bush where he operated under the name Tambolenyoka:
"Call me Tenses Ndiobeen received very well the public.
"I am a changed person, said Mríndlovu
 $-$

Zimbabwe frees detained relatives of alleged SA spy

Daily Dispatch D D Imo Garrison, outside Correspondent $/ 9$ Harare, in 1981; the sabHARARE - The father, otage of jet fighters at uncle and brother of one Thornhill Air Force of ' Zimbabwe's most/ Base in 1982;, the bombwanted men - the al- ing of the ruling Zanu leged South African $\delta(\mathrm{PF})$ party headquaragent, Mr Christopher ters; and attacks on "Kit" Bawden - were South African exilès released at the week end, after nearly four months in detention under the state of emergency
Mr John Bawden, 68 his son Gregory, 30; and his younger brother, Desmond, 61 , were detained in January a few days after Mr Christopher Bawden crossed into South Africa.
Mr John Bawden's third son, Guy, and Mr Desmond Bawden's son, Bairy, have been formally charged and have been remanded here in connection with allegations of espionage and of murdering the occupant of a car outside an African National Congress house' in Bulawayo on January 11.
They are due to go on trial in November.
Friends of the family feared that Mr John Mr Desmond and Mr Gregory Bawden were being held under the state of emergency in an attempt to compel Mr Christopher Bawden to return to Zimbabwe to face allegations of assisting South African "destabiLisation attacks on the state over a six year period.

He is alleged to have been involved in the blowing up of a R22 mil iion depository of guerilla weaponry at Inkconnected with the ANC. 362
Mr Justice- Blackie gave a ruling in the: $\mathrm{Bu}-$ lawayo High Court that there were no reasonable grounds for concluding that Mr John. Mr Desmond and Mr Gregory Bawden knew of the activities of Mr Christopher Bawden, who is now thought to be in Johannesburg.
Mr Justice Blackie ordered their immediate release,
The three men had been held at Khami jail, outside Bulawayo, and at Chikurubi maximum security prison, Harare.
Legal precedents es tablished in the case of two former customs officers, Mr Neil Harper and Mr John Austin, compel the Zimbabwean President: Mr Robent Mugabe's" security men to show reasonable grounds of suspicion against security detai nees, who may theoreti cally be held without trial indefinitely, under the state of emergency.
$\qquad$
$\qquad$ $i$

Malan wârns Angola as Cubans

Daily Dispatch Correspondents
CAPE TOWN - The Minister of Defence, General the southward advance of Cuban again yesterday that and he accused Zimbe of Cuban troops had to stop and he accused Zimbabwe of effectively "declaring war" on South Africa.

[^5]ved in the "export of smolution and terrorGeneral Republic. that while South Africa was prepared to co-exist with its "marxist neighbours" it would fight all attion into to export revol ution into the country.
"We will fight it in

- every imaginable manner, conventional and necessary," he said.
"While Mr Mugab turned in stone un South Africa of destabiinsation and other horrendous deeds, his counrys otficial policy and financial political or the ANC.
General Malan said acts that could be traced back to Zimbabwe had increased by 52 per cent ast year compared with [^6]who thaye murdered and plundered in Matabeleland to go free was a bitter pill to swallow but the only way to end the killing:

That was the reaction of former Royal Marine Biil Kirby, leader of the smail band of commercial farmers in Matabeleland, who have seen more than 70 members of the white community there slain by dissidents in the past six years.
. Mr Kirby and others like him have mourned the deaths of their friends and lived on their nerves. But they have often called for a political solutionand the unity agreement reached between Mr Robert Mugabe añid Mr Joshua Nkomo last December paved the d way for the events of the past fewheeks.
The amnesty offers a free pardon to those who surrender themselves and their weapons to the authorities before the end of May for any offence committed before April 19 in connection with their activities as dissidents and committed "for the purpose of promoting or furthering any objective relating to the form

Robiṇ Orew reports from Harare  or mode of government of Zimbabwe".Dissident collaborators are alsooffered a pardon, as are fugivities, who fled the country.

This month has seen scoress of meetings around Matabeleland, some addressed by Joshua Nkomo himiself, now a Senior Minister in Mr Mugabe's Government but still president of Zapu.
It was in Zapu's name that countless atrocities were committed from 1982 up to the very day the amnesty was announced last month when a German-born priest was killed.
Perhaps the most savage incident was the hacking to death last November of 16 white men, women and children at two mission farms-near Esigodini run by the Community of Reconciliation, an evangelical group of Christians, who had had problems with squatters.
Gayigusu was named as the leader of the gang and he is one of a score of dissidents who by the middile of the month had responded to the appeal to give themselves up. Like Mr Kirby, many Zimbabweans are torn in two by the amnesty offer. They appreciate that something more had to be done to restore peace than to call on the dissidents to come out of the bush But the thought of allowing killers who acted with unspeakable brutality in some icases to go scot free repels them.
'MISGUIDED'

Mr Nkomo has often condemned the actions of dissidents but he more than anybody else is able to speak with sincerity in his appeals to "them to take advantage of the amnesty,
For throughout the troubled years Mr Nkomo has always 'avoided dänning "tfie dissidënts thèm̄iselvès. "MYisguided young men" was how he frequently referred to them:
And now he makes the point when hé speaks to audiencessin Matabeleland that the men who must be accepted and indeed welcomed back are "our children, members of our families".

The dissidents who have come out of the bish this month are the lucky onés. By August 1985, ácording to government figurés 600 "bandits" and coliáborators hád béen killéds:

By the end of that year moretitian 300 people had been killed byildissidents." Sometimes there was no apparent motive for the killing escept to terrorise. In other cases dissidents were clearly following a strategy of trying to drive (and succeeding in certain areas) whites off the land which was then occupied by squatters. 'We are your liberators, not the government"; was the message.
Officials of the ruling party were also targeted at times:

- Matabeleland suffered as development schemes were shelved and Bulawayo stagnăted:
Now there are signs atlast that the dissident episode is ending offi-: cials are hopeful that a newis spread that the mesty is being osserved, the surrender rate will grow The: Star'staftcanews Service.

4 Cape Times, Thursday, May 19, 1988

By ANTHONY JOHNSON Political Correspondent

THE Minister of Defence, General Magnus Malan, accused Zimbab we of effectively "declaring war" on South Africa and said the Mugabe government was increasingly involved in the "export of revolution and terrorism" to the Republic.
It was clear that Zimbabwe planned to "extend and strengthen its support for the revolutionaries", he said.
While South Africa was prepared to co-exist with its "Marxist neighbours" it would fight all attempts to export revolution into the country.
"We will fight it (revolution) every imaginable manner, conventional and unconventional", he warned in a hardhitting speech in the defence vote in the House of Assembly.
"While Mr Mugabe leaves no stone unturned in accusing South Africa of destabilization and other horrendous deeds, his country's official policy includes moral, political and financial support for the ANC.
Clandestine military support and help, as well as transit facilities are given to the ANC," he said.
The number of terrorist acts that could be traced back to Zimbabwe had increased by $52 \%$ last year compared with 1986.
He said the weapons cache found in. the Broederstroom raid last week had been brought in through Zimbabwe and Botswana.
There was also an ANC politicalmilitary regional committee in Zimbabwe which liaised with Cuba and the USSR and was responsible for "clandestine military' activities" including intelligence and support action during infiltration attempts into South Africa.
Many ANC members were housed among the local population and the ANC had weapons' storage points in Harare from which they were-smuggled into South Africa, he said:

General Malan quoted a speech Mr Mugabe made on Soweto Day in 1986 in which he said: "The only language the Boer will understand is the language of the gun. A bullet for a bullet, they will understand that very easily. The Borers are afraid to die, they fear death. The more of them you kitl, the nearer you get to your goal.," General Malan said: "If this is not a declaration of war, I would like to know how you declare war."

Alleged 'spies for ${ }^{6 i}$. SA' in courtt again

HARARE - Two Britons, accanadian, an Irishman and two Zimbabweans who have been detained as alleged South African spies appeared in court this week. They were remanded in custody to June 20.

The prosecutor said the State needed more time to complete investigations.
The six accused face charges under the Official Secrets Act and;'if convicted, could face a sentence of up to 25 years' jail.
${ }^{2}$ They were detained under emergency regulations in September after Mr Ivor Harding (55), a Zimbabwean, was allegedly found at Beitbridge border post with information on Zimbabwe-based officials of the ANC.

The six allegedly carried out surveillance on the homes and vehicles of ANC, Pan-Africanist Congress officials and South African exiles in Zimbabwe for South African security services.

Several ANC officials have been killed in sabotage attacks allegedly mounted by South Africa in Zimbabwe and other black-ruled states during the past two years.
Among those detained are Mr Jack Lewis Walker (54), a senior public servant and provostmarshal in the Rhodesian Air Force before independence in 1980; Briton Ms Patricia Brown (53); Canadian Mr Dick Laban (50); Zimbabwe-born Mr Jeffrey Mee (45), who holds an Irish passport; amd Mr Ivor Harding and his son Clive (25).

* They previously appeared in court on April 20.

They were denied bail. - Sapa-AP

SHIPPING  Choppy seas ahead

Zimbabwe's entry into the field of commercial shipping looks leaky even before it sets sail.

The creation of Zimsor Shipping is intended to reduce dependence on South African ports and shippers by making use of Beira, in Mozambique. South African maritime inter ${ }^{2}$ ests, however, doubt it has much chance of success.
The government-backed line was set up with capital of $Z $ 300000$. Even UK agent representative John Neary, who leaves London for Beira next month to get the line under way, concedes it is a speculative operation.
Nevertheless, his job is to try to win business and enable importers and exporters to make less use of South African ports Zimsor plans initially to use a 4500 t freighter to carry mainly agricultural exports. But the fact that Beira has a wharfside depth of only 6 m , suffers plant problems through lack of maintenance, and offers no repair or overhaul facilities, may lead to difficulties.
The poor state of Mozambican ports has in the past persuaded South African shipping operators to seek business in other, more convenient, waters.
At the same time, Mozambican ships visited Durban for overhaul - and there are suggestions that the new company may have to do the same, despite its stated intention of taking business from SA.

All this presupposes, of course, that Zimbabwean exports can reach Beira, and imports return safely. The rail link remains vulnerable to guerrilla attack despite heavy policing by Mozambican and Zimbabwean

Captain Mulurdika, in Harare for a touristiconference, disclosed that a feasibility report had been submitted to the governments of Zambia, Zimbabwe, Botswana, Malawi, Uganda and $r$ Tanzania.
"It is a feasible commercial proposition and it is now for the governments to take the political decision,"'he said.
The Zambians are known be unhappy with having 75 percent of 235 z seats unoccupied to date on their newly acquired DC10, which inaugu$n$ rated a service to the United States last month.

Veterans of the travel industry in Harare said the idea of inter-governmental airline co-operation has always seemed inviting, but the sad history of East African Airways, and the West African. "Air Afrique"" reveal major practical difficulties in sustaining joint ventures between debt-ridden third world states. Shared facilities suffer from competing notions of national prestige, and it is hard to financial responsibility rests.
:चи०पव
1
Səฺฺฺฺดbuษ
: Х070əコ!

: ououd

:Ssoxppy

HOWDICNI

良然量

GWERUU (Zimbabwe)
Five Air Zimbabwe managers have been demoted, two others have resigned and an accounting manager has been' süspend́ed' the'acting chairman of the Air Zimbabwe board; Mr Kennedy Manyika, said yesterrday.
The crackdown on the officials followed a petition, signed by eight managers, concerning the general manager, Mr Fungai Musara, the national news agency, Ziana, reported.
In a statement issued yesterday, Mr Manyika said the managers had drayn up a document which contained some allegations against the general manager.
"The board carried out extensive investigations tinto all the alle tions contained in the documents including other peripheral issifg thate had been raised during the investigations:"
Individual interviews were also held to enable the eight managers to further elaborate their allegations or to sub stantiate them, hé said.
The board concluded that the managers had committed a very serious misdemeanour in that they had disregarded the procedures or airing grievances and failed to substäntiate 'the allegation that they had made againist the genieral manager., mat
Mr Manyika said the board viewed such disregard very seriously as well as the fact that the petition had found thits way to the Press before it could be considered
"It was thërefore re solved that they be de-moted."-Sapa

See also P16

snolany pabog

rounding the national carrier. manager, the head of electronic data pro-

0

 ${ }_{2}^{2}$ ,
 SMEN
"down their "arms" and surrender themselves to the police and security forces," the Minister of Home Affairs, Mr Moven
Mane Affairs,
The amnesty was announced on April 19 by President Robert Mugabe to bolster a-merger pact between Zimbabwe's two main political parties and end a five year-old rebellion in Matabelelănd and adjacent Midlands prov: ince.
But just a week before the deadline only 30 of the estimated 100 rebels.
active in the provinces had accepted the amnesty, despite personal appeals from Mr Joshuà Nkomo, the leaderof the minority PF-Zapuparty.
'st The rebellion "in the two provinces broke out in 1982 after Mr'Mugàbe sacked Mr Nkomo and his senior lieutenants from his coalition gov ernment after arms cachies were found on caches ${ }_{\text {PF }}$ Were PFapu farms.
The rebels mostly former fighters under Mr Nkomo in a nationalist guerillá war which led to independence in 1980 killed score of people and destroyed state property worth millions of dollars between 1982 and 1987: - Sapà-RNS

Rio Tinto expansion obstructed  HARARE - PHo Tinto chairman Doug:  reasons why this would result in benefit

las Sagonda says that, as a multi-nà tional company, efforts to expand in Zimbabwe were being obstructed by the government, reports the official news agency Ziana:
He told the annual meeting of shareholders of Rio Tinto, which is in the forefront of gold mining in Zimbabwe, that despite various drawbacks, "our balance sheet is healthy and we can use our initiative and resources to grow?:
But he went on: "It "s, however, with some regret that as a multi-nationa company we are unduly hampered in our efforts to grow because of government action.

We cannot take over local companies or acquire a stake of more than 15 percent in such a company without foreign investment committee approval, even though we can demonstrate very good both to our customers and the nation.
"Against this" background it is" somewhat ironic that government allows us to earn only five percentit on our surplus funds, a negative real return of approximately 10 percent", said Mr Sagonda
He said Zimbabwe continued to ex́pañ püblic ownership and develop central control of the economy using scarce foreign exchange:
"If we wish to attract badly needed foreign capital, create more employment, raise the living standards and address the many social problems which face us as a developing nation, we can hardly afford to penalise or neglect companies that have demonstrated in the past; that they are capable of achieving success in these objectives while remaining responsible, concerned citizens of "Zimbabwe", he said- Sapa of , int

HARARE

 fies, ront Iicen yes and import dininer condomate at the conversation babwe's blacks and whites 4 How to obtains. maintain vehicless: the discussion as the government has cut for for cars$\qquad$ $y / 7 n$ ? sur we faces severe shortages of cars and spare

01 C  $\qquad$ prepared to rency allocations for sf cut foreign curthe past fewi years. private vehiclestint The country's "povon" Ye ple) make do with "povo" (ordinary peoand make do with antiquated; crowded the vechicit to pay the $86 \%$ import duity $Z \$ 250000$ ( $\$ 150$ sell for anything duty, This will bu000):pose as much mangtained buses which swimming puyol and teproperty with a a exclusive ssurburbs, or a count in the enoughto to harare, which tare widesto purtail profiteering on ent has tried to enough to turn a spanof i8ioxen, have aub price, optrols for ne on car sales, with ter along Ancirent Morris:Minors putasa wite ift can do about vehicles, there is means of, locomoctione, more; than sill overheads say because of poffset large house three times'on:\% could buy my ary of trade they mecause of poop volume smy Mercedes," seyer for the price of mot to make pp, soses. under the coin. nessmani: w Motorists claim the mes oxtended to coyer private they pay be pal victims of a governare the princies so those government is now allows. non-essential a impornmment squeeze on 1 int theire woicannot pay local price aing nelling 'scarce imports iaimed, at chan. debt.repayments foreign currency into rency torbyy, cheap secon foreign cour port industries.

Business org. ernment's: miganisations say the gov-: fotherwise be scrapped cars that might neighbouringlitary commitment in by Zimbabweans 4 are snapped up neighbouring Mozambique, whent in , ,bring in a vehicle family of four can estimated 12000 Zimbabwe, where an ut, without in an vehicle worth up to to $Z $ 2,000$ also draining foreignsexchange.
 crippled the country's two vehicle as , ma: Zimbabwe's fuel prand maintain it:

12000 cars from which in 1982 produced Confederation of 7 . This year, says the CZI) :only 2000 . Zimbäbwe Industries The estimated were assembled.

ger carseand light demand for passen

 here is 20000 hit commercial vehicles at ancinnol a yearysorweiare lookis at ansannual. shortfall of 18000 looking CZI económist Mike HumphryThe critical short Humphry pickings for some A rage has led to rich after twó years abr esident returning new Mercedes, whoad can bringitina $$ 30^{\circ} 000$, duty free, which might cost
After two of imported the world and the variet of spare parts has created a problety available parts, which are simply sum All but a few of five or six models vehicles are few of Zimbabwe's 225000 vehicles are over five years 225000 ered a colletle; which might valuent easily a collector's item elsewherconsidfou fetch $Z $ 3000$-triple the ere, will r five years ago Car theft is rife ter Emimerson ${ }^{*}$ M even Justice Minis car was stolen enangagwa's official conference on crime was addressing a March. - Reuter.

TIS old iron barrow laden with sacks and boxes, Mike Nemgomasha pushes his way between the roaring, smokey buses and the seething crowds at Harare's Mibare Musika terminus.
The carts earn the porters about R14 a week, less than half the minimum wage.
"I came from camps in Mozambique in 1981, my family at Rusape all died in the war and I had no land. I came here two years ago to find work to support my wife and two children," Mr Nemgomasha said.

Like thousands of other former combatants, he prefers the hard and dangerous market work to unemployment in the countryside.

The plight of nearly 40000 former guerillas of the two black organisations which secured indepèndence in 1980 has been highlighted in Zimbabwe's Parliament.

Members acknowledged that the guerillas of Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army (Zanla) and Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe People's Revolutionary Army (Zipra) had been largely abandoned in the post-independence scramble for material success and political influènce.
"The promises made during the liberation struggle; the questions that they asked during their training and in camps - none have borne any fruit whatsoever. Promises, empty promises. Financially they have received a pittance," said Major-General Jevan Maseko, a former guerrilla commander and now an MP.

After ${ }^{7}$ independence three forces - two guerrilla and the Rhodesian regular army, a total of 145000 men - were honed down to form the 45000 -strong Zimbabwe National Army. Those demobilised were given about R150 a month for two years as severance pay.
"Their social battle after independence was more depressing for them than the military engagements before," commented Paul Themba Nyathi of the Zimbabwe Project, which helps former insurgents who form co-operatives.

Local authorities employ a few thousand as local police and some have government posts as drivers and messengers.
The estimated 3000 co-operatives formed by guerillas who pooled their severance pay were hailed as the logical consequence of a "socialist armed struggle" - but many have collapsed for lack of managerial and financial skills, credit facilities or simply under-capitalisation,
Ex-combatants maintain they never asked for handouts, nor expected political changes overnight, but view with bitterness their former adversaries comfortably established while they still struggle, handicapped by their lack of edu-cation.
Black soldiers who served in the former Rhodesian army have been looked after with pensions and benefit, say the ex-guerillas, from a bias favouring conventional training, especially under British-sponsored programmes.
"Those (former Rhodesian) soldiers laugh at us, ask us where our war has got us now," says James Godo, 35, who left Rhodesia in 1977 to join guerrilla camps in Mozambique.
When a new 5000 -strong brigade was formed in 1986 it was school-leavers and not guerillas who were recruited.
One MP suggested ex-guerillas should receive pensions backdated to the time when they shouldered arms, but the government, wary of fraudulent claims, has made no promises. Prospects outside the military structures are little better.
Anticipating the post-independence boom in the private security industry, white officers resigned from the forces, taking hand-picked men from their units for better-paying jobs in companies.
Mr Nyathi says that in the white-dominated private sector, ex-guerillas are regarded at best as unreliable and sometimes still as "terrs" (terrorists) and a source of labour unrest: But disabled ex-combatants are sometimes, given sheltered "showcase employment" such as manning switchboards.

An embarrassing disclosure to Parliament was that some former guerillas had sought employment in South African mines.

Letters to local magazines show how indeLetters to local magazines show hom sidered a threat in Zimbabwe's fiercely patriarchal society, and both men and women insurgents are looked down on by contemporaries who studied abroad during the conflict instead of taking up arms.
The parliamentary debate has nudged the national conscience and exposed official unease over thousands of highly politicised, unfulfilled former guerillas "roaming the streets".

$31 / 5 / 88$. B/day

-

 e' sxetiop jo suotniuu jo spaxpuny jo cop.o

 $\overline{\text { uolmonpord }} \cdots$ ad

 Zimbabwè' said the industry needed the $\mathbf{Z $ 2 0 m}$ earmarked for exploration this

 ZMBABWE MOOC investment Was, needed in miningeeporation to expand production 20102 exchange to type mechanism for investment in added: - Reuter parms encouraged to invest.

 at least two year necessary local investment, Thus another eight such mines need to be mine to produce 1,5 tons a year for about five New.mines, anide an additional 2,7 tons of others, will provid.
new bold by 1990 , 1088 is seven tons and in sdiscernible benefit: To. woo foreign investment, he suggested that Zimbabwe should offer gold exploration equit swaps - a variation of Soith Ameri8utunoos!a

 -u! IIX S.

 -ptes КемеाIOH "quau
 $\qquad$
-

HARARE - President Robert Mugabe's gamble in offering an amnesty to rebels appears to be paying off with the surrender of more than 50 armed "dissidents" in 24 hours
Police and government officials said 41 rebels gave themselves up at Nkayi in northern Matabeleland on Sunday
Sixteen more surrendered yesterday in Plumtree, nean the Botswana border.
The amnesty offer made by President Mugabe on April 19 expires at midnight tonight. The government has ruled out any extension and said any rebels"who do not surrender by the deadline will be hunted down:
The latest batch to lay down their weapons brought the number of rebels to have accepted the governments offer to 94 , out of an estimated total of about 100
Iam sure now the others will come out, 1 am positive, a senior security official told reporters yesterday.
The Nkayi group was the largest to give itself ap and the first to surrender in northern Matabeleland, where the rebels mis trust of government intentions has ruin deeper than elsewhere
The rebels, armed with AK-47 automatic weapons, have made large areas of Matabeleland and the neighbouring Midlands province unsafe for the past five years; killing dozens of white farmers and government officials.
The worst single killing was last Novernber when a group of dissidents, led by a man named Gayigusu, hacked to death 16 white membérs of a Christian community, including two babies.
Gayigusu was among the dissidents who surrendered early this month. One white farmer described the offer of an am nesty as a bitter pill to swallow, but said it was the government's only way to bring peace back to the region.
The dissidents are the remnants of a wider insurgency which originated in the post-independence struggle for power between Zimbabwe's two main political movements, Mr Mugabe's Zanu- PF and Mr Joshua Nkomo's PFZZapu.
Most of the rebels were former guerillas loyal to Mr Nkomo who took to the bush after their leader was sacked by Mr Mugabe from government in 1982 and accused of planining a coup.

Church groups accused the army's Fifth Brigade of com mitting atrocities against civilLans in trying to put down the rebellion, which Mr Nkomo later clearly disowned.
Mr Mugabe and Mr Nomo agreed in December to merge their two parties, paving the Way for the amnesty
Mr Nkomo now a senior Minister in Múgabe's govern ment has thrown his prestige into the balance in Matabele land by urging dissidents and their supporters to accept the amnesty: Reuter:

HARARE. - The Zimbabwean governmenthaobeen embarrassed in the midst of its moves to bury the hatchet between the ruling Zanu (PF) and former Zapu opposition party by the start of a court case arising from the disappearance in January 1985 of nine Zapu members.

The Roman Catholic Church is assisting relatives of the nine, all small-scale commercial farmers from the Silobela area of the Zimbabwean Midlands, to seek a High Court order forcing the authorities to disclose their as-yet unknown fate or their whereabouts. :
Their counsel, Mr Dermaird Carter, sald he would seek to prove "the abductors were members of the security forces or employees of the state".

HARARE. - With one day to go betore their deadline expires a total of 91 anti-government rebels had surrendered yesterday under a government amnesty which glves them a free pardon, officials said. Almost all the armed Zimbabwe dissidents in the Plumtree area are believed to have surrendered in terms of the amnesty.
The national news agency Ziana reports that three more rebels were expected to surrender last night.
According to police sources, two of them have shown resistance and cocked their rifles when police approached them recently to discuss their surrender.

So far 100 dissidents have surrendered to the authorities.
Twenty-one reported to police in Plumtree today. In northern Matabeleland, 41 surrendered at Nkayi on Sunday night.

Police said a group of 15 rebels surrendered themselves and their weapons yesterday at Plumtree on the southern border with Botswana. - Sapa and UPI Black Zimbabweans, white Zimbabweans or plain old ordinary Zimbabweans?

Officially all citizens here are Zimbabweans with no colour label. The Government's policy as spelt out by former Justice Minister Dr Eddison Zvobgo favours the non-racial approach.
"It is not a multiracial policy", he said when the special seats for whites were removed from Parliament. "We are not going to make special provision for different races. But whatever we do will reflect our non-racial stand.":
$\therefore$ But eight years after indepen dence, the labels are still in evidence with the current debate focusing on the apparent reluctance of whites to turn out for political rallies and at functions to mark days of national importance.

The matter was first given prominence by Mr Joshua Nkomo, who has been at pains to stress that the unity pact he signed with President Mugabe signified far more than the merging of two parties. It was, he maintained, a beacon lighting the unification of the people of all political persuasions and colours.

Zvobgo . . . non-racial stance.
But white faces at unity rallies are a rare sight and earlier this month a senior Zapu official, Mr Norman Mabhena, accused the whites of being "unwavering fence sitters"
A fence is not the best place to sit, said Mr Mabhena: One has to be inside or outside. Fence sitters reminded him of the colonial days.
Whites in Zimbabwe are outnum bered by about 80 to one, but their economic clout does not reflect this and no doubt contributes to the attention paid to thé community as such.
The attacks have made some people uneasy one, in a letter given prominence in the Herald newspaper, warned that whites were being alienated because they were continually being singled out for criticism on the basis of skin colour.
The writer, SD Spooner of BuTawayo, appealed to the Government and to responsible people every where to stop racial categorisation Sports bodies were being asked why there were not more blacks in ther teams, there was still talk of black adyancement and official correspondence insisted on certain jobs being filled by people of a certain skin colour.
"Let's base our society on true non-racialism, merit in sport and the workplace, cand onloyalty and patriotism, was his pleat Another letter writer, who chose the nom de plume "Shaken Minority, said political leaders were practising racialism in reverse.
The letter said. It took you, as victims, eight long years to realise what you fought for and to rally behind the Government.
Many of our kith and kin, missionaries and farmers minding their own affairs, were massacred during a free Zimbabwe.
"We have our trials and tribulations and are still overcoming the hurt and left-overs of the diehards that have long left the country?
Leave the minority groups alone and let those who stayed work hard in their own way, hé appealed -

Zimbabwe church group moves to left

HARARE - A new direction to the left was take by the Reform Ecumenical Synod (RES), when it elected as president the Reverend Clarence Booms ma of the Chinstian Reformed Church in America (CRC) yesterday.
Mr Boomsma, who has a conciliatory approach but who ss expected to favour Third World con cerns, succeeds the conservative Reverend John Gal
 Amen $x^{2}$ OPC
Mr da

 rmed churches as Mr Boomsma, of the 20 (xadus

Minister walks out of Communion service

By Carinale Grange The Star's Africa News Service 32
HARARE $\quad \mathrm{Dr}$ NICO Stnith of the black Ned Geref Kerk in FAfrika (NGKA) on Monday night walked out of the Communion service which served as the opening ceremony of the Reformed Ecumenical Synod (RES) in Harare. Dr Smith said the sacredness of Holy Communion would be affected by members of the different NG churches participat ing while "unbrotherly" attitudes existed.

CRIICISM
He referred to the NGK executive committee's. recent criticism of Dr Allan Boesak and Archbishop Desmond Tutu The sharp attack against Dr Boesak was made without any prior discussion with Dr Boesak and Dr Smith found this unacceptable.

Zealand want the RCN to leave the RES because of oured. NG Sendingkerk, Buti; moderator of the NGKA, were not at the opening but are expected later in the week.
The Rev Willem Velema of the Christian Re- morning. It is believed he died from a heart attack.

Refugees going    GABORONE - Some 378 Zimbabwean refugees have registered for repatriation since the Zimbabwe senior Ninister in the office of the president, Mr Joshina camp on May 18 . the 3678 refugees at a settlementMadibe settlement commandant; Mr Edison Sapa: disclosed this inan interview this week.-

> Bissidents surrenderHARAR 36 早位ve more dissidents gave themselves up to authorities in Bulawayo's rural south district yesterday.
> This brought to 113 the total who have surrendered so far under the government's amnesty, a police spokesman said.
> The 12 gave themselves up just 12 hours before the amnesty was due to expire
> They came in after the Member of Par > liament for Mzingwane, Mr Thenjiwe Lesabe, addressed them in Matobo, about 35 km south of Bulawayo.
> This district was one of the hardest hit by dissidents and its national park was apparently closed because of them - Sapa.

2HE

ZIMBABWE

Partly thawed

Three months after relaxing the wage freeze imposed last June, Zimbabwe has eased the price freeze with the announcement that firms may increase prices by up to $5 \%$.

Predictably, this has gone over in business like the proverbial lead balloon. Managers say costs have risen by three or even four times that amount in the past 18 months.
The new regulations require companies to justify price increases in a written statement; government reserves the right to cancel any increase it thinks unjustified. This is seen as little more than political rhetoric, since there is no way the overstretched Ministry of Trade and Commerce will be able to scrutinis carefully thousands of written submissons it will receive in the next few weeks.

More serious is the requirement that firms which want increases of more than $5 \%$ must submit detailed applications and await a ministerial ruling. Executives, believe this will mean prolonged delays; applications submitted in mid-1988 will not be adjudicated until sometime next year.
Prices of controlled products - such as basic necessities - are also not affected and will not change until the minister agrees.
It was always obvious that government would find it much more difficult to dismanthe the price freeze than to impose it, but the administrative chaos likely to result from the latest move has depressed businessmen at a time when the economy seems set for a period of strong growth, thanks to buoyant farm production, excellent tobacco prices and the boom in base minerals. Stockbrokers say share prices, which rose by more than $80 \%$ in the 15 months to April, have gone into decline.
Nor is there any comfort for government from trade unions, which complain that price rises will erode their February pay award (more than $15 \%$ for the lowest paid) and predict that by the end of the year, real wages will be no higher than before. They have history on their side, since real wages have been falling since 1982 .
This harsh political reality encouraged the administration to keep as tight a rein on prices as possible. But, with State corporations demanding major price increases if they are to reduce operating losses and many companies warning that they need price hikes of at least $15 \%$ to remain profitable, the stage is set for rapid inflation in the second half-year.
The freeze virtually halved inflation, from more than $14 \%$ last May to $8 \%$ in the first quarter of 1988. But by the final quarter, inflation is likely to be in the region of $15 \%$.風

FINANCIAL MAIL JUNE 31988
a

\title{

In the heart of the country: Two AK-47s at the door

\section*{PETER WELLMAN visits the

PETER WELLMAN visits the strife-ravaged Zimbabwe south in the final week of the amnesty for dissidents

FATHER Neil Pierce loves the stars in the clear African sky, but he closes the curtains on them every time the sun goes down.
Inside, he is at comfort on his sofa, ale in hand, as he was in the Swan, his local pub in Huddersfield, north England, 20 years ago.
Outside, two policemen in camouflage check their AK-47s for the night watch.
Pierce is headmaster of Cyrene Mission School, an Anglican institution in the heart of Zimbabwe's dissident country. On 12000 acres of flat, open farmland, it seems peacefully rural, 10 km away from the nearest town, Figtree.
The policemen give the lie to the illusion: young, fit and alert, they never move without their rifles, the butts of which have the scratched and worn look that comes from hard use rather than target practice.
Police have guarded the mission since dissidents shot up the school bus at the end of 1986, wounding the driver.
Pierce hopes Président Robert'Mugabe's April amnesty offer to dissidents will bring peace to an area where several white farmers have been killed.
But the priest is not putting too much faith in dissidents who have killed and maimed thousands of Zimbabweans since independence from Britain in 1980.
The dissidents were supporters of opposition leader Dr Joshua Nkomo during the eight-year independence war. Instead of enjoying the peace, they went to war against their own people: and the white farmers in their southern. Matabeleland province.
The amnesty follows last December's unity áccord between Mugabe and Nkomo.

Over a hundred surrender

WHEN Zimbabwe's six-week amnesty offer to dissidents expired at midnight on Wednesday, 113 ex- fighters surrendered. The amnesty has been a success, said Home Affairs Minister Moven Mahachi.
He urged those who had given themselves up to show police where they had hidden weapons, which "could be dangerous if lefi in the bush." Earlier, he warned that any dissidents at large after the deadline would be hunted down mercilessly.
Said one Western diplomat: "The amnesty is good news as part of unity progress between President Robert Mugabe and (former opposition leader) Dr Joshua Nkomo. "The number that surrendered cannot be seen as disappointing, but of course some hard-core rebels may still be out in the bush."

Pierce said of the amnesty: "It is a good idea, it seems to be working initially, at least.
"We have hopes, but we remain on guard on official advice.
"The main dissident leader here, a man called Nason, has surrendered and we are grateful for that."
Because of the police guard and remaining uncertainty, Pierce insisted I stay the night. A favourite dissident tactic has been after-dark shootouts on the 32 km main road to Bulawayo. His wife, Christine, 39, from Durham, always prepares a large meal for afternoon visitors who prefer not to run the AK gauntlet back to town.
The house has the wide verandah and whitewash that is typical of white settler communities. It is pleasant to sit there and watch the sun go down over the tranquil bushveld.
But then it is inside for the night, behind curtains on police advice.
Pierce sometimes cheats, going out for a stroll in the grounds under the stars, but he never strays far from his home.
Born in New Zealand, he did not choose Zimbabwe. "I wept when I read Cry the beloved country, Alan Paton's famous liberal book on South Africa, I was determined to go there.
"When I was offered a job in Smith's Rhodesia, I was reluctant. Bishop Trevor Huddlestone (veteran British anti-apartheid campaigner) persuaded me to go.

"Christine and I arrived in Bulawayo in 1975, when the war was hotting up. We were expecting loneliness.
"You could call me a democratic Western European socialist. But we were relieved to find some progressives among the white community," he said.
Several months ago he was transferred to Cyrene, a mission started in the 1930s by Cannon Ned Peterson, a visionary priest and London-trained artist who built an exceptionally beautiful school chapel. Inside and out, its whitewashed walls are alive with exquisite, brightly coloured religious murals. Generations of pupils trained at Cyrene's thriving art school have added to Peterson's work.
Pierce aims at the Christian teaching of loving God, respecting yourself, loving your fellows and self-reliance. With 1200 applications for 408 places at the school, competition is fierce, but, he says, no worthwhile boy is turned away. "The boys are so keen to learn," he says.
He has big plans for the school farm, including wildlife ranching.
Now it all depends on the success economy set for 5\% growth HARARE - The outlook for the Zim babweaneconomy in 1988 's positive, with grow thot about $5 \%$ forecast, the latest Resenve Bank quarterly eco-

Preliminary agricultural forecasts indicated an expected increased out put of most major crops, and moderate growth int the mining and manu facturing secto was al so anticipated Foreign exchange constraints would howevel famper further manufacturing growth, except where output was geared towards exports:
While the focus had been on ensur ing industrial companies became more export-oriented mining, traditional agriculture and more recently horticulture 'were now also being included - Sapatwhormand

OHARARE - President Robert Mugabe has criticised Zimbabwe's prosperous white minority and accused blacks and playing arrogance towards bociety.
failing to adjust to a changed so find Mr Whites awoke yester adcast in main Mugabe's remarks broadcast on the Onews bulletins and splashed on front páge of the Suriday Mail, Zimbabwe's biggest-selling newspaper. Mr Mugabe was speaking on Friday in New Yoris to black American journalists, who asked him the disloyalty of ment worried about the dity. 362

HAND OF FRIENDSHIP
"Yes we do to a very great extent," Mr Mugabe replied, according to a report by national news agency Ziana.
"We feel we have bent ourselves over backwards, "and stretched our hand of friendship andrreconciliation in their direction; and that their response their direction, as complete as we would has not been as to be," he said.
have wanted it know what we can do. At
"We do not know what we candence we the beginning of our independence wed torlive yithis us are free to do so. the are not going to godack bothe past onast start harassing them because of pas sins."

Mr Mugabe said that eight years. the period since Zimbabwes por for dence - was quite a long time for any one to adjust.

He criticised white parents who tried to keep their children in what he called a "cultural, political" and sócial laager.",
"They resent going to the same schools as blacks They will not allow their children to participate in public events like celebrations for or independence anniversary. There is that rependence and indifference," used to years He said some whites, used or blacks, of having the whip hand shock and canwere "still in a state of shoch; not adjust". comments followed
Mr Mugabe's conis's by members similar recent criticisms by phet said of his 'Zanu-PF party, on the fence whites were still sitting on the the new and failing to identiyy mood of national unity, genero leading the merger of Zimbabwe's two black political parties. - Sapa-Reuter.

Wankie Colliery earns less, but pays same $30^{2}$  Zimbabwe-based Wankie Colliery  Coal sales in the 12 months to has held its dividend at $12,5 \mathrm{Zim}$ babwean cents, despite a drop in earnings a share from $47,5 \mathrm{c}$ to $36,6 \mathrm{c}$ in the year to February.

Resuits show coal sales substantially $u p$ pat 445 million tons ( 3,4 million tons), but coke sales down 70 percent at 51914 tons (167888 tons).
Pre-tax profit declined to $\mathrm{Z} $ 17,5$ million ( $\mathrm{Z} $ 21,5$ million) and attributable earnings were off $\mathrm{Z} $ 11,8$ million ( $\mathrm{Z} $ 15,0$ million).
The directors says: "The calculation of earnings per share is based on earnings as shown and the weighted average of 47,8 million shares (1987: 45,3 million shares) in issue during the year. For purposes of calculating the number of shares, effect has been number the special rights attachgiven to the ' $A$ ' ordinary shares.
ing to the A ordinary shares.
"No tax is. payable as February were a record, with strong demand for all grades being experienced in Zimbabwe, particularly coal for the Hwange power station coke sales, however, Were 69,6 percent down, compared with last year due to a substantial fall in exports. Since the commissioning of the new coke ovens, the company has coke ped up its efforts to re-establish this market.

"The board has declared final dividends of $7,5 \mathrm{c}$ on the ordinary shares and of 10 c on the ' A ' ordinary shares: These dividends absorb $Z \$ 3,6$ million and are payable in Zimbabwe currency on or about July 191988 to shareholders registered in the books of the company on June 23 :1988.
"Tax at the rate of 20 "percent will be deducted from the dividends where applicable." Sapa;

NEW YORK - South Africa has nuclear weapons and a strategic motive for using them, President Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe has told the United Nations.
The only possible targets for these weapons were blacks;' "a people the racist Pretoria regime has historically treated as sub-humans", he said in prepared remarks to a UN special session on disarmament:
Mr Mugabe is chairman of the Non-aligned Movement.
The Department of Foreign Affairs, the State

President's office and the to have the continent deAtomic Energy' Corpora- clared a nuclear-free tion declined to com-1 zone. ment.

Mr Mugabe said that, sesses those weapons, according to reports over South Africa, has not only several years South ca had a nuclear potitial. Pretoria had duced nuclear weapons into Africa, thywarting African leaders efforts the strategic motive to want to use such weapons at some stage, but also practises a racist doctrine which will serve to erase fany psychological inhibitions against using hose weapons," Mr Mufabes said
. IS Wit not Ironic that those Western States Which proclaim their commitment to non-pro liferation of of nuclear Weapons with such vigour turn out to be the ones to have given a nuclear capability to south Africa, a state that has refused to sign the non proliferation treaty or to place all its nuclear factlities under International Atomic Energy Agency standards? ${ }^{2}$, gred Mr Mugabe deplored the failure of the UNSE curity Council to respond to a 986 call by leaders of the Non-aligned Movement for, measures to met the danger posed by andear South Africa? ma we urge that bizody gain from this podium to act to remove this threat 0 onternational peace and security, mhe Said Sapa-Reuter.

Catholics in Africa agree to observe dune 16, Namibia Day

-

news agency reports.
Seventy bishops, priests, religious sisters and laypeople attended the seminar, according to a Press release issued in Harare yesterday by the Catholic church.
The delegation from Zimbabwe was led by Bishop Patrick Mutume. Other members were Fr John Coleman, Fr Frans Timmermans, Sr Marlene Scholz, Fr Ted Rogers, Justice and Peace Commission chairman Mike Auret and Justice and Peace Commission director Nicholas Ndebele.
"A very positive note was struck when .the situation in Zimbabwe since independence was brought to the attention of the delegates.
"They appreciated the programme of reconciliation introduced at independence and, even more, the fact that it was still holding and that new initiatives had been taken recently in this area.. :

Deplore

"They also appreciated the fact that Zimbabwe was very concerned about rights and justice for its people and especially that women's rights were being strenghttened," the statement said. The meeting : took place in Roma from May 29 to June 3 and deplored the injustice, violence, exploitation, misery and poverty it said were prevalent in many parts of Africa.
Delegates resolved to work against all forms of racialism, particularly apartheid in South Africa, and with this in mind undertook to observe Namibia Day and South Africa Day.
They resolved to "develop a church that addressed itself effectively to issues of justice and peace, in Africa." Sapa. Commission director Nicholas Ndebéle told the Ziana news agency yesterday that the commission would write to parishes asking for special prayers for South Africa at masses on that day'

Mr N Nebele was among the Zimbabwean delegates to a seminar on justice and peace in Lesotho last week which was attended by abouit 70 Catholic bishops, clergy, religious and laity from throughout Africa
The delegation from
Zimbabwe was led by Bistiop Patrick Mutume, secretary general of the Zimbabwe catholic Bishops Conference and episcopal secretary of the Inter-regional Meeting'of Bishops of Southern Africa. (Imbisa)

One of the resolutions passed at the meeting was 2to observe June 16 as South Africa Day and May 4, the anniversary of the Kassinga Massacre of more than 700 Namibian refuges in angola, as Namibia Day.
Mr Ndebele said there was not sufficient time for the commísion to organise many activities for South Africa Day'this

A report would be made to the bishops' conference with view to more being done to mark the occasion next year. Sapa.

$$
\text { HACO } x+5
$$

HARARE The Zimbabwean＇govern－ ment is offering a special＂last chance＂ amnesty to the six remaining dissidents thought to be hiding in Matabeleland：
Home Affairs secretary Ernest Tso－ mondo has told local people to pass word to the six－all known by name by security authorities－that they will not be pros－ ecuted for their part in the 1982－87 unrest even though President Robert Mugabe＇s April 19 amnesty offer expired at midnight on May 31.
He said：＂We are appealing to them to think quickly and seriously about this unof－ ficial amnesty before the government loses its temper．

Security operations are no longer being mounted against them because there is no indication the dissidents are committing any atrocities．We are leaving them like that for the moment and are still calling them to come back．＂
A total of 114 dissidents laid down their arms between April 19 and May 31.

事： asing

薙

Ristra
Registration bid gets
HARARE - Two women's organisatons said proposals to register prostitutes must be considered together with the current social and economic factors which promote prostitution.
The Women's Action Group (WAG) and the Association of Women's Clubs. (AWC) wold Kia news agency that. although they supported calls for the registration of prostitutes. they envisaged difficulty in implementing such a programme.

Active

 It + diftíute to raiser women It the will end up in oils a education centres or denton: The underSing social and coomto factorsmust be looked uncoil peópleare going to register willingly haida WAGpokeswomant: W he WAG Which represins at he number of urbanbiled women, became baricflatly active about four Eearstigo when hundreds

support

They were responding to calls by Zimbabwean parliamentarians for prostitutes to be registered and be regularly examined medically.

Presenting a number of recommendations for consideration by the Government, the parliamentarians. What ended their sixth workshop in Gera on provincial development last week, said: "All prostitutes should be registered and regularly! medically examined to avoid the spread of STD (sexually transmitted diseases)."
Women's organismLions said the currem Aids scare created a situation for people to review Their entire social behaviour.

Laws

"It is interesting to hear such sentiments coming from our members of Parliament because they are the ones who make the laws. But. they should not isolate prostitution from a Whole range of other social problems.". said the AWC. - Salpa.

Bothorganisations felt male prostitute shell - prostitutes should also be registered.
of women were rounded up in- Zimbabwe. cities under a major swoop on prostitutes.
The AWC draws its membership from women's clubs.
"Women are sometimes harassed on suspicion of prostitution. so they are not likely to volunteer registration because they may end up being arrested." said the WAG.

Prostitutes

HARARE - A British
heavy weight wrestling champion fought here to ${ }^{\circ}$ raise money for Presi, dent Robert Mugabe's ruling party in violation of a ban on sportsmen who have competed in South Africa, The Hert ald newspaper reported yesterday:
The 286 kg wrestler, known only by his ring name Giant Haystacks battled with South African heavyweight cham pion Jan Wilkins in South Africa in February 1986 said the paper, which is owned by the statecontrolled Mass Media Trust.
Under the internation al ban on sporting links with South Africa; sportst men who have competed there are automatically barred from Zimbabwe. But Giant Haystacks was officially invited to Zimbabwe along with other British wrestlers by. Mugabe's ruling Zimbabwe Africän National Union (Pätriotic Front) to help raise funds for a new R20 million party headquarters in Harare.
Giant Haystacks toured the country with the other fighters from May 27 to June 1.
The Herald said his name was not included in a blacklist of entertainers and sportsmen who have performed in South Africa, compiled by the United Nations antiApartheid Committee:
> critic of Pretoria's racial policies, is among UN member nations which complies with the UN boycott although South Africa is a major trading partnerg

> The Herald quoted Mr Richärd Hondo, secretary of the Zimbäbwe Boxing and Wrestling Control Board, as saying local officials did not know Giant Haystacks had fought in South Africa
> "If we did we certainly would not have allowed him to compete, Mr Hondo said:
> .. Mr Sam Ramsamy. chairman of the Britishbased South African NonRacial Olympic Commit ${ }^{3}$ tee, told The Herald he would submit Giant Haystacks name for the updated blacklist to be publisfied later this year. WAssociated Press.

Argus Africa News Service la HARARE - A notorious dissi dent leader, "Gayigusu"" said to be the leader of the gang which hacked to death 16 whites including women and children at a mission farm in Matabele land in November has surrenderéd under Zimbabwe's am nesty terms.
The officer commanding po lice in Mätabeleland South said Gayigusu, whose real name is Morgan Sango, gave himselfup att the weekend with nine other dissidents.

FREE PARDON
Dissidents : who surrendered before the end of this month were offered as free pardon for crimes committed for the purpose of promoting "any objective relating to the form or mode of government of Zimbabwe:"
The killers of the missionar ies at the community of Rec onciliation farms near Esigodini left $a$ note saying they were "fighting for liberation".
The then Home Affairs Minister, Mr Enos Nkala, named Gayigusu as the gang leader.
The dissidents were said to have been called to the farms by squatters who had been ordered; off the properties.

A number of the squatters hà ve appeared in court on murder chages.
There were two survivors of the massacres, 13 year-old Laura Russell who saw her mother killed, and six-year-old Matthew Marais.

Thousands eager to ${ }_{362}$ join Zimbabwe army  $4 \%$ The Star's Africa News Service

HARARE - Thousands of young men converged on the headquarters of the Zimbabwe army's Two Brigade in Harare this week trying to be one of the licky few to obtain work in the army
Sidvertisements in the press last week called for recruits between 18 and 22 years old with schoolleáving qualifications to present themselves at one of four military establishments today around the country Further recruiting will take place at five other establishments on Monday
It was estimated that some 5000 hopeful young men arrived at Cranborne Barracks, Two Brigade's headquarters. Similar numbers were expected in the three other centrés.
Secretary for Defence Mr Willard Chiwewe was quoted by Ziana, the national news agency, as saying the army was looking for 1000 new recruits to re place men lost to the 42000 -strong army through retirement, resignation and desertion during the last two years. We are not forming a new brigade, he added.
Observers point out that the qualifications re quired = five passes at Grade C level in the British based Cambridge 0-level system - represent only a Smallopart of Zimbabwe's schoolleavers Only an sestimated 20 percent of 0 -level entrants pass their ce examinations:
Q Over 152.000 pupils wrote their 0 levelsithas tand the bulk of these are expected to itin the rapidly growing ranks of the unemployed, estimated to run to 24 percent of the popilation by 1990 , imposes (3.0) purchase imph HARARE From today Zim babweans can no longé bring into the country motor vehi'clesi motorcyces, photoco piers, cash registers, teleex and fax machines, computers and office typewriters without án import licence, the national news agency Ziana, reports.

Zimbabwe

Members of a family will. also be unablé as previously; to accumulate the $\mathrm{Z} $ 500$ (R400) worth of goods each is allowed; to bring in without a licence up to a d value of $\mathrm{Z} $ 3.000$ (R2.400). The ceiling now is $Z $ 900$ ( R 720 ) and this can only be accumu- : lated by a husband andiwife: Regulations issúed today in atr - Government Gazette extraoordi-2 nary repeal earliér cegulations allowing travellers from one family, inclữding dépendant children under 18 years of age, to accumulate their $2 $ 500^{\circ}$ (R400) worth of goods up to a value of $Z $ 3000^{\prime}(\mathrm{R} 2400)$
Instead; the new regulations say: "A husband and wife travelling together may aggregate their allowance up to a total valưe not exceeding nine hundred dollars" b ?

The new regulations, which come into effect immediately, will put an end to the large number of Zimbabweans going to Botswana and South Africa to bring in cars

- Läst year, the Minister of Finance, Economic Planning:and Development, Mr Berriărd Chidzero, increased the value of gods trayellers could bring. into the country withode an im port licence from Z $$ 200$ (R160) to $Z $ 500$ (R"400).

This was followed by a gov: ernment announcement that families could combine their : $$ $ 500$ (R400) allowances up to a maximum of $Z $ 3000$ ( R 2400 ):
With second-hand car prices inflated in Zimbabwe, many people took advantage of the concession to trayel to South Africa and Botswana to buy cars:
Many of the other items now prohibited from importation:
without a licence were also popular purchases for Zimbab wean travellers:-Sapa:

HARARE - The Zimbabwean High Court yesterday ordered the reinstatement with full pay of five divisional managers of the troubled national airline, Air Zimbabwe, who were fired after signing a statement of no confidence in GM Fungai Musara.

Justice Wilson Sandura ruled their dismissal was illegal.

The latest crisis at the debt-ridden airline saw the resignation of the chairman, John Magowan, appointed last year by President Robert Mugabe with a supposed mandate to end chronic mismanagement and malpractices.

After Magowan's departure from the board, Ministry of Transport heads

Court reinstates ged $^{2}$ airline managers $0^{8}$  MICHAEL HARTNACK

stepped in to reinstate Musara, it was disclosed in court.
Meanwhile, the exodus of pilots, technicians and executives continues, and Air Zimbabwe still awaits a decision on acquisition of wide-bodied jet airliners, whose absence is throttling a potentially lucrative tourist industry.
Because of the chaos at the national airline, Zimbabwe lags far behind Botswana in preparations to exploit a possible international airline boycott of SA

SA-Zimbabwe talks urged (362) (way HIGH-levèl military talks between Zimbabwe and South Africa are essen-  By DON JACOBS: Harare  tial to defuse a potentially dangerous, situation aiong the limpopo, according to the outgoing head of SA's trade mis sion, Johan Viljoen.  Appealing this week for an immediate re-start of talks between the two governments, he said: "It is in the obvious interests of both countries to defuse the situation developing on the security front."  $\mathrm{Mr}^{\prime}$ Viljoen, 52 , who has been appointed SA's ambassador to Israel, said Pretoria's informal contacts with the Zimbabwe National Army had stopped after May 19, 1986, when SA commandos raided ANC targets in Harare.  "It is vital thiat the talks be revived," he said, referring to Pretoria's recent claims of ANC infiltration from Zimbabwe and Defence Minister Magnus Malan's warning of possible "hot pursuit" SADF raids.  Mr Viljoen has occupied one of SA's hottest diplomatic seats since January 1986, watching over SA's interests in Zimbabwe in the face of President Robert Mugabe's refusal to maintain formal diplomatic ties.  The SA mission in Harare is accredited to Zimbabwe's ministry of trade and commerce - which Mr Viljoen believes  could jeopardise communidaion be-  "Getting messages across has sometimes degenerated into a slanging match in the Press," he said.  The hardest part of serving in Harare, he said, was being bombarded with anti-South African propaganda - while commercial contacts and goodwill acts went unpublicised.  "Hardly a day passes when we're not accused of destablising our neighbours.  "But it is SA that's being destablised.  "Zimbabwe has been in the forefront of the sanctions campaign against us since 1986. And there's ANC infiltration into SA from here - that's real destablisation."

Zimbabwean guilty of helping creo $366^{2}$ ) SA attacks on ANC  A WHITE businessiman  Stin awaiting trial are  Christopher Bawden, who was found guilty in Harare on Tuesday of helping and failing to report South Afri can agents who attacked Zimbabwe's two main cities in 1986 and early this year Rory Magulte, 37, was the firtst of six men held in a February secutity swoop to stand trial. He pleaded guilly to both charges under Zimbabwe's Law and Order legislation.

The charges stem from commando ritifs fon butild commando aratds tonn build and telephone, but denled ngs used by the ANG: in Harare and Bulaway .

He said he had drlven Kevin Woods, 35, Michael Anthony Smith, 34, Barry Desmond Bawden, 30, Guy Thomas Bawden, 32, and Phillip Masiza, 54
All six were detalned after a car bomb in Jantuary wrecked a Bulawayo house used by ANC members, killing one person.
Maguire admitted some of the detainted men had used his business premises used his business premises and telephone, but denled has slitice fled to South Africa, and Smith to Butawayo airport to fetch two cars used later in an attack on ANC buildings in Harate on May 19, 1986.
"I did not know' at the time that the vehicles were going to be used agalinst Zimbabwe," he sald

Maguife sald the Harare rald was cartled out by Woods, Smith, Christopher Bawden and special agents secretly flown in from South Africa, quoting Woods as the source of thts informe tion.

Woods 38 a former member of the Centrial Intelll. genice" Orgailsation Zimo babwe's sectét service.
Magulte told Magistrate Colln Rateilffetst was very diffte ult for me to go and report a sentfor meitiber of the CIO ont the babist of What he haid told me."
He also sald Woods had Warned him to keep hils mouth shut, "otherwise it Would not be too healthy for me":
The bearded garage pro pfletor also admiltted mak ling two vialts to South Aftce In 1986.

In mititiatlon, Magulre, "who has offered to "turn State witteres ag adinst those hat inerlmilinated; sald: :ZZimt babwe: li: gy home, 1 sam Borry for what Have donie:"

The hearung conthnued this week with the State chiallenging Magures mitt. gatlon plea. - Sapa

Help for dissidents

BULAWAYO - Senior minister, Joshua Nkomo yesterday chaired a mèeting discussing possible rehabilitative measures for former dissidents following their reluctance to returin to their homes after the amnesty. 3.6

The: 115 former dissidents were reported to have said they were finding it difficult to live with the communal people because the people were hostile towards them, Ziana news agency reported.Sapa.
$\qquad$ $-$

DøE  ZImbabwe - General

-sulptqoxd uoţeoṭunuoo

4
-suoṭłeoțumuros teuxəquṭ buṭuxəouos

:๖u०प̆
uosyoṭa əอṬuer
:รอฺฺxโ̣nbư

: चuoud

Bid by SA agents to free five 'foiled' African agents to "spring" five people charged with planning bomb attacks planning bomb att  against ANC targets. $\quad$ Chikurubl maximurt from ive more people have been 4 curity prison in the east picked up in a swoop after the abortive snatch.  Details of the raid are still sketchy but it appears it was planned for June 30 but called off after Zim. babwean officials rumbled it.  Last night South Africa's trade mission in Harare said it had heard "rumours" of the raid and was making inquiries.  The sources said a team of South African commandos was preparing to free the five arrested alleged South African spies on  their way to court from Escape  They said a helicopter of the Zimbabwean air force picked up the South Africans from a firing range near the prison and flew them to a private airstrip near Kwekwe, south of Harare.  From there they escaped to South Africa in a low-fly. ing light plane together with the pilot of the heljcopter, who was believed to be a white Zimbabwean officer.  Police and Government officials in Harare refused all comment on the report.  he five men are expected to face charges carrying the death penalty of blowing up five ANC targets in Harare and Bulawayo  They are Kevin Woods, Michael Smith, Barry Bawden, Guy Bawden and Philip Conjwayo.  A sixth member of the group Rory Maguire, has said he will give evidence against the other five and is cur rently awaiting sentence before the Harare Regional Court on lesser charges of failing to report the presence of South African agents and assisting them. No date has been set for the trial of the other five.

${ }^{6}$ SA  attempt foiled in Zimbabwe'  HARARE - Zimbabwe foiled  close to Chikurubi Prison, containing

 South African attempt last week to rescue five men awaiting trial or bomb attacks against ANC tar gets, sources familiar'with the incident said on Saturday.The failed raid appears to have caused a grave crisis in relations between the two countries.
The Zimbabwean authorities have blacked out all news and the SA departments of Foreign Affairs and Defence have denied all knowledge of the raid.
A stolen Zimbabweàn Air Force Au-gusta-Bell helictopter was seen hovering near Chikurubi Prison on the outskirts of Harare on Thursday.
Western diplomats say Zimbabwean security forces appear to have foiled an attempt by its pilot and lone passenger - a woman - to rendezvous with a unit of SA commandos on the ground. The fate of the commandos is not known
The aim was apparently to free Guy and Barry Bawden, Kevin Woods, Michael Smith and Philip Conjwayoformer members of the Rhodesian security forces - who were on their way to Harare Magistrate's Court for a routine remand hearing, the sources said
Zimbabwean police reportedly found an abandoned car in the vicinity of Cleveland Rifle Range, weaponry and gas canisters.
The helicopter flew 200 km to a subsidiary airstrip near Redcliff, in the Midlands, where it made a safe landing and the pilot set fire to it with gunfire.
An African child was injured by riccheting bullets, sources say
The pilot and his woman passenger then boarded a DC 3 Dakota which had entered Zimbabwean airspace described as a commercial charter flight It was last seen flying south wards
The Zimbabwean air force is understood to be seeking Lieutenant Gary Kane, 26; a Zimbabwean-born officer who enlisted after independence in 1980 and served with the air force on combat operations in Mozambique His father is thought to be Mr Nigel Kane, a retired broadcasting personality with Rhodesia Television, now living in SA.
Zimbabwean security police have taken several people into detention since the incident.
Asked to comment, a spokesman for the SADF in Pretoria said: "Although it is not policy to react to unsourced reports like this, we nonetheless deny that any so-called SA commandos had anything to do with this so-called incident." - Own Correspondent and Sapa-Reuter

HARARE - marred with violence. Wife beating - some have accepted it as part of their married life and to others it is a sign of caring.
Wife beating was traditionally accepted as a man's way of either disciplining. his erring wife $$ pr proving his manhood.
${ }^{\lambda}$ The acting principal of the school of social work in Harare, Mr Edwin Kaseke, told reporters today that some wifebeating problems stemmed from a childhood

A child learns what he lives. Some children grow up in families where the father is always beating the mother and they come to accept that as the normal way for a man to punish his wife or to assert himself," he said.

Mr Keseke said the environment in which children grew up was a very important part of their future.
"The parents are the model from which children leagn how to behave."

When women complained to their parents about how their husbands treated them, they were advised to stay married, because they had children.

Weekly

Mr Kaseke said some women, even if beaten on a weekly basis, would not consider divorcing their husbands.
He said this was because some women were afraid of being ostracised by their families, losing their prestige in the "married

Shoppers thronged the "Le Classique" hair boutique in the Kine Centre, Johannesburg, when the salon offered free hairdos to all men and women who entered the salon.
girls" circle or starting a new life alone.
"Some women will continue to suffer. in silence because they are afraid of the reactions of the outside world if they break up with their partners. There are also those women who are so emotionally dependant on their husbands - they feel bonded and are afraid to make a clean break.
"While people might take it for granted that a woman who accepts beatings has no-one to blame but herself, it should also be remembered that this woman does not live in' a vacuum. She lives in a society --a society which might ridicule her or look at her with a jaundiced eye because she is divorced.
"Her married friends are going to avoid her because they are afraid she might hunt down their husbands," he said.
Mr Kaseke said some women also found it economically viable to stay in a bad marriage.

Alimony

If the woman is not working, it would be difficult to get a job even with qualifications, and it was difficult to survive on alimony.
He also pointed out that despite urbanisation and a break in traditions, most black women would seek family counselling before going to an outsider for help.
He said until such time as women could manage their own lives even at the risk of being ostracised, considering divorce would be difficult for African women.

Mr Kaseke said some. men beat their wives out of frustration. In some cases, it was because a man had failed to measure up to his partner's or his own expectations either at work of in the home.
He said because of this a man might resort to violence as a refuge. Lack of faith in each other also induced wife beating.
"It is difficult for a married man to retain respect and love for his wife when he is trying to impress a new woman.
"Our society has become so permissive that the closeness of a family unit is obscure.
"There is no way one can equally distribute love between more than one partner. You are now giving half measures and to cover up for your lack of interest in the wife you resort to beating her up," he said.
Mr Kaseke pointed out that some partners were not flexible enough. What most couples did not realise was that marriage was give and take - it was full of compromises and every partner had to bend a little at one time or another.

He also said there was a need for couples to seek marriage guidance before taking the vows.
"Every marriage has its own problems but some couples fare better because of the way they deal with problems."
It was necessary to enforce traditional norms wherever they would help save a marriage, Mr Kaseke said - Sapa.

HARARE, $\rightarrow$ Stringent precautions were taken by heavily armed Zimbab wean police and para-military units yesterday when six alleged South African spies were brought from Chikurubi maximum-security prison to the Magistrate's Court here for a re mand hearing
Mr Simon Bull, speaking on behalf of laywers representin's Messrs' Tvo and:Clive Harding Mr Richard Laban Mr Geoffrey Mee, Mrs Patricia Brown and Squadron Leader Jack Eewis Walker, protested to the presidin magistrate," Mr. Albert Mnkändla, about the overcrowded prison truck in

Mr Bull said it had been so crammed with prisoners after stopping at Har are Central Prison that warders had difficulty closing the doors and it swayed dangerously, Mr Mnkandla promised to make a personal inspection before it left on the return journey.
The six face charges of spying on the African National Congress.
On Thursday the Zimbabwean seurity forces foiled an attempt to free five other alleged South African agents awaiting trial for security of fences, as they were being brought to he Magistrate's Court from Chikurubi prison.

\%
,

The Star's AfricaNews Service

HARARE - Zimbabwe Minister of State for Security Dr Sydney Sekeramayi last night blamed "elements of South Africa's security forces" for the aborted operation to try to free alleged South African agents in the country.
It was the Zimbabwe government's first official comment on the matter.
$\cdots$ Dr Sekeramayi confirmed that one member of ithe group of "commandos" had been caught.
$\because$ The man was picked up after fleeing from custody at Kazangula border póst in north-western Zimbabwe.
He and a companion - who escaped - had been detained at the border post because they.appeared to be of "du"bious character", said the Minister.

They were handed over to the police, but got away, climbed a fence and "swam a river.

The Minister said it had to be as"sumed that other eiements of the South i.African security forces were still at ! large in Zimbabwe.

Only one of the group had been .uplifted with a helicopter stolen by a serving Zimbabwe Air Force officer named Gary Kane, he said. He and-a passenger flew to Zisco airstrip near Kwekwe, and from there to South Africa in an aircraft - either a Dakota or a light plane.
Mr Sekeramayi said in statement said it was "obvious" South Africa was to blame.

Weapons found

There had previously been an unsuccessful attempt to free the alleged South African agents when they were taken from Chikurubi Prison to court for remand:

Hired vehicles and weapons had been recovered.

The Minister added that an 11-yearold girl, who was injured when Mr Kane fired 19 bullets into the helicopter before abandoning it, was recovering in hospital:
Two Irish nurses who hitched a lift in Botswana got caught up the dramatic rescue attempt.

They were held for questioning for a few days, but are now thought to be on holiday somewhere in Zimbabwe.

Defence seeks trial date for SA 'spies'

THARARE AHarare provincial mag Sistrate yesterday asked the state to indicate the trial date for six alleged South African spies.
Mr Albert Mkandla made the reTquest after hearing an application by a defence lawyer seeking an assurance from the state that his client and five others would pe told of their trial date on July 18 . $\%$
In the dock sat Mr Ivor Duncan Härding (45) his son Mr Clive Andrew HHarding (20), Mr Jeffrey Lyn Mee (45);
"Mr Richard Henry Labon (51); Mr John Ernest Lewis-Walker (55); and Mrs Patricia Evelyn Grace Brown $(50)$ Sapar, $\quad$, ter Kane's defection.

 पù

 әлелен u! sut

 but white Zimbabweans who knew him said Kane, who joined the air force in 1982 as a cadet, was in Mr Sekeremayi identified Kane as group captain, but white Zimbabweans who knew him said Kane,

 - хәэщо әЈлој

 8 dominates the private business sector. I!̣̆ destroyed 13 aircraft at Thornhill base near Gweru in July, 1982. pertise, received a devastating blow when saboteurs dependence the air force, heavily reliant on white ex-long. It is a very tricky situation."

อлDлDH woy stroder detney-Ddos to free prisoners described in court

Argustaffica New's Service HARARE - A bizarre story of an alleged South African wission to rescue six men from a Zimbabwe jail has emerged from the court appearance here of one of the two men said to have been involved, and from an official Botswana account of his arrest at a roadblock near Gaborone.
The two accounts tell of two men trying to enter Zimbabwe to take part in the alleged res:cue attempt of six "South African agents" from jail last week.

According to the accounts, the two men fled when their car was searched at the Kazangula border post, dived into the Zambezi l and escaped by swimming to Botswana.

CHARTERED AIRCRAFT

Some days later they are allegend to have landed at Gabocone in a chartered aircraft.
They were then spotted by soldiers attempting to walk around a roadblock on the Tlokweng road near the South African border about 10pm on June 28.
In the darkness one of the men escaped as the soldiers re trained from opening fire in case they hit other people it,
The Botswana Government confirmed it had handed the arrested man to Zimbabwe.
It said he was believed to be a member of a South African "commando group" that, was supposed to have made an at tempt to rescue six men held in Zimbabwe on charges of sabatage and bombing attacks.
When he appeared in court here yesterday, he was identified as Mr Dennis Charles Be han 40 , of Sandton Sun Hotel Johannesburg.
He was not asked to plead to an allegation of committing an act of terrorism.
Mr Yunus Omerjee of the At-torney-General's department told the court that a search of Mr Behan's car uncovered communication equipment hidden in false compartments which would have been used to coordinate the attack and rescue of the "agents".

Magistrate' Mr Jefta Makhaza asked Mr Behan, who was in leg-irons, if he had any complaints about his treatment by the police.
He replied quietly: "No sir." See page 13.2
$\qquad$

Man 'helped' agents of SA - guard at trial

HARARE - Armed police guards were introduced for the first time at the Harare Regionall Court when the trial of a Bulawayo businessman, Rory Burt Maguire, resumed.
Maguire, who pleaded guilty to two counts of contravening the Law and Order (Maintenance) Act by helping South African agents and failing to report their presence to the police was remanded until July 14 for sentence.
Urging the court to impose a severe sentence yesterday, Mr Yunus Omerjee of the Attor-ney-General's office, said Vimbabweans must realise that in order to safeguard the independence and sovereignty of the country they were obliged to report the presence of enemy agents.

He added. "The success, in part, of the South African agents in acts of armed aggressagents in acts destabilisation is attributable to the accused and others like him For without such assistance enemy agents are rendered almost neffec five."

Mr John Sayce, representing Maguire, urged the magistrate, Mr Colin Radcliffe, to find that Maguire shewed contrition and was sorry for his involvement.
He also asked the magistrate to put on record the fact that there were two armed guards in the courtroom.
Mr Omerjee said the plot was to have taken place at the time when five other accused were to have appeared on teman in the Magistrate's Court on Thursday last week, while the accused were at court:
"The security agents are ex tremely concerned with this turn of events, he said. Spa.

HARARE - A man alleged to have been the commander of the group of SA commandos, who made an abortive attempt last week to free alleged SA agents before being arrested in Botswana, appeared in a Zimbabwe court yesterday charged with espionage.
The man, Denis Charles Behan, 38, a Briton, was brought to the Harare Magistrate's Court handcuffed and in legirons, under heavy guard by Zimbabwean police and paramilitary units.
Security sources said he was arrested in Botswana. Yunus Omerjee of the At-torney-General's office said he was returned to Zimbabwe from a "friendly neighbouring country" last Saturday, while his colleague managed to escape capture.

MICHAEL HARTNACK

Behan, who was not asked to plead, has been remanded to July 19 on espionage charges which could carry the death penalty.
Omerjee yesterday read a statement alleging Behan, detained on June 28 near the Kazungula border post - close to the common border of Zimbabwe, Botswana, Zambia and Namibia - led the failed attempt to free Guy and Barry Bawden, Philip Conjwayo, Kevin Woods and Michael Smith:
The five, due for trial on charges of murder and espionage, were to have been "sprung" as a convoy took them last Thursday from prison to the Harare Magistrate's Court for a remand hearing.
Omerjee said when Behan came to trial under section 50 of Zimbabwe's Law and Order Maintenance Act, it would be alleged he was the leader of a

'SA commando leader' in court in chains

group with the task of entering Zim babwe from SA surreptitiously at differ ent points to force the release of Zim babweans awaiting trial.
"The accused in this matter was, with a colleague, acting on the instructions of SA military intelligence," said Omerjee.

Harare security sources say another five members of the raiding party are still being sought.

SAPA reports seven heavily armed police took up positions inside a Harare courtroom where the sixth man of the arrested group, Roger Maguire, accused of being a Pretoria agent, appeared on security charges yesterday.

Maguire has pleaded guilty to helping and failing to report SA agents, and has offered to turn state's evidence against the other five arrested with him in January

SA 'commander' in Harare court

HARARE. - A Briton alleged to be the leader of an abortive South African raid into Zimbabwe to free prisoners, appeared in court here yesterday and was remanded for two weeks.
Named as Denis Charles Behan, the man replied "No sir" twice when the magistrate asked him if he had any complaints or anything to say.
Mr Behan, held under Zimbabwe's Law and Order Maintenance Act, was not asked to enter a plea to a formal charge. He declined the offer of a defence lawyer and was unrepresented.
State prosecutor Mr Yunus Omerjee alleged that Mr Behan, who gave his address as the Sandton Sun hotel in Johannesburg, was the commander of a South African commando group whose task was to enter Zimbabwe surreptitiously to rescue South African agents accused of sabotage and bombing attacks against ANC facilities in Zimbabwe.
Mr Behan's British nationality was not mentioned in court but was confirmed by the British High Commission. A High Commission official visited him before his court appearance.
"We confirm we have been in" formed of Behan's detention by the Zimbabwean authorities and a consular officer saw him today," a spokesman said.

A source close to the case said Mr Behan's personal details were still being checked but he appeared to have been born in Britain and to hold British nationality only.

Aged around 40, Mr Behan was wearing a dirty light blue opennecked shirt, a dark blue pullover, grey cord trousers and brown shoes. He looked unkempt, with a week's growth of beard.
Mr Omerjee said Mr Behan and a colleague who drove into Zimbabwe with him at Kazungula border post on June 28, were acting on the orders of South African military intelligence.
On Monday Zimbabwe accüsed South Africa of trying to free six men accused of working as agents for Pretoria in an unsuccessful operation on June 30.

Key figure

Security Minister Mr Sydney Sekeremayi said a white Zimbabwean air force pilot, who was a key figure in the plan, stole a helicopter and later escaped to South Africa by plane. Zimbabwe is still hunting for other members of the commando group.
Mr Behan listened impassively as Mr Omerjee told regional magistrate Mr Tadius Karwi that when challenged at the frontier, he and his companion "ran off, scaled the fence at the border post, leapt into the Zambezi River and swam away from Zimbabwe".
Kazungula is where the westernmost point of Zimbabwe borders Botswana, Zambia and the South African-controlled Caprivi Strip in Namibia.

The pair made their way to "a friendly neighbouring country" - believed to be Botswana where Mr Behan was captured and returned to Zimbabwe on July 2. His colleague escaped, the prosecutor said.
Mr Omerjee said Mr Behan's vehicle contained sophisticated communications equipment hidden in false compartments, intended to co-ordinate the rescue operation, which would if successful have brought the freed prisoners to Namibia.

Security was relatively light for Mr Behan's court appearance.
Earlier in the same courthouse, heavily armed police were on guard for the appearance of Mr Rory Maguire, one of the men whom Zimbabwe says the South Africans were trying to rescue.
Mr Maguire, who has pleaded guilty to aiding and failing to report South African agents, will learn his sentence on July '14.
Mr Omerjee, calling for a severe sentence, said: "Zimbabwe is under perpetual threat of armed aggression from a belligerent neighbour."
He rejected defence pleas for mitigation, arguing that a stiff penalty was needed to deter other Zimbabweans who might fail to report South African agents.

Mr Maguire, a 37-year-old Bulawayo garage proprietor, has offered to turn state witness. -Sapa-Reuter

Behain faces trial under Smith law  The Star's Africa News ServiceStar 717 himed at freeing suspected South African agents

HARARE - A law framed during the Rhodesian era to counter terrorism will form the basis of the charge to be laid against the man described as the leader of a South African commando group being held in Zimbabwe.
The State alleges that Denis Charles Behan, who made a surprise appearance in court on Tuesday; had tried to enter Zimbabwe to lead a rescue attempt ## from custody using forcible means.

Mr Behan was not asked to plead, but the court heard that he was to be accused of contravening the Law and Order (Maintenance) Act.
The relevant section deals with acts of terrorism or sabotage, the definition of which is very wide and includes any act "likely to cause serious bodily injury or endanger the safety of anyone within Zimbabwe".
The law, drawn up by Mr Ian Smith's government says that anyone who, after November 17 1967 with intent to endanger the maintenance of Maw and order in Rho desia (now Zimbabwe) or in a neighbouring territory, commits any, act of terrorism or sabotage shall be liable to be sentenced to death or to im prisonment for life.
An attempt to commit the offence is treated a s if the offence thad been committed, , The court heard that vehicles with weapons which were to be used in the rescue operation had been recovered and the prosecutor said it was very likely that people would have been injured had the planned, attack taken place $\quad$, 1 , Mr Behan was remand; ed for two weeks after telling the magistrate he had nothing to say Pro ceedings hadstaken place in camera to confirma statementhe made to po:

Stop these dirty tricks, says MP  stal

81788
The Star's Africa News Service

HARARE - Zimbabwean whites are maddened and disgusted at the action of other whites in South Africa and Zimbabwe in trying to free alleged South African agents, according to white MP Mr Henry Elsworth.

The independent member and former supporter of Mr Ian Smith said whites were sick and tired of the involvement of other members of the community in such incidents.

Mr Elsworth said it was understandable that whites were now being treated with suspicion and hostility at roadblocks.
He added that some people had been detained but they had asked that he not make a fuss about it because they understood the reaction.

Justice Minister Emmerson Mnangagwa said acts of disloyalty, especially by white members of the armed forces, shook the government's confidence in the white community.

Riràräfto
Such aircraft come in and out of the country quite regularly It took off and flew to South Africa Kane and his Woman companion disappears from the story:
But that is not the end: Next day came new revelations. Cut nowito neigh bouring Botswana.
Mr Charles Dennis Behan (who mighth have had a number of aliases, according to the Botswana government and a Mr Jim Maguire had tried to enter Rimbabwe from Botswana on June: 28 through the Kazungula border post.
Behan and Magureswere questioned by the Zimbabweangauthorities according o official information they oecamealarmed leaptoyer the border fence into the Zambezi River andswam across to Botswana;
In ther; vehicle, were found explosives, ammunition and sophisticated * telecommunications equipment hidden in false compartmedts
The astonished ZimbabWean authorities tipped off their:opposite numbers across: the fence and the Botswana police immediately launched a search The two mentresumaby split up because Maguire escaped: Behan is believed to have hitched a ride nalight aircraft to Gaborone. He was arrested before he could cross by car into South Africa
He Was handed over to the Zimbabweanauthorities He 1ooked weary, but tough His clothes had clearly been worn for a fewdays He refusedthe services of a law. yer, even after being pressed by the authorities:
He was visited by staff of the British High Commission; but more or less told them he didn't need their help either: He says he has been well Treatedthe hearing to confirm his warned and caitioned state mentwas held in camera.
This Thursday, the sixth man detained in Bulawayo, Mr Rory Maguire will be sentenced It is not known whether Mr Jim Magulre, Who evaded arrest in Bo tswana, is related.
Rory Maguire was rot at Chikurubi at the time of the "ręscue mission, but at a more central prison. He has confessed to having helped the five and will give evidence against his former comrades at their trial:
The Zimbabwean government believes it has in custody men who will not only take the lid off South Africa's operations In Zimbabwe If they are found guilty, one or two of them could become the first whites iñ Zimbabwe to be sentenced to death for polittcally motivated cólimes. pothe trials will continue. But ethe security will be tighter 0 , wher

兵 தi.aq8

 The group - dubbed the "Craz held In a Harare prison.

But, official sources now claim, the group engaged in private operations through the wide network of expatriate Rhodesians and their familles still living in Zimbabwe.

PMSSION IMPOSSIBLE See Page 11

These clandestine activities reportedly culminated in the abortive snatch job last week in which they tried to release friends and, in one case, a relative.
The attempt has severely embarrassed the South African Government - which tas officially denied involvement with the plot - and further increased tensions with Zimbabwe,

The A-Team type plan involved the freeing of five Zimbabweans facing charges of taking part in bombing attacks on ANC targets in Harare on South Africa's behalf
The accused are cousins Barry and Guy Bawden, Kevin Woods, Michael Smith and Phillp Conjwayo.

Cancelled

Initial plans involved the ambushing of the armoured vehicle transporting the prisoners between Chikurubi maximum security prison and the maglstrate's courts.

An attack group armed with automatic weapons and gas would then have overcome the guards and hustled the prisoners to the nearby Cleveland rifle range

There a Zimbabwean Air Force Augusta Bell helicopter, stolen by deserter Lfeutenant Gary Kane, was to have picked them up and flown them to an isolated airstrip in the Midlands.

There the group were to have transferred to a Dakota aircraft, brought in under the guise of a mining charter, which would have fown them all to South Africa

The operation was timed for last Thursday but was called off when, it is alleged, lone of the co-conspirators, Briton Charles Behan, was arrested by Botswanan authoritles and handed over to the Zimbabweans. Another conspirator - named as Maguire and believed to be related to one of the prisoners - escaped back into South Africa.
The route used by the convoy carrying the prisoners was also considered too heavily guarded.

Behan had escaped from Zimbabwe only days previously after his car, packed with weapons and explosives, was stopped and searched.
Kane and an unidentified woman conspirator fled in the Dakota to South Africa and have since gone to ground.

Strain

This week facets of the personality of the 22-year-old Zimbabwean pilot defector began to emerge.
One of Kane's friends in Harare yesterday described him as "headstrong and immature".
"I think he got involved in this exploit because he is that sort of young man who feels sorry for people," sald the friend.
He said Gary was only five when his mother Anne marrled Rhodesian televislon personaltty Mr Roy Kane. The couple had two daugh ters, Tove, 17 , and Alisa, 12 of their own before the mar. riage broke up 10 years ago:
olonged and interest
sate," he predicted.
-TTo Page 2

Blast
hocke

By JANINE LAZI ABOUT 200 spec escaped unhurt ye afternoon when a 1 made limpet mine e at a hockey club less metres from where : match was being pla The blast blew off the roof of the Cat Hockey Club in Turf Johannesburg. A hou damaged and windou in the area shattered Sixteen people wer clubhouse at the tin clubhouse at the tin Neil Phillips, of Jol burg, suffered damag drums, but the othen unhurt.

- A car bomb ex yesterday near a pol tion in Okahandja, Na No one was hurt.

PICK

TWO popular banke Goldhurst in the secon and Cricket Season 1 fifth leg - yesterday $b$ 1334 lucky Pick 6 ticke! ers win $\mathrm{R} 2077,5$ each at fontein.
The net pool R2 771422 (R3 695230 g The winning numbers $w$ $1 ; 11 ; 8 ; 3$ and $4 ; 1$.

Still soarin

LAST week's national sa the Sunday Times $\rightarrow$ still R1,50 - set another SA cord, well above the last I ted figure of 538134 co Natal sales were also a re six figures.

Brrrr!

THE whole country will the shlvers over the next: days - except the far no The Weather Bureau exp snow in the North-West Cape and the Boland tod

[^7]
Police called in to (362) stop fight in church

HARARE - Riot squad police had to be called in to stop a "fierce fight" among congregation members at the St Luke's Rugare Catholic church in Gweru's Mkoba suburb yesterday, a news agency reported.
Ziana, Zimbabwe's national agency, said that for some time now" worshippers had been involved in a dispute over the appointment of Father Antony Gwatiringa as the priest in charge of St Lúke's Rugare.
Father Gwatiringa replaced Father Alex Stofeel who was recently transferred to another parish, However, Mr Gwatiringa became unpopular with a section of the' congregation who have levelled various/s/allegations against him. - biver what Some members of the congre-: gation walked into the church as: Father Gwatiringa conducted Mass, holding placards which reäd: "We will fight until Gwatiringa is gone forever", "Idle minds are the devil's workshop": and "We dón't like him", 度: to Tempers flared and fighting. erupted among worshippers, Ziana said.
Police, armed with teargas canisters shields and crash hel-mets-were called in to stop the Several worshippers were ar rested and are now helping police with investigations. -Sapa:

HARARE－Zimbabwe＇s maize stocks stood at a record 1,8 million tons sat the end of March last year and the intake for the year was the third－largest ever halndled by the Grain Mar－ kêting Board（GMB），na－ tional news agency Ziana reports．The GMB report for the year to March 1987 says although wheat and oilseeds deliveries were higher than expected，they still could not meet local demand．
The GMB continued to establish grain collection points countrywide and 56 were opened in the 1986／87 year．
＂To cushion the effects of low world market prices；the GMB concen－ trated its sales effort on the regional overland mar－ ket，but even here signifi： cant reductions in export realisations were suf－ fered．＂－Sapa．

[^8]HARARE. - Two white Zimbabweans appeared before a magistrate yesterday on charges of failing to report the presence of South African commandos.

It was alleged that the commandos had tried to spring five alleged South African agents from prison. The plot was foiled, according to a government statement made last week.
The prosecutor, Mr Abdul Umerji, told provincial magistrate Mr Albert Mkandla that Mr Robert Downey, 35, and his wife, Kathleen Gail, 33 planned the rescue of the five alleged South African agents from the Chikurubi prison.
The couple, represented by Mr Richard Phillips, appeared in court to "have the"statements they made to the police confirmed in camera.
Mr Umerji initially asked the court to remand the couple until Friday to enable the state to get a ministerial certificate barring them bail. But Mr Phillips objected, preferring them to be brought in tomorrow: The magistrate remanded them until tomorrow.
Mr Umerji said that on June 9, South African agents or saboteurs met at the couple's residence, where plans to rescue Mr Michael Anthony Smith and four others from Chikurubi prison were made.
He said both were aware of the South African agents' mission in Zim-

HARARE. - A South African alleged to have brought into Zimbabwe a bomb' that exploded in Harare, killing a Zimbabwean citizen, appeared briefly in the magistrate's court today:
The case was postponed until July 25.
$\therefore$ Mr Leslie Johannes Lesia, 52, whose address is given in the court record as Matsabela Location; South Africa; appeared in connection with allegations of contravening the Law and Order Maintenance Act.
The state alleges that Mr Lesia was responsible for the death of Mrs Tsitsi Chiliza who died as a result of an explosion at Earls Court, Harare, on May 11. - Sapa
babwe but did not report to the au thorities
When asked by the court if they had any complaints against the police both said they had none.
Mr Smith, Mr Kevin Woods, Mr Barry Desmond Bawden, Mr Phillip Masiza Conjwayo and 'Mr Thomas Bawden are in custody facing charges of murder and contravening the Law and Order Maintenance Act, a law which was enacted by the old Rhodesian government under Mr Ian Smith
They were arrested in connection with attacks on properties of the African National Congress and the Pan Africanist Congress in Zimbabwe.

- ${ }^{6}$

Couple in court over failing to report SA commandos

HARARE - A white Zimbabwean couplo Phillips, appeared in court to have the appeared before a Harare magistrate yesterday on allegations, of failing to report the presence of South African commandos in the country. An attempt by the commandos to free five alleged South African agents from prison was foiled by security forces last week, Ziana reports.
The prosecutor, Mr Abdul Umerji, told provincial magistrate Mr Albert Mkandla that Mr Robert Downey (35) and his wife Kathleen Gail (33) planned the rescue of the five alleged South African agents from the Chikurubi prison.

The couple, represented by Mr Richard statements they made to the police confirmed in camera.

Mr Umerji asked the court to remand the couple until Friday to enable the state to get a ministerial certificate barring them bail. But Mr Phillips objected, preferring them to be brought in again tomorrow, which the magistrate allowed.

Mr Umerji said that on June 9, South African agents or saboteurs met at the couple's residence in Murray Bisset Close, Belvedere, where plans were made to rescue Mr Michael Anthony Smith and others from Chikurubi Prison.

He said the couple were aware of the South African agents' mission in Zimbabwe but did not report to the authorities.
Mr Smith, Mr Kevin Woods, Mr Barry Desmond Bawden, Mr Phillip Masiza Conjt wayo and Mr Thomas Bawden are in cus:tody on allegations of murder and contratvening the Law and Order Maintenace Act:\%
They were arrested in conhection with attacks on properties of the ANC and the Pan Africanist Congress.
The State is alleging that they attacked five ANC properties, four in Harare and one in Bulawayo where a man was killed in an explosion in January. - Sapa.
«.

 company and that he be recommended by a national that he produces a registration certificate if it is a company and that he be recommended by a national promoter have official offices and a physical address, foreign musicians in Zimbabwe. never been any problems with the promotion of Youth, Sport and Culture in February, there had the message of anti-fascism in South Africa," he said. would help educate the oppressors in South Africa. would help educate the oppressors in South Africa. culture and it was necessary to allow those who were against the system to come into the country as they Dr Mahoso said apartheid was a war on African enemies of the movement.' and they know the needs ond (the musicians) friends or and they know the needs of the movement. We go to banned, he said some musicians were anti-apartheid and had to be allowed in the country. to perform in Zimbabwe while sports people were banned, he said some musicians were anti-apartheid Asked why South African musicians were allowed during the tours of Gregory Isaacs and the South African religious group, Holy Spirits, earlier this year, be almost impossible to have "fiascos" experienced Interviewed on the weekly television programme
The Nation, he said with the new regulations, it would country, the director, Dr Tafataona Mahoso, the promotion of foreign musicians in the Zimbabwe has introduced regulations governing jo [!כunoj sirv leuolien eqL - g&VZVH

!
.

Energency Shisiz?

HARARE The House of Assembly yoted unami mously yesterday to extend the state of emer-gencyin Zimbabwe for a further six months, said Ziana.
Severa speakers $r$
ferred to the threat to Zimbabwean security by South Africa, which appeared to be the major reason, for renewing the state of emergency
South Africa was using Britons to commit sabo tage in Zimbabwe it was alleged nthe House
Sapa-Reuter
$\cdots$

Gumt
$\because$ $\because$
Argus AfficalN News Service HARARE: Armed policemen standing on either side of him in the dock, Bulawayo busi nessman Rory Maguire, 37, was today sentenced to seven years' jail with labout for failing to report Southedrican saboteurs. The magistrate, Mr Colin Ratcliffe, said the bearded Ma guire gave tacit support to agents of a powerful neighbour which, while not at war with Zimbabwe, was at odds with it Maguire was one of six peo ple arrested after the bombing of an African National Con gress house in builayayo in January when a man was killed.
The magistrate satd he ap preciated that Magire had pleaded guilty had shown unequivocal contrition and bád agreed to be a State withess in the trial of the other five. NATIONAL INTERES ,
But in the national hterest thepubliogmist be deterred from withiolding information ors araing saboteurs $\%$, 4 Whouth Africa, he said, hadto rely for the success of itsisabotage operationss on help from Zimbabweans The court fond thatio guire's fear of eprisal played some art inithis failure to report the saboteurs, but his mainadim hot do ig so was topotect his friend, Kevin Woods a former Central intel: ilgence organisation officer Whots an accused dualining tri 11 3 Whescoutirejected that Ma to what NODAS and the others had beend doing but aceepted thât athes hee had deen an KHASSVE SSMPARIN Whe had shown indifference or: Dassive foympathy to tiedac tions of the others and therein lay his moral blameworthiness He had been prepared to do fa ours tor people he knew to be saboteurs
Waguire's sister sobbed as sentence was passed His wife and parents, who have been following the trial, were not in court today
Magure had been charged With failingto report the agents and $o f$ helping them 3 The magistrate treated both counts as mod for the purpose to the University of Zimbabwe's latest business opinion survcy.

It says business optimism has nearly doubled in the past year from $15,6 \%$ of respondents to more than $29 \%$. Industrialists are more optimistic than at any time since December 1985.
The survey finds $47 \%$ of the sample expect increased production and sales in the second half of 1988 - a five percentage point rise on the reading last December. Less than $13 \%$ expect sales to fall, the lowest reading in nearly three years. However, the survey warns of two consequences: increased import demand and strong inflation.

Capacity utilisation in Zimbabwe industry improved in the six months to June 1988 and a further increase to $72 \%$ in the current half-year is expected. But the survey still finds more than $61 \%$ of respondents are operating below target capacity.
It warns of a slight increase in the rate of cost inflation from $12,3 \%$ six months ago to $12,6 \%$. However, the accompanying report believes this could be an underestimate, given the general $5 \%$ price rise announced in May.
Because most respondents replied to the survey before the price rise, industrialists are generally gloomy about profits. More than $62 \%$ of the sample expect profit margins to be squeczed in the current half-year - the highest ratio in four years.

The worst news comes on the employment and investment fronts. Investment intentions have deteriorated again, declining to their lowest level in three years. Only $47 \%$ of respondents - compared with $60 \%$ six months ago - say they have plans to invest in new capacity.
With $76 \%$ expecting unchanged employment levels and $13 \%$ predicting reductions, only $11 \%$ plan to take on more workers.
The survey also finds some tightening of skills availability, with more than half the sample - the highest number in seven years - saying they are "slightly affected" by a shortage of skills, especially technical production and maintenance personnel. This tends to support evidence of an increase in white emigration.

The university says industrial growth accelerated in the first quarter of 1988 from $2,3 \%$ annual growth last year to more than $4 \%$, but it warns sustained growth will not occur without substantially increased investment and "a marked loosening" of the foreign exchange constraint. There is nothing new in these sentiments but they contrast with the much more complacent attitude of organised industry in Zimbabwe.
The university says ad hoc programmes likt the established supplementary import allucation system should not be seen as ends in themselves but as a bridge to a better system of allocating scarce foreign exchange.
A government working party started work last month on a trade liberalisation report suggesting that possibly this time the government really is serious about the need for fundamental change in the economy.

ZIMBABWE  Budget bind

After three years of standstill budgets, Kimbabweans expect few changes in that to be presented on July 28 by Finance Minister Bernard Chidzero.
As in the past three years, Chidzero has little room for manoeuvre. He is hemmed in by expenditure on debt service, defence, ducation and subsidies that will absorb some $60 \%$ of total spending. With Zimbabweans already among the highest-taxed people in the world, there is little scope for tax hikes. So what can he do? He must try to keep the budget deficit close to - if not below the psychologically important $\mathrm{Z} $ 1 \mathrm{bn}$. Last year he budgeted for a deficit of just under $$ 1 b n$. Because the pay freeze kept spending in check until March - nine months through the year - and corporate profits and taxes have been buoyant, he may come close to that, especially since underspending on capital investment is likely to have been significant.

But keeping the deficit close to $$ 1 \mathrm{bn}$ in 1988-1989 will be a great deal tougher. The March pay award will add $$ 150 \mathrm{~m}$ to governmint spending, while the war in Mozambique, re-equipment of the military, containned rapid growth in school enrolments and an ever-higher debt-service burden will push up total spending by a forecast $20 \%$.

Revenue growth should also be strong but not enough to hold the deficit at current levels without some increases in taxes and some reduction in subsidies.
The obvious target is the subsidy bill. Last month's increase in beef and milk prices may turn out to be the first shot in the campaign. Last year some $$ 225 \mathrm{~m}$ was committed to food subsidies. But Chidzero will need to go further than higher food prices, and impose increased railway rates, electricity tariffs and air fares.

On the tax side, he is unlikely to make many changes. Among the most likely targets is alcohol, left alone in 1987 and due for a, ismail, excise increase, if only to keep pace with inflation. *
All of which suggests that July 28 is not going to be a very exciting day; but businessmen who scrutinise Chidzero's statements closely, always hoping for some shift in government policy towards perestroika, will watch anxiously for a firm commitment to structural reform of the economy.
There are some hopes too that he will announce changes to the investment guidelines, which have succeeded in deterring rather than encouraging new investment. In a country where unemployment has doubled in seven years and threatens to do so again by 1991, the need for a massive boost to investmet confidence has never been greater.

Own Correspondent

HARARE. - A Bulawayo garage owner, Rory Burt Maguire, 37 , was yesterday jailed for seven years for helping and failing to report the presence of South African sábotage squads hitting African National Congress targets in Zim'babwe.
Zimbabwean-born Maguire is the first white to be convicted since independence under Section 51 of the Law and"Order Maintenance Act:
The same act was used to prosecute thousands of tribespeople for shielding African nationalist guerillas during the Rhodesian bush war and, more government dissidents in Matabeleland.
Regional magistrate Mr Colin Ratcliffe said Maguire's moral blameworthiness was much higher than that of a simple villager who had to make a difficult and dangerous journey to a police station to report dissidents.
"In the national interest the public must be deterred from withholding information from the authorities, and giving assistance to saboteurs," said Mr Rátcliffe.
"There is a justifiable distinction between supporting a disorganized gang of marauding thugs and assisting or failing to report a highly organized group of professional saboteurs working for a foreign power." While South Africa was not at war with Zimbabwe it was a "powerful and hostile neighbour" totally opposed to it:

Fatal bombing

Maguire could have warned the aü thorities in 1986 that a former Centrat $\because$ Intelligence Organization officer or Kevin John Woods, 35, was a double agent for the Southo Africans atd thereby prevented the fatal bombing of an ANC house in Bulawayo, on Jta uary 11 this year, Mr Ratcliffe said He found that Maguire was and tur witting accomplice to the May 19,685 South African raid on ANC targetso Harare, helping Mr Woods fern vehicles from Bulawayo Airpor

Mr Ratcliffe accepted that fede 8 possible South African reprisded well as friendship formr Woodseze terred Maguirefrom reporting $\mathrm{m}_{\mathrm{T}} \mathrm{m}$

HARARE - Bulawayo businessman Rory Burt Maguire was jailed for seven years yesterday morning for failing to report, and assisting, South African saboTeurs," the Žiäna national news agency has reported. The Harare Regional Collin Ratcliffe, treated both counts as one for purpose of sentencing.

Maguire (37), proprietor of Mactec (Pty) Ltd of Bulawayo, was: convicted by Mr Ratcliffe on June 21 after pleading guilty to two counts of contravening a sectionof the Law and Order (Maintenance) Act.

The court heard that Maguire harboured Kevin Jolhn Woods and Michael Antony Smith, both suspected of being South African agents, and helped them cary out attacks on African National Congress (ANC) establishments in Zimbabwe between May 1986. and January this year:

Arrested

Maguire was arrested in February with former Zimbabwe, Central Intéligence Organisation officer Kevin Woods (35), Michael Anthony Smith (34), Barry Desmond Bawden (30); Guy Thomas Bawden (32) and former Rhodesian Special Branch officer Philitp Masiza Conjwayo (54) after a bomb explosion in Bulawayo earlier in the year in which one person was killed - Sapa:

 Robert Mugabe's government came in for an unprecedented public lambasting from within its own ranks this week.
The leadership was slammed as corrupt and incompetent by two political personalities whose words have been given wide publicity.
In the House of Assembly the attack came from firebrand Mr Edgar Tekere, a former close associate of Mr Mugabe, who was sidelined a year ago when he was removed unceremoniously from the chairmanship of the Manicaland province of the ruling party.
The politburo decided Chat Mr Tekere, once a retary-general of the party - was incapable of reforming and unable to fulfill his responsibilities.
Mr Tekere, who retains considderable popular support, has been quiet most of the time since then but, this week, he let fly with a bitter attack on the performance of the government.
Charging that there were far too many Ministers, Mr Tekere said the President was being badly advised.
Among the leaders, he said, were sharks who had taken advantage of the system to commit crimes and enrich them
He announced his strong opposition to the proposed one-party state Which: would lead to more corruption, $n$
He said the people had had enough of the law being fioutedin the name of the Rresidents office and there hat wo and there had been t tempts to interfere with judges

Kinnock in

angry protest to Mugabe

Confrontation . . . a Zimbabwe soldier orders Mr Neil Kinnock and his wife into a room at an air force base near Mutare.

The Star's Africa News Service
British opposition Labour Party leader Mr Neil Kinnock plans a "strong protest" to President R:bert Mugabe over the detention at gunpulat of himserlf mid lite purty nt mit ulratip in eastera Zimbabe yesterday.

Mr Kinnock told journalists after being held by soldiers in a small hut at Grand Reef military airport near the eastern border city of Mutare that he did not "appreciate being threatened by people with guns".

He is seeing Mr Mugabe later today for a scheduled meeting at the end of his nineday visit to the Frontline states. The incident was not reported in Zimbabwe's press, but Zimbabwean officials at the scene apologised to Mr Kinnock.

In the incident, a lance-corporal brandishing an AK-47 assault rifle herded the Labour leader, his wife Glenys and his party, consisting of three Labour Party officials and a dozen accompanying journalists, into a tiny airport terminal and re, fused to let them out for an hgur.
Mr' Kinnock angrily argued with a corporal in camouflage fatigues, saying he, would lodge an official protest. At one-point, the soldier and Mr Kinnock swore at each other, Mn Kinnock told the soldier: "You are in trouble."

No one at the airport in Mutaret recognised the Kinnocks as' they flew in from Mozambique. Because of a mix-up, the welcoming party, including the provincial governor and British High Commissioner Mr Ramsay Melhuish, had beers told to go to another airport 35 km away.

'Escape committee'

- The Kinnocks and their party arrived at dusk. Mutare is close to the border and Mozambique rebels have launched attacks in the area, so the nervous Zimbabwean military moved in when Mr Kinnock's Zimbabwe Air Force plane arrived, Sapa-AP reports.

The party found themselves being held in a small room. At first Mr Kinnock joked: "Let's form an escape committee." There was an impromptu singing of "Jerusalem" to raise spirits, but then the opposition leader's temper began fraying.

Mr Kinnock said he understood the reasons for tight security and was not upset by the mix-up. But he said he was "steaming" over the soldier's rudeness.

After the incident, Kinnock's party and British High Commission officials refused further comment and drove to Nyanga, a mountain resort 282 km north-east of Harare where the official party met them and apologised.

- Soldiers routinely guard civilian and military airstrips in Zimbabwe. This surveillance has been increased since the June 30 theft of a Zimbabwe Air-Force helicopter for an abortive attempt to rescue alleged South African agents from jail.

In London a Foreign Office spokesman said the incident "all appears to have been a hiccup. Mr Kinnock and the party are now continuing with their programmes".

Snoopy (John van Duyn) fights off the Red Baron (Brian Zeederberg) at The Star Air Show at .Grand Central Airport on Saturday. See Page 5.

Picture by Sean Woods.

Mandela's 70th birthday ia celebrated Worldwide

Public celebrations marking the 70th birthday of jailed ANC' leader Nelson Mandela are being held in many countries today.
Mandela has been in prison for 26 years after being jailed for life when he was convicted of sabotage and conspiracy to overthrow the Government.
Birthday greetings have poured in from around the world

His wife, Winnie, called off a special visit to her husband, saying she would not accept special privileges from the Government
Japan, South Africa's biggest trading partner, has also called for the unconditional release of Mandela.

There has been no official comment from the White House.
Yesterday, tens of thousands of dem-

Zimbabwe frees SA journalists

HARARE - Two South African journalists, a British journalist and 4 their pilot have been released after being detained in Zimbabwe.

- The Ziana news agency reports that a government spokesman said the four had been detained in connection with a June 30 attempt by South African commandos to rescue al$\searrow$ leged South African saboteurs awaiting trial in Zimbabwe.

Detained were Mr
David Beresford of the Guardian, London, Mr Spokes Mashiyane and Mr Carlo Guidozzi, South African-based, and a Zimbabwean pilot living in South Africa, Mr Casey Wilford. (362)

The journalists were covering the visit by British Labour Party leader Mr Neil Kinnock and were arrested on Sunday when their aircraft, owned by a South African charter company, landed in Zimbabwe.

Spy courts are moved inside jails  Zimbabwe gets jitters over SA rescue attempts  The Star's Africa News Service

HARARE - Alarm over the threat of South African attempts to rescue detained alleged spies and saboteurs has forced Zimbabwean authorities to hold legal proceedings inside the jails where suspects are being held.

A Harare magistrate, a state prosecutor and defence lawyers yesterday held hearings for six alleged spies, all whites and either citizens or long term residents, inside two separate prisons in Harare.

Irish citizen Mr Jeffrey Mee and Canadian Mr Dick Laban were remanded to appear again in a fortnight in a hearing at Harare central police station.
The court personnel then drove 20 km to Chikurubi prison on the outskirts of Harare where Britons Ms Patrica Brown and Mr Jack Lewis Walker and Zimbabweans Mr Ivor Harding and his son, Clive, were similarly remanded on charges of carrying out surveillance on the African National Congress.

Journalists attempting to attend the hearings were turned away, prison officials saying they had received "strict instructions" not to permit the press "in any circumstances".
Last week, regulations were published in terms of the nearly 23 -yearold state of emergency permitting courts to sit in prisons, in the wake of an aborted attempt on June 29 to rescue five whites and a black Zimbabwean charged with responsibility for a series of bombings, sabotage and assassination attempts in Zimbabwe.
A Zimbabwean Air Force helicopter stolen by a white pilot, Gary Kane, was subsequenty ditched and wrecked by him shortly before he was picked up at a country airfield by an unidentified aircraft and flown to South Africa.

Zimbabwe govt apologises

IIARARE - Mr Neil- Kinnock, the British Labour Party leader, said yesterday his brief detention and the oneday arrest of three foreign journalists in Zimbabwe on Sunday evening revealed the rising fears in Zimbabwe of penetration by South African agents.
Zimbabwe president Mr Robert Mugabe and the Defence Minister,. Mr Enos Nkala, apologised yesterday for the treatment of Mr Kinnock, his wife Glenys, three aides and 11 journalists, which the Labour leader called "an inconvenient, irritating experience".

'Under pressure'

"This is precisely the sort of treatment that can occur when young soldiers are under pressure," he said at the end of his 10 -day tour of southern Africa.

Despite the controversy, he called on Britain to increase support for the region's black-ruled nations and repeated his commitment to economic sanctions against South Africa.
Soon after several young soldiers detained Mr Kinnock at an air strip in the border town of Mutare, police in Harare arrested a British journalist, two South African cameramen, and a Zimbabwean pilot.
The four were released yesterday afternoon.
The detentions followed army orders to all airports to be on special alert after the theft of an Air Force helicopter by a white Zimbabwean pilot.
This was part of the failed attempt on June 30 to rescue five Zimbabweans jailed in January on charges of murder and spying on the African National Congress for South Africa.
"We live in an area where one doesn't know what will happen in the next minute," Mr Nkala said yesterday after apologising for Mr Kinnock's

President Mugabe ... sorry.

Mr Neil Kinnock ... "irritating experience." detention.
\% The incident started. when Zimbabwean Air Force pilots, ferrying Mr Kinnock from Mozambique to Zimbabwe, decided to land at Mutare instead of the Grand Reef airstrip 40 km away, because of failing light.

A lance corporal rudely ordered Mr Kinnock's party to remain in a blockhouse after they landed.

- The Zimbabwean army also apologised to Mr Kinnock and his party for the incident.

Some of the men involved in Mr Kinnock's abuse at the remote airstrip; and the brigadier in charge of the district, have made their apologes
Brigadier Paradzai Zimonte said: "We are all very sorry for what happened to Mr Kinnock. It should never have taken place."
Then Bishop Joshua Dhobe, the governor of Manicaland province in which the incident occurred, gave a full public apology.
Mr Kinnock - who returns "to Britain tomorrow - responded by hugging the bishop and saying: "It is already forgotten." - The Independent, The Star's Africa News Service.
2rser

necus 917188

SA unionist joins 'world most eminent'

The Argus Foreign Service
LONDON. - A South African trade union leader's name appears in the latest addition of The International Who's Who, published here.

With the entry Mr Matamela Ramaphosa, general secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, joins 18000 others in what is described as "the established source of information on the world's most eminent men and women".

Other new South African entries include the Minister of Justice, Mr Adriaan Vlok, the Rev Frank Chikane, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches and the Rev Winston Ndungane, executive officer of the Church of the Province of South Africa.
Also listed is Mr Edward Perkins, US Ambassador to South Africa.

The International Who's Who is edited by Cape Townborn Mr Richard Fitzwilliams. :

Zimbabweans apologise for holding Kinnock

Argus Africa News Service
HARARE. - The Zimbabwe Government and army have apologised to British opposition leader Mr Neil Kinnock and his frontline states tour party, who were held at gunpoint for an hour by troops on Sunday.

The day after armed soldiers had threatened and abused Mr Kinnock at a remote airstrip, some of the men involved and the brigadier in charge of the district went to apologise to him.
Brigadier Paradzai Zimonte said yesterday: "We are al very sorry for what happened to Mr Kinnock. It should never have taken place."

Bishop Joshua Dhobe, gover nor of Manicalan province, in which the incident happened, issued a public apology. Britain today, responded by: lo Guidozzi and a Zimbabwean based WTN crewmen Mr

Mr Neil Kinnock
hugging the bishop and saying: "It is already forgotten."

- The Southern Africa correspondent of Britain's Guardian newspaper, two South African television crewmen and a pilot accompanying the tour were arrested on Sunday night.
A Worldwide Television News (WTN) representative here said Mr David Beresford of the Guardian, South AfricanSpokes Mashiyane and Mr Carlo Guidozzi and a Zimbabwean pilot living in South Africa, Mr Casey Wilford, had been arrested at Harare airport.

He said a release order signed by deputy police commissioner Mr Godwin Mabika was issued to the law and order branch of the Zimbabwe police this morning.
But the four had since been taken into the custody of the Central Intelligence Organisation, a department controlled by President Robert Mugabe's office.

The WTN representative said he believed Mr Wilford's name had been recognised by immigration officials who knew police wanted to question him. His passengers were taken in for questioning at the same time.

He said police had seemed "satisfied" with their explanations. He expected the four to be released today.

Reporters and a pilot held for flight violation

HARARE -Three foreign journalists and the pilot of their charter aircraft who were detained for violating Zimbabwe's aviation regulations on Sunday, were released yesterday.

A government spokes man said the four had been detained in connection with a June 30 attempt by South African commandos to rescue alleged South African saboteurs awaiting trial in Zimbabwe.
: He said their detention had nothing to do with the visit of the British Labour Party leader Mr Neil Kinnock, and that the pilot had been in Zimbabwe at the time of the unsuccessful rescue mission and that it was necessary to ques tion him. - Sapa

From MICHAEL. HARTNACK MUTARE, Zimbabwe. - British Labour Party leader Mr Neil Kinnock last night threw the blame on South Africa for his detention at gunpoint at Mutare on Sunday night.

He said the frontline states" "sensitivity on security matters stemmed from the violence perpetrated against them by the apartheid system" in South Africa.

Mr Kinnock and his party including his wife Glenys three aides and 12 journal ists, were held after their plane landed at Mutare airfield instead of Grand Reef, where an official welcoming party waited.

Nervous soldiers guarding the small airport less than 10 km from the Mozambique border herded the party unceremoniously into a small hut beside the runway.
According to eyewitnesses, a militiaman told Mr Kinnock to go into the hut and said! "Get in there, we don't want any ... ups."

Mr Kinnock replied in a simplar vein.

Kinnock blames Cxk SA for arrest

Zimbabwe's Minister of De- their meeting yesterday. ence, Mr Enos Nkala, said the People's Militia troops at the airstrip were not expecting the arrival of the 20 -seater plane from Mozambique, where Mr Kinnock had been to visit a refugee camp.
Penned inside the small room with soldiers patrolling in the dark outside, the Labour leader at first joked about forming an escape committee. But later, his temper clearly fraying, he told a Zimbabwean lieutenant: "I can understand the sensitivity, but I don't like being abused. And I don't like being threatened by people with guns."

The party was not released until the official welcoming party turned np.
Mr Kinnock said he accepted the apologies given him by ed the apologies given him at states."

He repeated his demand or Britain to join in a campaign of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa.

Mr Kinnock said Zimbabwe government officials had told him that three newsmen and a pilot who had been arrested in Harare on Sunday night were to be released. Two of those arrested were Johan-nesburg-based newsmen for Worldwide Television News
Some of Britain's mass-circulation newspapers yesterday revelled in the Labour leader's discomfiture. The Sun quoted right-wing Conservative MP Terry Dicks as saying: "Perhaps now he'll keep his Welsh mouth shut about the eyils of South Africa and 'talk about the Anca and talk about the

THE driver eased his car into the overgrown road in Zimbabwe's southern city of Bulawayo and stopped at the back of a house used by the:African National Congress. The men who had hired him from a local employment agency had instructed him to honk three times. As he did, the vehicle exploded in a ball of fire. The driver died instantly.

1 The detonation of that car bomb, on January 11, 1988, has exposed a major South African spy network in Zimbabwe. It led to the arrest of six Zimbabweans, five white and one black, on charges of murder and spying for South Africa. The authorities say the six had been responsible for a series of sabotage operations and assassinations since Zimbabwe gained independence from Britain in 1980.
Late last month a commando group - including at least one Britonworking for South African military intelligence bungled an attempt to rescue the alleged agents as they - were driven from Chikurubi maximum security prison to a magistrate's court in Harare.

Raid

The raid's sole accomplishment was to wreck, an air, force helicopter stolen' by a young white Zimbabwean air lieutenant, and left an 11-year-old girl lying on the ground with gunshot wounds in the stomach. It did, however, bolster Tuesday's successful plea in Parliament by President Robert Mugabe's government for an extension of the state of emergency which has been in force for nearly 23 years.
Since the bungled raid the authorities have $\%$ arrested at least three more people, including a Briton resident in Johannesburg and a white couple with dual British-Zimbabwean citizenship whose home in Harare's smart Beivedere suburb was allegedly used as a meeting place for the plotters. The Briton, Denis Charles Beahan, from Man-

Many agents from South Africa  sentenced to seven years - jail.  leave for South Africa Blood ties appear to chester, was an alleged leader of the fạiled rescue attempt, who panicked at a border post at Kazungula, in western Zimbabwe, scaled a security fence and swam the Zambezi River, only to be apprehended by Botswana police on the other side.

War

It seems that for the alleged sabateurs, the war betweẹn black nationalist guerillas and the white minority Rhodesian government never ended. Barry Bawden (30), was a member of the Rhodesian Light Infantry, Guy Bawden (32), served in a territorial unit before being injured by a land mine. The one who got away to South Africa after he reportedly detonated the car bomb in Bulawayo, Christopher "Kit" Bawden, was a former Selous Scout. The Bawden's ancestors whites who came to Zimbabwe at the end of the last century, setting up farms in the Shangani area east of Bulawayo where, nearly 90 years later, police found arms caches earmarked for sabotage.

The spy ring's sole black, Philip Conjwayo (54), served in Rhodesia's special branch. Michael Smith fought with the Rhodesian Special Air Service (SAS).

That Zimbabwe's security forces remain infiltrated by South African agents eight years after independence is made clear by the case of the fifth detainee, Kevin Woods, who was a senior member of Zimbabwe's Central Intelligence Organisation in Bulawayo until last year.
The sixth, Rory. Maguire; was a 37 -yearold garage owner in Bulawayo who appears to have been swept into a whirlpool of conspiracy from which he could not escape. He has turned State's evidence, was convicted on June 21 of failing to report his knowledge of the spy network, and has been Maguire befriended Mr Woods five years ago in Bulawayo. They used to meet at the municipal sports centre, a favourite watering hole for whites. At a bar in Pretoria in 1986, Maguire said Mr Woods introduced him to several South African agents, including Gray Branfield and Alex West, both former Rhodesian special branch officers.

After a row Maguire had subsequently parted with Mr Woods, Mr Branfield reportedly told him that if he squealed to the Zimbabwean authorities "I would end up with a hole in my head."

Like the prisoners he tried to free Mr Beahan, the Briton, was once part of the Rhodesian military apparatus.
He had been a British paratrooper before coming to Rhodesia in the mid-1970 to fight with the SAS. At independence he, too, went to South Africa, where he is believed to have linked up with the chief of staff's intelligence arm. His latest job, before the rescue operation was to head security for an hotel in Johannesburg.

In the wake of the failed rescue attempt, the white couple arrested last week, Terence and Kathleen Downey, were reportedly preparing to explain their involvement. Kathleen (33), is the sister of one of the original six detainees, $34-$ year-old Michael Smith, whose wife Eileen stayed in the Downey home whenever she came up from Bulawayo to visit her husband in Chikuburi.

It was at the Downey home on June 19, legal sources say, that Eileen Smith conspired with her friend, air lieutenant Gary Kane, a disgruntled young pilot who stole the Augusta Bell helicopter at 7am on June 30 which was to be used in the rescue.

A week before the. attempt, Eileen Smith flew to Britain.
Lieutenant Kane's role has cast a shadow of suspicion over the whites still serving in Zimbabwe's security forces. At : independence, an estimated 5000 black and white members of the security forces fled to South Africa, but many stayed behind. Since then, some have "gone south", often after spectacular sabotage operations, such as the bombing of the ruling Zanu-PF headquarters in Harare in 1981, in which seven people died, and the destruction of a quarter of Zimbabwe's jet fighters at Thorn Hill air base in July 1982.

Kinnock blames SA for his detention

HARARE - British Labour Party leader Neil Kinnock last night blamed SA for his detention at gunpoint at Mutare airstrip on Sunday night and for the arrest of three newsmen and a pilot.

Kinnock said the Frontline states' "sensitivity" on security matters stemmed from the violence perpetrated against them by the apartheid system.

He said: "To a minor extent I have had personal experience (of that sensitivity)."
Kinnock, who returned to London last night, said he had accepted President

MICHAEL HARTNACK

Robert Mugabe's apologies for the incident, given during Kinnock's courtesy call on the President earlier yesterday.

SAPA reports Mugabe told Kinnock Zimbabwe would make "a public statement of apology" over the incident.
Kinnock said there was a danger the incident would overshadow what he considered were the more consequential aspects of his 10 -day visit.
He also repeated his demand for Britain to join a campaign of comprehensive mandatory sanctions, which he was confident could end apartheid in SA.

He also urged extended British logistical and training support to Frontline states defence forces, to help them defeat SA destabilisation.
Meanwhile, in London, the gunpoint detention of Kinnock was given frontpage splash treatment in many British newspapers yesterday.
Some Conservative MPs said the incident was a lesson to Kinnock in the realities of black Africa.

- Soe Pago 3 and Comment on Page 6

Greens chief wants tough action 362  HARARE - A member of the West German Federal Parliament yesterday described the Bonn government's South African policy as "disastrous and immoral".

'The leader of the Greens Party Parliamentary Committee on Southern Africa, Mrs Ursula Eid, said West Germany's continued co-operation with South Africa was rëgrettable.

She said that while Germany was' implementing the limited package of sanctions adopted by the European Economic Community (EEC), the Greens Party felt the country had to take the lead in advocating an'd imposing mandatory sadnctions on Pretoriä: "以
"The' EEC'has adopted specific sanctions like the ban on new invéstment and the import of South African steel and Krugerrands, but this is only a marginal amount of the whole business between Europe and South Africa,:" she said.

Mrs Eid is on a two-nation tour to assess the situation in Southern Africa and possible ways of solving the region's problems. She leaves for Lusaka on Sunday.

She said the Greens Party, which has 44 of the 519 seats in the Federal Parliament, was pushing the government to ban South African Airways from flying to West, Germany and the introduction of Lufthansa, the German airline, flights to Frontline states.

Mrs Eid said developed countries had to take the lead in imposing sanctions and increasing economic support for the SADCC and Frontline states as they were vul nerable. - Sapa

Allegedzonfic SA raider appears $3{ }^{2}$ at hearing
Own Correspondent
HARARE - The man al leged to have been the commander of a South African raider unit as signed to free five prisoners from Chikurubi Prison appeared yes. terday at a special hearing inside Harare Central Prison.
The venue was intended to frustrate further rescué bids:
Mr Denis Charles Bea han, 38, á former paratrooper in the British and Rhodesian armies and said to be a serving member of a South African reconnaissance bat talion, was not asked to plead when he appeared before magistrate Mr Jefta Makhaza and was remanded in custody to August:2
Mr Beahan, known as "Sammy", was detained by Bötswana police on June 26 after swimming the Zambezi in an attempt to escape interrogatión by the Zimbäb. wean authorities at Kazungula border post:
A.companion is thought to have escaped into the Caprivi Strip.
Mr Beahanfaces charges of entering Zimbabweina car with espi onage equipment hid den in secret panels and intended for use in an attempt to rescue five al leged South African agentst Barry and Guy Bawden, Kevin Woods Phillip Conjwayo and Michael Smith
The five, who are due to stand trial for espionage and murder, were to have been freed by the raiders as thèy were being transported from Chikurubi to a court in Harare, for a routine remand hearing," on June 30.

ZIMBABWE  The social burden

Latest official statistics show there are $2,8 \mathrm{~m}$ children at school in Zimbabwe, compared to about 800000 before the Mugabe governmont came to power in 1980. The commitment to bring compulsory education to all its citizens, chiefly in rural areas badly neglected under white rule, has substantially raised literacy levels, increased standards of health and hygiene and reduced infant mortality rates. But the advances have been gained at considerable expense and a ballooning public service wage bill.

- --

227888

362 Fm

Under the Smith government, the coontry's civil service numbered 49000 . Today more than 155000 people (excluding those employed by public corporations, local govcrnment and the armed forces) are on the government payroll. As a consequence, the State now spends more than $50 \%$ of its current expenditure on wages and salaries, compared to $30 \%$ before 1980. And more than half of this payroll, according to the Cabinet minister responsible, Chris Anderson (See Face to Face), goes to teachers.
The Zimbabwean civil service was overhauled by a presidential directive which decreed that the composition of the new service should more accurately reflect population ratios in the country. Simultaneously, the accent was placed on developing services in rural areas and to its traditional law-enforcement and revenue-collecting role was added far greater control over the country's economy. Politically there was a need for these developments, Anderson told the FM, but the financial burden was now cause for concern. "We are now looking at ways to reduce the size of the public service," he said.
The admission will bring little comfort to parents concerned that despite the massive commitment to expanding education facilities, much remains to be done. As a result of a programme to enforce school attendance throughout the country, pupil teacher ratios have risen from around $25: 1$ to $50: 1$ in more extreme cases and more affluent whites accordingly prefer to send their children to private schools or schools in SA.

As a result, the most popular perk offered by employers as a means of evading a wage freeze imposed by government is an undertaking to pay for the private education of their employees' children.
$\qquad$
$\qquad$

ZIMBABWE  Forex restricts trade

Zimbabwe's chronic shortage of foreign exchange has reached a point where the supply of basic goods and services in the economy is in danger of being disrupted.

For long-suffering Zimbabwean businessmen, the annual congress of the Confederation of Zimbabwean Industries (CZI) at Victoria Falls earlier this month, provided a venue to vent their frustrations.
Replying to delegates, Enos Nkala, chairman of the ruling Zanu (PF) party economic committee, said a "critical debate" had begun on economic policy. Minister of Industry and Technology Callistus Ndlovu added the Zimbabwean government was "squarely" facing up to trade liberalisation.
There can be no doubt that remedies to the forex shortages are urgently required, as the following reports, extracted at random from the pages of a single issue of Zimbabwe's Financial Gazette, illustrate:
$\square$ Bulawayo-based importers of borehole drilling equipment, Warrap Borehole Drilling, have been denied foreign currency allowances for imports this year by the Secretary for Trade and Commerce "because we have had good rains, therefore these tools are not really essential;"
$\square$ Oxygen Industries (Oxyco) has advised customers that the shortage of carbide to manufacture acetylene gas has reached crisis proportions since its foreign currency allocation had been "cut to ribbons." Stocks would be exhausted by the end of the month;

- Zimbabwe Allots Ltd reports that "in common with the rest of the mining industry," there is a shortage of forex for importing essential spares to maintain efficient operations. Though after-tax profit rose to ZD\$16,7m from ZD\$7,1m for the year ended March 31, the group was suffering a "critical shortage of rock drill spares;" and $\square$ Bulawayo-based United Portland Cement reports that demand has outstripped supply "and we can't get forex to buy new equipment."
President Robert Mugabe acknowleged at the opening of the $$ 30 \mathrm{~m}$ Zimbabwe Institute of Public Administration that the shortage of building materials was hindering government and private construction projects.

At a consumer level, shortages of basics such as batteries, new motor cars and vehicle spares has long been acute. As a result, the second-hand market in vehicles has boomed. Most advertisers in the smalls columns of the Herald newspaper invite "highest cash offers". Among the prices quoted: 1976 Mercedes 230/4 ( $$ 49000$ ); 1982 BMW 520 i ( $$ 50000$ ) and 1982 Toyota Corolla 1.8 SE Liftback ( $$ 45000$ ). Prices are often above those originally paid.

Underlining the gravity of the problem, a 300 t consignment of perchloroethylene (according to Bulawayo-based Ames Chemicals), arrived just in time to avoid a shutdown of dry-cleaning services in Zimbabwe. Supplies, imported from Germany in a coun-ter-trade deal, would last for a year if carefully rationed.

Foreign currency allocations to businessmen in Zimbabwe are now running at some $25 \%$ of what they were 10 years ago at the height of the bush war. Government response has been to urge import substitution and barter deals, but the severity of the problem has evidently persuaded socialist ideologues within the party hierarchy to reconsider economic policy.
Among the reasons for the shortage of foreign exchange which has prompted strict controls over imports, are:
$\square$ A major increase in the debt-servicing ratio, now said to be around $40 \%$ of forex earnings (international loans raised since independence were used to introduce basic services to neglected rural areas and were fiot income-generating);
$\square$ Declines in international commodity prices and hence export incomes; and $\square$ An estimated cost of $\$ 1 \mathrm{~m}-\$ 2 \mathrm{~m} /$ day on Zimbabwe's aid to Mozambique, an issue which is attracting the increasing ire of the private sector.

For the Zimbabwcan government, the noble objectives of introducing basic services in rural areas and raising literacy in the coun? try - the civil service has grown from around 49000 to 155000 and some $2,8 \mathrm{~m}$ children are said to be at school today comp pared with fewer than 800000 before inde $_{\text {F }}$ pendence - must now clearly be reconciled with economic reality.

HARARE - The Zimbabwean economy is set for 6 percent growth this year after an excellent agricultural season, says Ziana, the official news agency.
According to this month's edition of the Standard Chartered Bank's economic bulletin, quoted by Ziana, agriculture is spearheading the upturn, although this year the mining industry will provide a major boost.
"The value of agricultural production is forecast to increase more than 40 percent to Z $$ 1,95$ billion; which would translate into a 3 percent increase in real gross domestic product."
The bulletin says value added in agriculture has been at its lowest level since 1980 and almost 25 percent below its 1985 peak:
"However, even with this strong recovery, agriculture would still fail to regain its 1985/6 levels."
Increased gold volumes, higher prices for nickel and copper and improved markets and prices for asbestos and ferrochrome are likely to increase mining output more than 20 percent.

Standard Chartered says the price freeze lifted earlier this year achieved limited success in bringing down the rate of con:sumer inflation. Added to this, sharp rises are expected in the second half of this year.
Consumer inflation stood at 14 percent when the freeze was imposed in mid-1987 and at just over 8 percent in the first four months of this year.
"However, only limited satisfaction can be drawn from this experience since not only is the underlying inflation rate of 8 percent far too high for comfort, but it is clear that price increases will accelerate in the second half of the year," says the bulletin.
The annual inflation rate, which slowed to 11,8 percent in 1987 from 14,2 percent in 1986, is unlikely to fall below 7,5 percent in mid-year before rebounding sharply in the second half of the year.
"As the 5 percent general price award starts to filter through into the price index, so inflation will intensify and can be expected to exceed 12 percent by the end of the year."
The bulletin says much depends on the extent of expected delays in approving price increases beyond the 5 percent already announced. - Sapa.
friday, July 25; 1988; - HARARE - When black Zimbabweans took up arms to fight system, the major problem was the problem was the mbalance. in the allocation of land, with more than 80 percent of the populaion restricted to overcrowded and arid areas of the country. At independence in 1980, a very ambitious resettlement programme was announced which would have redressed and satisfied the land hunger of the indigenous black majority.
Alongside it a radical and reform programme for the rural areas was introduced to raise standards of living and make access to social services affordable.
The resettlement programme struggled in he first four years and in 984 , the then prime minister, Mr Robert Mugabe, appointed eight governors with the specific task of coordinating development in their respective provinces.
Both the resettlement and land reform programmes fell under these ensor government officers.
Four years on, the governors still have a daunting task to beneficiaries of these programmes of the need to involve themselves in the identification of projects, project planring 'and implement ton.
The department of - Rural Development says about 44200 families different types of schemes on farms acquired by the governmont.

In terms of the targets for resettlement, a great deal still remains to be desired result fifocused on small and medium size towns int commercial farming areas.
They offer better incentives for industrial decentralisation and L could easily become regional employment centres, ${ }^{\circ}$ he says.
N The emphasis on communal areas will not address the broader issues of employment generation and national economic dévelpment, Mr éhimutit says. has been made on redressing imbalances in the distribution of land a access to social service and employment oppor tunities the rate at which they are being provided falls far below expectatons
The priorities for de velopment in Zimbabwe second look. - Spa.

While some progress
gould be given a critical

126 Moo families out of 162000 still have to be respelled," says the Zany (PF) deputy secretary for production and former Mr Mover Agriculture
Mr Mover Mahachi.
the resettlement programme, he says the first fiveycar national development plan envisages the resettlemen of 75000 families at rate of 15000 a year. This requires 750000 ha of land at not less than ZD34,5 million.
Ho says the purchase of farms or resettlement lack of funds and where land is available there is no money to finance the infrastructural develop men:
Mr Malachi says is spill acquiring more is slit acquiring more in $\mathbf{m} / \mathrm{nd}$ that land not a limitless resource that can be shared indefinitely among our population.
"We need to focus our the communal lands as both overcrowded areas and places where productivity and growthan in and the pr implemented.:

- He says at Mutoko . He says at Mutoko agro-based industries have been planned, a granite tile, manufacturing company approcessors of products of local products are being The ion program-organisato the creation of a game

Pohtical comment in this issue by Aggrey
Klaate and Joe Thloloe. Subediting, headlines and posters by Sydney Mathaku. All of al Commando Road, Industrial. West. Johannesburg. $\qquad$
The reproduction or broadcast without permission of articles published in this newspaper on any current economic. political or whigions topic. is forbidden and expressly reserved to The Argus Printing and Publishing Company Lid under Section 12(7) of the Copyright Act 1978.

- Write to the Editor at PO Bus roth? Jatbimbnewburg 2000. Nom-de-plumes con be use ct. but full names and addresses should be sup. Plexor cur win jullded can be generated". There are differing views on the success of resctlement, but on the has not satisfied. the has not satisfied the initial problem of land hunger.
The rate of resettlemont has been much slower than planned.
Meanwhile Meanwhile, the rural areas have to be re. organised to sustain the increasing population especially since the land in some areas has become totally useless due to over-population and overuse
The Mashonatand east provincial administrator, Mr Martin Mukwehwa, says the idea of planned villages was only accepted in one of eight districts.

Programme

i. This poses problems with infrastructure developments designed . accordance with the land reform programme.
In some areas people oppose planned villages reduction of livestock cherished as a source of wealth in the rural areas as well as reduction in the size of household plots. Architect of the Mwenezi district programme and current district administrator of Mutoko. Mr Kumurai Mugoni, believes with the right approach these problems and others like prop pates on village can be solved 50 percent
The rest of the country stantially from sub. reform programme.
On the standards of living and creation of employment, Mashonaland west provincial planning officer $M$ Samuel Chimut, $\qquad$ investors about the existence of financial institutions such as the Urban Development Corporation, Small Corporation, Small went Corporation and ment Corporation and the Zimbabwe ment Bank.
Tent Bank
Their purpose includes assisting industrial and business development at growth points.
He says the attention being given to growth points can achieve

- To page 9 (f

HARARE - The death penalty should be made mandatory for all spies and armed commandos found guilty of threatening the security of Zimbabwe, Political Affairs Minister Mr Eddison Zvobgo has told Parliament.
Mr Zuobgo said that keeping such prisoners, in jail for many years was expensive, the national news agency Ziana reported

I suggest that the death penalty be made man datory in all these cases;'s he added
The former Minister of Justice added that life imprisonment was a mockery in the judicial sys tem because convicts served between 14 and 20 years, and were released on parole
The courts should be empow ered to pass sentences on anyone found guilty of severe crimes Warranting adiffestence in terms of years or use the unambiguous iterm for the rest of his naturalliféthe said The criminalaw needed re form particulary security legisis lation
Our procedural law needs to be demy stocedural law needs to its insane formalism...
Reople should be allowed to defend their rights without having to hire lawyers, because what was important was justice and not" the archaic forms and the recitations required by our presentlaw of civil procedure": - Sapa
$\qquad$ $7 \mathrm{~s}+\mathrm{L}$

Slogans not enough, Mr $5 \therefore$  an HARARE - From all sides the Govern-

niur ment of President Robert Mugabe is coming under fire for its handling of the econnn' omy, corruption, and the hypocrisy surrverounding the ruling party's supposed comsur mitment to socialism.

Parliament has been the forum for the uncriticism, despite "advice" from Mr is a Maurice Nyagumbo, senior Minister of Po
Si. litical Affairs in the President's Office, nonthat the party's central committee would inu be a better place to air grievances.
iii. The latest attack has come from Dr Edt:on dison Zvobgo, who was dropped from the rom cabinet in the reshuffle which followed the unity pact with Mr Nkomo, but still holds Nis: ministerial rank.
orr Dr Zvobgo widely regarded as one of the nin most articulate and politically experienced nup ministers was bitterly critical o onm: He accused other ministers of hiding beis whind the president's coat tails and runninmg away from urgent issues.
aldr Dr Zvobgo echoed criticism of the socia-
-m, list policies which used to be expressed by or. Mr Ian Smith and his supporters when they -had seats in the House.
yoc. TThe time had come, said Dr Zvobgo, to

By ROBIN DREW, The Star's Africa News Service
Mr Robert Mugabe's supposed commitment to socialism is coming under fire by leaders who say Zimbabwe needs to establish free trade to cushion rocketing unemployment.
wake up and realise that slogans would not pay the rent or buy a meal.

The country could not afford all it was spending on education and appointing committees and initiating studies would not provide jobs.
"Soaring prices, soaring wages, enforced employment, stifling regulations, a complicated myriad of bureaucratic committees in government, timid foreign investment policies and more, all these guarantee that the unemployment problem will be intractable," he charged.
Dr Zvobgo, who had several run-ins with Mr Mugabe before the president dropped him from the Cabinet, called for the establishment of free trade zones and free trade dentres to attract developers.
"This country is living on borrowed time," he said, "and sooner or later the deficit is going to be called"

Criticisms like this coming from people who were at the centre of affairs when Zimbabwe shaped its economic policies cannot be ignored.
Dr Zvobgo was barracked in the House during his verbal attack, but his views are reported prominently on the front page of the local Herald newspaper.
Independent white members who owe their seats in Parliament to Mr Mugabe's ruling Zanu (PF) party have also been speaking out.
Mr Henry Elsworth, who was put back into Parliament as a non-constituency member after the specially reserved white seats were abolished, warned that the government would not survive unless it solved the worsening unemployment problem.

He told an attentive House that unemployment was reaching horrific propor ions and conditions had to be be created to promote external investment.
Government ministers and party leaders have also been coming under fire in the Senate for amassing wealth and for losing touch with the people.

Education gets lion's share in Zimbabwe

HARARE - Zimb̈abwe's new budget, announced yesterday by Senior Minis ter Bernard Chidzero, has jumped by almost $17 \%$, to a record $Z $ 6,052 \mathrm{bn}$ (8788: $Z $ 5,173 \mathrm{bn}$ ),

Education continues to get the lion's share of the budget," with a massive 2 $$ 2127 \mathrm{~m}$ - about $27 \%$ - increas over last year, bringing the total"education vote to just short of $Z $ 1 \mathrm{bn}$, ${ }^{2}$
There was only one education mins try when last year's appropriation of Z $783,9 \mathrm{~m}$ was allocated $\mathrm{Z} \$ 22 \mathrm{~m}$ in crease over the previous year.
The unity accord between the ruling Zanu (PF) and PF-Zapu' parties Zanu (PF) and Cabinet which resultbrought in a newturing of the ediscation edin the restructuring of the education arrangements into the Primary and Secondary Education Ministry and the Secondary Euction Ministry

The Primary and secondary Educa Ministry has Higher Education Z$846,744m and Ministry, which deand the various versity of Zimbabwe and. $7 $ 150 \mathrm{~m}$ polytechnic institutes, gets 2$10m. Together, these votes gi a whopping $Z $ 996744,000$. 80 educa Since independence, in the biggest tion has always beengiven the bigince budgetary allocation, followed since 983 by the derence vors the second Once again defence get allocabiggest slice of the cake with tion of $Z $ 768,254 \mathrm{~m}(Z $ 720,0,1)$. of just : This is a modest increase under $7 \%$.

Leaping into third place on the allocations table is the Public Construction and National Housing Ministry with a yote of $7 $ 371,5 \mathrm{~m}(\mathrm{Z} $ 312,732)$ - - Sapa

He

HARARE Lance-corporat tocorporal or lañcecorporat to po vate? Mum's the wordas far as the Zimbabwe gov ernment is concerned 30
When asked whetuet the soldier who kepte Bity ish 0 Oposition leddees Neil Kinnock and party locked up tor an hours th an airport near Mutare would be promotedizor disciplined, the 4 imo babwe authorities dein clined to say.
London's Sundiqu Express, howeyerbor ported last week that the soldier had been promatta ed for his action.
Recalling that Prat
dent Mugabe and sexyenal of his Ministers hadeexr plained the circum stances surroundine the incident to Mr Kinhoc and the public, a spokes man said:
As far as we are cerned we have nothing more to say Security Defence Minister Eibl Nkala saíd in an offfrotap statement after thesindel dent thate it occurrea shortly after an thatathe orised aircraft lañdeat ad another airfield tó teetch alleged South African' sponsoredsaboteursisimp ye 11 And so when the ais craft carrying Mriziny nock made an unsche sduled landing at Mutare there was tight séctirtty ail round T "L would have wished To thank the troops 10 volved for theiruvig: lance, but regret thatjin their viglance, they caused tinconvénientezto the leader of the Byitish Labour Party.
tathe Government spokesman declined to identify the lance cop orta pincharge or give any du Ptails about his military Servicette ently, her use of both her prof fessional name and ifer married name, which is entered in her passport.

"It", was a genuine mistake," Joy said. "They did apologise tome.
"They (the OIO) said people were tising two names and perhaps this was what was worrying them. We heard they thought "South African agents often used the name Cooper."
Miss Louise Lombard, chairman of the Cecchetti Society of Southern Africa (a ballet body) said she had been "horrified" to hear the news of Joy's arrest.
Miss Lombard said the secretary of the society in Harare, Mrs' Dawn Saunders, had informed her on Thursday that Joy had been detained and later released:

Scare

OnJune 30 an abortive attempt was made tó free five alleged South African agents held in Chikurbi maximum security prison, byy mata The ensuing security scare also "netted" one famodede tainee - British 0pposition leader Neil Kinnock, who damaged his election chãices by a swearing match with a Zimbabwean army cornoral at an airfleld cors Saunders had learned of Joy's detention when she: went to her hotel at 8 am . She made a dêsperate appeal to the Minister of State for National Scholarships, Senator Joe Culverwell; a ballet enthusiast enthusiast:
"He came (to the police station) straight away, but the CIO had already realised their mistake by the time he

He was detained over a paly charged with murder jocular remark that he was and remanded - with full civilians, are said freed since the amnesty.

OSIUOID

SIY SYBə.Iq

 वqu.sิnJ

 and a secret service agent walk from court free men.
 A WOMAN who received a personal assurance from President Robert Mugabe that her twin brother's killอлedeh :ScOur NOd Kg

(2)

FROM all sides the government of President Robert Mugabe is coming under fire for its handling of the economy, corruption and the hypocrisy surrounding the ruling Zanu party's supposed commitment to socialism.
Parliament has been the forum for the criticism despite "advice" from Mr Maurice Nyagumbo, Senior Minister of Political Affairs in the President's office, that the party's central committee would be a better place to air grievances.
The latest attack on many aspects of the government's policy has come from Dr Eddison Zvobgo, who was dropped from the Cabinet in the reshuffle which came after the unity pact with Mr Joshua Nkomo's Zapu but who still holds ministerial rank and who is concerned with party matters and implementing the unity accord.
Dr Zvobgo, widely regarded as one of the most articulate and politically experienced Ministers, was bitterly critical of of his colleagues in the government. He ac cused other Ministers of hiding behind the Mr Mugabe and running away from urgent issues.
His attack came after that by another prominent politician and former close associate of Mr Mu gabe's, the firebrand Edgar Te kere.
Dr Zvobgo echoed criticism of the socialist policies which used to be expressed by Mr Ian Smith and his supporters whèn they had seats in the House of Assembly.
The time had come, said Dr Zvobgo, to wake up and realise that slogans would not pay the rent or buy a meal. The country could not afford all it was spending on education. Appointing committees and initiating studies would not provide jobs.
"Soaring prices, soaring wages, enforced employment, stifing reg. ulations, complicated myriad bureaucratic committees in goveriment, timid foreign investment policies and more - all these guarantee that the unemployment problem will be intractable," said the Minister sounding more like a member of the opposition.

Dr Zvobgo, who had several run-ins with Mr Mugabe before the president dropped him from the Cabinet, called for the establishment of free trade zones and free trade centres to attract developers
He said the country must resist the temptation to borrow blindly and live beyond its means.
"This country is living on borrowed time and sooner or later the deficit is going to be called."

Centre of affairs

Criticism like this - coming from people who were at the centre of affairs when the Zimbabwe government shaped its economic policies - cannot be ignored.

Dr Zvobgo was barracked in the House during his attack, but his views were reported prominently on the front page of the govern-ment-controlled Herald paper.
Independent white MPs, who owe their seats in Parliament to Mr Mugabe's party, have also been speaking out
Mr Henry Elsworth, who was returned to Parliament as a non-constituency member after the specially reserved white seats were abolished, warned that the government would not survive for long unless it solved the worsening unemployment problem.

External investment

He told an attentive House that unemployment was reaching "horrific" proportions. Conditions must be created to promote external investment.
Ministers and party leaders have also been coming unde fire in the Senate for amassing wealth and losing touch with people.

Backbenchers said the president and the country's socialist principles were getting a bad name.

People were asking why Mr Mugabe had surrounded himself with certain individuals. - Argus Africa News Service.

Own Correspondent

HARARE. - A diplomatic row may be brewing between Britain and Zimbabwe over the continuing detention of six whites who yesterday had spying charges dropped "for lack of evidence" after nearly a year in prison.
The six are to remain in custody until the government decides their fate.

A spokesman for the detainees, Mr Ivor Duncan Harding, said they were being victimized for the unsuccessful June 30 bid to free five other alleged

British investigate transfer of SA 'spy'

Own Correspondent

HARARE - A spokesman for the British High Commission here yesterday confirmed that diplomats are investigating the possible illegal ex tradition of a former British army paratrooper, Mr Denis Charles "Sam my" Beahan, 40, from Botswana to Zimbabwe on July 2.
No extradition treaty exists between Botswana and Zimbabwe but Mr Beahan, who is alleged here to have been working for SA Military Intelligence, was handed over without legal process to the Zimbabwean Central Intelligence Organization following his arrest near Kazungula
The question of illegal movement of detained British subjects across international boundaries has al ready.been raised in the case of Oli via Forsythe, who security sources say was detained in Lusaka in 1986
She was taken - apparently illegally - to àn ANC camp in Angola

South African agents
"We were not the ones to be res cued and were in no way involved," Mr Harding told provincial magis trate Mr Albert Mkandla at a special hearing in the grounds of Chikurubi maximum-security prison
"Yet we are being punished,", "he said.
Visits from friends and relatives had been severely restricted, all cell furniture had been removed "and I am afraid people are going to have trouble with piles", complained. Mr Harding.
Books and radios had also been confiscated, he said.
Mr Mkandla said that but for the detention orders signed by Homéf fairs Minister Mr Moven Mahachisthe six would be free to go, following withdrawal of all charges under Zimbabwe's Official Secrets Act.
The six were alleged to have gath : ered information on African National Congress members ifor South African intelligence. They were never asked to plead:
The six are: Mr Harding and his son.
Clive, 26, both Zimbabwean citizens.
Two British passport holders, Mrs Patricia Grace Brown, 40; and Squaad ron Leader Jack Lewis-Walker, 55;
A Canadian Mr Richard Laban 152 and an Irish passport holder Mr Gef frey Mee, 46, both of whom workedsas technicians for the Zimbabwean Post Office. Mr Harding was employed in post office security Squadron Leader Lewis-Walker,ra retired provost marshal of the Rho desian Air Force who was working as a senior civil servant at the time of his detention last September, is the father of Air Lieutenant Nigel LewisWalker, one of the "Thornhill. officers" whose trial and detention in 1982-84 aroused an international hu-man-rights outcry

Mugabe's party showing some capitalist flair  businesses or farms in

HARARE - President Robert Mugabe's ruling Zimbabwe African Na tional Union (Zanu) party has established a holding company to control several multi-million dollar commercial enterprises.
Enos Nkala, Finance Secretary in the 15 mem ber Politburo of the avowedy socialist party, was named chairman of the Zimbazwe National Holding Corporation.
Nkala, a former Fi nance Minister, Who is now Defence Minister in Mugabe's government, told reporters the corporation acquired share holdings in farms, a tex tile company, a real es tate business and a trading organization.
It also acquired a con trolling interest indepartmental stores in Zimbabwe, sold by the international Woolworth group.

LIQUOR STORES

Nkala gave no Indica tion of the value of the ruling party's invèstments but said they in cluded 50 percent shareholdings in two duty free liquor stores and Zimbabwe's only airline servicing and catering busi the agriculture based economy but the party adopted a leadership code which limits party officials to owning one home and bars them from owning private businesses or earning secondary incomes.
Most party leaders, including Cabinet ministers, own businesses and more than one home

Nkala said that several
Cabinet ministers and politburo and party central committee members were appointed to sit on the board of directors of the party's new holding company.

FAIR COMPETITION

party enterprises would rely on'their man agement skills to compete fairly in Zimbabwe's. mixed economy "without exercising political muscles," Nkala said
He disclaimed suggestions that the party's business acquisitions were at odds with its' so cialist aims.
"We cannot preach so" cialism without being seen to be productive," he said: We have to live by example. Socialism does not mean loafing or doing nothing:- - Sapa-AP ness.
Most of the multi-million dollar enterprises were established in the Wstern-style economy of the former Rhodesia before it became Zimbabwe in 1980 In 1980, Mugabe's ruling party vowed to lead the nation on a path it de scribed as being guided by Marxist-Leninist principles:
No steps were taken to nationalise large-scale

－A A deputy secretary-general of the UN Trade and Development Conference.

 of taking up a post at the new University College of

 He-majored in psychology at Roma University LSOd SNOILVN GBLINO dOL also has President Mugabe as an "old boy".

 Dr Bernard Chidzero, the 61-year-old urbane

 HARARE - The man who, after Mr Robert Mugabe, is in a position to exercise the greatest influuOJə YD!!nb on panies may now import machinery rather than financial capital for new projects. There is also a promise to give incentive payments - based on turnover andemployment creation - to firms with new projects.

CM Sobs

Bad news was that the budget deficit will increase more than $28 \%$ this year to a record $\mathrm{Z} $ 1,15 \mathrm{bn}$. Total spending will increase $14,5 \%$ while revenue will rise a forecast $11 \%$. The deficit is to be financed primarily from domestic borrowings, including a $\mathrm{Z} $ 350 \mathrm{~m}$ increase in government's bank overdraft. Since government is also planning to issue short-term government stocks, the impact on the money supply, and consequently inflation, is likely to be substantial.
There is little change in the pattern of spending: education, defence, debt service and subsidies absorb $60 \%$ of the total.
The minister has come in for sharp criticism for his failure to move on the subsidy front, with subsidies put at more than Z $$ 630 \mathrm{~m}$ or some $6 \%$ of GDP. Main beneficiaries are the railways, the State-owned Zimbabwe Iron & Steel company and the agricultural marketing authority.
Critics complain that - on two counts - Chidzero failed to take the bull by the horns. First, the escalating deficit will send unfortunate signals to the international business and financial community and, secondly, the rement incentives. Capital equipment imported for approved new projects will be free of sales and import taxes, while foreign com-eight years.

"The majority of the remaining white citizens and residents have been loyal and have made a solid contribution to the develop. ment of our country.
"We should not tar them all with the same brush as the traitors. But, just as much as we should not tar them all with the same brush, we should also be selective in our acceptance of them and reposing trust in theme" it said.
The paper also called for greater serutiny of citizenship applications by foreigners.
"Citizenship and residence should be carned over a long period. Appli. cations for utizenship and residence should be scrit linised more carefully than In the past DDeds of sale for im moväble póoperty stoutd also be carelully scrutinised:"
Thie papers comment follows the recent defecLion to SA by an airforce pilotadter an abortice attempt to spring six whites from detention The prisonets lace sabotage charges.
We are utterly dismayed that the main beneficiaries from this policy (reconciliation), namely the while citizens: of Zimbabwe are the ones who are undermining that policy. For the past eight years, many ofs them have' not dentified with the new or $\qquad$
$\qquad$

Zimbabwe poised to  honour its heroes

$\frac{\text { 变 }}{\text { 絃 }}$
HARARE－This week，tens of thousands of Zimbabweans will gather at their national shrine on the outskirts of Harare to honoum the heroes who died in the cause of liberation．

解为
Dominating＂Heroes＂Acre＂，de signed by North Korean anctists and still to get its finishing touches，is a 40 m high tower bearing a symbol－ ic eternal flame
The monument，which has so fad cost about Ril6 million，is the burial place of $10^{\circ}$ hêroes，some of whom died after independence，but who played signif－ icant roles in wresting Zim－ babwe from white ruile．
It is estimated that between 30000 and 40000 people died in the bitter struggle which lasted some 15 years
Many lie in shallow $s$ un－ mạrked graves in the bush．The bones of hundreds of others lie at the bottom of mineshafts．
But what of the ＂freedom fight－ ers＂who survived the war？$: x$

Periodically the fate of the ex－ combatants comes up for de－ bate and accusa－ tions fly that yes－ terday st heroes have become todays for gotten men． are yif thoutjogs，they may well feel this is true But for thousands of others，the coming of peace created opportuni； ties that might have been denied them forever．
They were among the 35000 der mobilised ex－combatants who were given a new start in life．1．：．$\quad$ ？
Some ended up as Members of Parliament，some became Miniś ters．Nearly 3000 underwent tech－ nical and commercial training others took their demob pay of R5 000 and formed collective ven tures of which about half are stil going．
More than 40000 ex－combatants are in government employment， serving in the army or other branches of the security forces，in the civil service in jobs ranging from orderlies to magistrates or Permanent Secretaries heading mininistries． ta number of scholarship funds were started to encourageiex－comt batants to further their studies abroad，
More than 4000 former guerilla fighters went back to schoo．

Now in an effot to rel employed ex－conbatants， the government nay pró vide special subidies to parastatals and privaté concerns whichemploy enough of them to num－ ber more than five per－ cent of their laboir force． rabor forc
－Whites have been urged to attero this year＇s Heroes：Day cere－ monies to show their loy－ alty to the new crder：A

The official fuide to the striking mpument with its graniteslabs，the Tomb of the Inknown Soldier and nurals de ${ }_{-}$ picting the rivolutions says it was bult，to hons our the heroes．

They includ national leeaders，freedon fighters and dedicated upporters of the nationalliberation whose activith contri buted to the fill victory of declaringindepen dence on April 81980
Secondy，the eroes in clude contemprary andat future sons andaughters of Zimbabwe hose com－ mitment to th newn na tion will justift their bur ${ }^{-}$ ial at this sared spot Buried there it present are：Leopold rakawira Herbert Chiteo，Josiap Tongogara，Json Moyo George Silundka，Rekay Tangwena；Masotsh Ndloviu，Robsa Manyika Simon Mazoodze，and Josiah Chinarano．

FALCON  Capex burden

Activities: Gold mining in Zimbabwe.
Control: Afex Corporation owns $26,1 \%$ of the equity.
Chairman and managing director: R G Stephens.
Capital structure: 19,97m ords of 50c. Market capitalisation: R24m.
Share market: Price: 120c. Yields: $5,6 \%$ on dividend; $33,8 \%$ on earnings; PE ratio, 3,0 ; cover, 6,1. 12 -month high, 150 c ; low, 120 c .
Trading volume last quarter, 21000 shares.
Financial: Year to March 31.

|  | '85 | '86 | '87 | '88 |
| :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: |
| Tons milled (000) | 355 | 383 | 398 | 372 |
| Working profit (Z$m). | 6,6 | 6,2 | 7.1 | 7 |
| Capital exp. ( $2 $ \mathrm{~m}$ ) .. | 3,3 | 4,3 | 6,0 | 4,2 |
| Earnings (ZC) $\dagger$........ | 27,7 | 31,9 | 35,5 | 30,4 |
| Dividends (Zc) $\dagger$....... | 10 | 10 | 10 | , |

-* Dainy and Venice mines only $\dagger$ Adjusted for 9 -for- 1 bonus issue on April 61988
Falcon has wasted little time confirming the more pessimistic aspects of chairman Roy Stephens's forecast. The Dalny mine has extended the loss of the March quarter while the Venice mine slipped perilously close to break-even - and there seems little prospect of an improvement which will allow an early resumption of dividend payments.
The two mines'problems present the company's foreign owners with something of a dilemma. Zimbabwe only allows dividends totalling $25 \%$ of taxed profit to be externalised. While the mines were profitable but spending heavily on capital projects the restriction had no effect. Last year the final dividend was passed as Dalny slipped into losses and as unavoidable capital expenditure was incurred.
This year comparatively heavy capital expenditure will be inescapable. At Dalny considerable development is needed over the next 18 months to re-establish the mine's lower levels as full producing units, while at Venice profits will be fully absorbed by capital spending. Dalny is budgeted to spend $\mathrm{Z} \$ 3 \mathrm{~m}$ on a sands processing plant and a further $\mathbf{Z} \$ 5,7 \mathrm{~m}$ on shaft sinking and development. How this will be financed is another matter. At the end of March Falcon had net current assets of only $\mathrm{Z} \$ 2,9 \mathrm{~m}$ while sharply lower recovery grades at Dalny imply the mine will continue to ${ }^{\prime}$ generate losses for the next few quarters.

Stephens is eager for help from the State in the form of a higher guaranteed minimum gold price. It seems a vain hope. At present Zimbabwe guarantees its gold miners a floor price of $\mathbf{Z} $ 650 / \mathrm{oz}$, but Falcon made a net loss of $Z $ 658000$ in this year's June quarter, so it is hard to envisage the Zimbabwean government agrecing to a floor-price increase which would render Dalny profitable at its present grades. The upshot is that Falcon can probably borrow to make good any cash flow shortfall. But this, in turn, implies that dividends will take second place to debt repayment as and when Dalny's operations return to profits.
In April the mine made a 9 -for- 1 bonus issue of shares, lifting the number of issued shares to $19,97 \mathrm{~m}$ from their previous $1,997 \mathrm{~m}$. However, the enhanced marketability does not compensate for the poor immediate dividend outlook

Desperate bic  to free TV bomb suspert  Sunday Times Reporter

THE family of a black South African murder suspeet being held in Zimbabwe is desperately trying to raise cash perately trying to raise cash to obtain legal assistance for to ob
Mr Leslie Johannes Lesia 51 , of Bloemfontein is bein held in the maximum security Chikurubi Prison, outside Harare.
He's awaitin charged with murdering the - wife of an ANC official with a bomb placed in a TV at her home on May 111987.
${ }^{\prime}$ 'Sources said Mr Lesia claimed he was abducted, detained illegally, tortured and framed.
His impoverished family in Botshabelo, Bloemfontein, have heard no word from him since he left his home on May 51987.
Before leaving his family Mr Lesia told his wife, Leah and children Gordon, Joseph, Hugh and Maud that he was going to Johannesburg to find a sponsor for his dream school for black children where they could learn ballet, gymnastics, body building and dancing.
We never saw him again," said Hugh, 25, who, along with his brother Joseph and sister Maud are jobless. His mother and eldest brother suppport the family.
The first we heard were Press reports that he was in jail.
"But we haven't the rioney to obtain proper legal assistance," said Hugh
The family now lives in terror, with members fear ing they will become victims of a political vendetta.
To protect her family, Mrs Lesia refused to comment. "We don't know why our father is in prison," said Hugh.

He was never interested in politics and has never been in trouble before.

Loved

"He is a good man, a man. who loved his family very much."
They have received no letters and heard no word from their father who, prior to his capture, ran an arts and crafts shop in Botshabelo.
"The problem is that we don't know who to contact for help," Hugh said.
We go to people, follow up leads, but we have heard nothing. We are preparing or the worst.'
There is little food and no coal at the Lesia's humble home, where they live with home, where they live with their grandmother, Maude, and Hugh's children.
"It broke our hearts when we heard that our father had been tortured. Why are black people doing this 'to him?" asked Hugh.

CP Correspondent

THE New York-based Hunger Project has honoured President Robert Mugabe as "one of the intellectual giants of the African continent".

A statement from the organisation said the President had improsed the general quality of life of Zimbabweans since independence in 1980.

The Hunger Project, which cloose Mugabe as the 1988 winner of the Africa Prize for Leadership, said he introduced policies that made Zimbalwean agriculture the biggest success story in Africa.
"President Mugabe is internationallyrespected as one of the intellectual giants of the African continest, IIe has achieved a high degree of racial harmony which few could have predicted would follow Zimbabwe's violent struggle for independence.
"Ile has empowered the black majority to achieve rapid economic gains while retaining the talents and productivity of the white minority. The success of this policy was dramatically demonstrated ly a nett influx of 1000 white farm families into Zimbabwe in 1985," said the statement.
The Africa Prize for Leadership is an initiative of the Ilunger Project to annualIy honour a distinguished African who exhibits exceptional leadership in bringing about a sustainable end to hunger nationally, regionally and continentally.
The prize is intended to focus world attention on the importance of African leadership and the commitment and contributions of African leaders to their people's economic and social advancement.
Mugabe is expected to receire the prize, which carries a R 250000 cash award, at a ceremony in New York on September 15.
Last year's prize was jointly awarded to Senegal's President Abdou Diouf and the director of the centre of insect physiology and ecology in Nairobi and founding prestdent of the Arrican Academy of Sciences, Prof Thomas Odhiambo.
"While food shortages continue to Pres Mugabe . . 'intellectual giant'.

threaten many countries south of the Sahara, the Southern Africa nation of Zimbabwe stands out as an exception. Zimbabwe is not only self-suffiencient in its staple food, maize, but exports much of its surplus to other African countries," said the statement.

Besides agriculture, the statement said, public health and education had improved tremendously in Zimbabwe. The infant mortality rate had dropped by almost half since 1979, primary school enrolment had tripled and secondary school enrolment had increased five-fold.

CONDOMS REDUCING ZIMBABWE'S FERTILITY RATE

HARARE - Zimbabweans use more contraceptives than any other African country south of the Shara, according to the Department of Finance and Development.

So says a quarterly publication of the IMF and the World Bank, the national news agency Ziana reports.
"Not surprisingly, Zimbabwe is the only African country to experiene a demonstrable decline in fertility rate," it says.
The publication cited education, urbanisation, rising per capita income and improved health as the major factors for the drop in fertilty levels.
"Health has also improved, life expectancy at birth has risen and expectancy at birth has risen and the infant mortality rate has reportedly fallen to 70 per 1000 live births from 100 in 1965.
"Government policy has played a crucial role in the widespread adop ton of family planning.
"The government has taken steps to build a consensus about the legitimacy of family planning," the pubcation says.

Education had been used skilfully in secondary schools and colleges to promote family planning programmes.
"Most important, the government has maintained and strengthened its programmes for delivery of family planning services", according to the report.
"Its attitude is that family planming services are an essential part of regular government-sponsored maternal and child health care," the publication maintains. - Sapa.
 Harare only learnt of the detention of Mr Leslie Lesia of Bloemfontein, on murder charges in Zimbabwe, "more than a year after his arfest," the Department of Foreign Affairs said yesterday.
In a statement issued in Pretoria, the Department said it wished to elucidate its role in the matter, following reports in the Sunday Times on August 7 and 14.
The Sunday Times reported Mr Lesia was being held in the maximum security Chikurubi Prison outside Harare on charges of murdering the wife of an ANC official by placing a bomb in a TV set at her home on May 11 last year.
It said Mr Lesia's "impoverished" family of Botshabelo, Bloemfontein, were "desperately trying to raise cash to obtain legal assistance for him"

The family said Mr Lesia left Bloemfontein for Johannesburg on May 5 last year and they did not hear from him until the Press reported that he was in jail in Zimbabwe.
The Department of Foreign Affairs said the ## Woman poisoned

A PREGNANT typist who was poisoned when she ate a, chocolate sent to a Swellendam Jawyer has been re-admitted to hospital.

Battle to get legal fees

South African trade representative in Harare heard of Mr Lesia's plight in May this year, more than a year after his arrest.
He applied for, and on July 12 was granted, consular access to Mr Lesia by the Zimbabwean authorities.
"Thereafter, through the mediation of the Department of Foreign Affairs, contact was made with his attorneys who, in turn, contacted the Lesia family." the statement said.
"The department has already expressed to the Zimbabwean authorities its distress at not being informed earlier of the detention of a South African citizen and, as it is understood his family have no funds available to pay for legal fees, has also requested the Zimbabwean authorities to consider granting him pro deo legal facilities." - Sapa.

ANC

lost

THE African National Congress said yesterday former United Democrat ic Front member, Steve Tshwete has lost his post as political commissar of the organisation's armed wing, Umkhonto we Sizwe.

Leaders

SOUTH Africa's jailed political leaders, Nelson Mandela and Zephania Mothopeng, have been nominated for the United Nation's Human Rights Award.
Nelson Mandela, of the ANC, was nominated by Mr Stanislav Chernichenko, human rights expert from the Soviet Union and Zephania Mothopeng was nominated by Mr Aidid Ilkahanaf, expert

TCP snel

Whites tace trial  over bomb

The Star's Africa News Service
HARARE - Three white Zimbabweans are to stand trial in November for the bombing of two ANC properties in Harare in May 1986
The High Court yesterday committed Mr Kevin Woods (35), Mr Michael Anthony Smith (34) and Mr Barry Bawden (30) to trial.
They were arrested after the bombing of an ANC house in Bulawayo in January. Mr Woods and Mr Smith have already been indicted for trial in October on a murder charge in connection with the blast. The State claims that, in the Harare incidents, the three men acted in concert with South African saboteurs. The charge they face carries the death penalty. Harare, Mr wo one attack on an ANC office in babwe's Central Intelligence serving officer in ZimThe venues for the gence Organisation.
yet because of the abortive have not been announced out of prison. Prosecutor Mr attempt to get the men chances would be taken Mr Yunus Omerjee said no

KEPT IN CUSTODY

Four other people who face charges connected with alleged South African sabotage incidents, or the abortive rescue bid, were remanded in custody yesterday. and his wife Kathleen Bawden; Mr Terence Downey report the presence of South are accused of failing to Denis (Sammy) Behan, who is claimed by tha and Mr cution to have been, who is claimed by the prosecan commando squad in the abortiver of a South Afri-
Mr Behan (40) has in the abortive prison break. was arrested in Botswana in custody since June. He babwean border post.
Last week he was visited by Fabianeck, who flew visted by his fiancee, Ms Barbel Mr Behan's lawyer up from Johannesburg.
lowed to visit him only once and that reque was alsecond visit were ignored.
The court heard that remand prisoners are lowed one visit a week - and if Ms Fabianeck returns to Harare, she can see him again.

Three charged

 in Zimbabwe with helping SA attackersHARARE, Three white Zimbab weans were charged in court yester day with assisting SA troops in at tacks on guerrilla facilities in Harare Kevin John Woodś, 35 Michael An thony Smith, 34 , and Barry Bawden, 30, are accused of collaborating with SA commandos in a 1986 machinegun and bomb attack on a downtown office of the ANC Attackers also detonated a bomb at a house occupied by ANC officialls in the Harare suburb of A shdown Park after raking the building with machinegun fire on May 19,1986 , At a special court hearing at chit kurubi maximum security prison yes: terday, magistrate Chinembiri Bhunu ordered the "three to appear in the Harare High Court on November 14 on charges under Zimbabwe security laws carrying a maximum penalty of the death sentene 810 auBor BILayBormbing
Smith and Woods, a former officer in Zimbabwe's Central Intelligence Organisation, are already due to ap. pear in the High Court on October 12 on separate murder and terrorism charges relating to a car bombing. Charles Dennis Bealian facing alle gations of being the commander of a group of SA saboteurs whose attempt to spring five South Africans held at Chikurubi prison was foiled by Zimbabwean authorities, was yesterday remanded, untill September 20. Beahan's lawyer, Robin Hartley complained to the court that his client's fiáncee had been refused reg ular visits to prison
Yiunus Omerjee, of the Attorney General's office, said visiting times Were regulated by prison regulations which allowed visits once a week Sapa AP W, ${ }^{2}$ once a week, Sapa-AP moves in on MNR

Zimbabwe

bandits
HARARE. Zimbabweanitroops have mounted sweeping operations against Renamo banidits along the border with Mozambique, Zimbabwe defence minister Mr Enos Nkala said yesterday.
He said in parliament that though the operations would cause temporary inconvenience to people living along the border, the onslaught was "beginning to produce the desired effect.

Because of ouroperation successes against the South African-sponsored Renamo bandits, gangs of these bandits have, started a campaign of terror, murder, robbery,arson and rape against Zimbabweans living:along our common border with Mozambique: ${ }^{-1}$
"I wish to assure this house that our commanders are quite aware of the nature of the enemy tactics and have mounted more sweeping operations to clear the bandits from our border areas," he said.
"We are encouraged in our efforts by our belief that while this discomfort will be temporary, the peace and stability we want to bring to our people will be lasting."
He appealed topeople to co-operate with the security forces, saying that through sharing ingformation there could be no enemy that could not be eliminated. - Sapa

Zimbabwe gets its life-line to the sea

A KEY Mozambican railway line will this year be reopened to international traffic after a four-year closure, Mozambican officials promise.
The Limpopo line - which runs for 534 km from the Zimbabwean border to the port of Maputo - has been effectively closed since 1984.
Its closure was partly due to the appalling coñdition of stretches of the track, and partly to repeated attacks by rebels of the South African backed Mozambique National Resistance (Renamo).
For landlocked Zimbabwe, the Limpopo line is even more important than the Beira Corridor in central Mozambique.
The mountainous terrain through which the Beira Corridor passes limits the size of trains that can use it. The Limpopo line runs across flat countryside and has no steep gradients or sharp curves. Longer and heavier trains can therefore use it.
And Maputo is a far larger port than Beira, with better facilities for bulk cargoes.
With both the Limpopo and Beira lines open to traffic, Zimbabwe

Zimbabwe's rail link to the sea, wrecked by Renamo, will open again soon. PAUL FAUVET reports from Maputo should be able to dispense almost entirely with using South African ports for its trade. The Limpopo line can also serve Zambia, Botswana and even Zaire.
Britain has committed 14 -million pounds to emergency rehabilitation of the worst stretches of the line. National Railways of Zimbabwe was contracted to relay the 60 km of track nearest the border, which had received almost no maintenance since the line was first built in the 1950s.
This section has been completed, and work is underway on 80 km at the to the rail system inside the port.
A further 60 -million dollars was pledged at a donors' conference for the line held in Maputo in July. Railway officials expect further donations will push this figure up to 100 million dollars.
The main donors include Canada

West Germany and the United States Agency for International Development (USADD) - but perhaps more politically significant is the offer of 5.8 -million Pulas (about three million dollars, from Botswana:
This is the first time one member of SADCC (Southern African Development Coordination Conference) has invested in infrastructure in the territory of another member.
Botswana has offered enough concrete sleepers from a Botswanan factory for 100 km of track. The country points out its factory.does not have spare capacity - every sleeper produced could be used on Botswana's own railway upgrading programme.
But Botswana had chosen to prior itise the Limpopo line and delay work on its own network.
Maputo is closer to parts of Botswana than are South African ports: but that is not the real reason,
The Limpopo line will free Botswana from a dangerous dependence on routes through South Africa. It means Botswana has a viable altemative if South Africa ever closes the border.

The academic research, which took Paresh Pandya three years of investigation, has earned him an MA degree from the University of South Africa. He specialised in strategic studies, thus becoming the first black to obtain such qualifications.
The book, to be known as Mao Tse-Tung and Chimurenga, is an analysis of Mao's strategy of protracted warfare. The book has rare footage of Zimbabwe guerillas.

Movement

Zanu was the liberation movement led by Robert Mugabe, who became Prime Minister after independence in 1980. He is now the President of Zimbabwe.

Pandya's research took him to Zimbabwe where he spoke with Mugabe and Mrs Teurai Ropa Nhongo.

The book deals with the revolutionary strategy of Zanu and its military wing the PARESH Pandya's highly scholarly investigation Is to be pubilshed as a book.

Zimbabwe African Pandya looks at how $\begin{array}{ll}\text { National Liberation } & \text { Zanu established its } \\ \text { Army (Zanla). } & \text { bases, organised the }\end{array}$ liberation movement, mobilised, politicised and ${ }^{i}$ conscientised the people and waged the guerilla campaign.

By MOKGADI PELA
'He says that in Zimbabwe bases were organised on the northeastern and eastern borders and in Mozambique.
"To some extent the revolution was assisted by churches, women and children, especially in the poverty-stricken rural areas," says Pandya.
Some of the pictures in the 300 -page volume. show children, called the "Mujibos" relay information to the guerillas in the bush and combatants in liberated zones as the war progressed,
The book has been meticulously researched and gives insight into revolutionary sitiategles - a rare glimpse of the theory of insurgent warfare by Zanu.
Mao Tse-Tung and Chimurenga is soon to be; released and will retail at R20,95.

A SELF-confessed South African spy described by a Zimbabwe High Court judge as "unrepentant and determined" has appealed to the Harare Supreme Court against a 25 -year jail senterce imposed on her in November last year
Ziana, Zimbabwe's national news agency, reports that the appeal of Odile Eone Harrington, 28, is due to be heard before the Chief Justice, Judge Dumbutshena, and judges of appeal, Judge McNally and Judge Korsah, on October 10.

Harrington was convicted by the Judge President, Judge Wilson Sandura, of contravening a section of the Official Secrets Act in that she unlawfully and for purposes prejudicial to the safety or interest of Zimbabwe, obtained information from members of the ANC which she transmitted to the South African Military Intelligence.

Among the documents she obtained and passed on to her masters were discussion papers on apartheid and names and addresses of certain officials of the ANC resident in Harare, Ziana reported.
In her statement to the police, Harrington said: "I was sent to Zimbabwe by South African intelligence agents with the express and only purpose of becoming the courier of the ANC.
"If I had met the two agents in Zimbabwe as I was supposed to, I would probably have been told to spy on ANC members or infiltrate the organisation:
"I would of my own free will have' sent any information regarding anything 1 knew about the ANC - people, places or anything else - but during my initial preparation'I was not sent to do this, but only to become a courier of the ANC."
Other appeals to be heard during the next Supreme Court sessions, which open on September 19; and which are expected to arouse public interest, are those of former police commissioner, Wiridzayi Rodwell Nguruve, and former assistant general manager (administration) of the National Railways of Zimbabwe Khumbukayi Peter Nemapare.
Ngurive's appeal against conviction and seven-year-imprisonment for theft of Mandrax tablets is due to be argued on October 19
Nemapare is appealing against a 42 months' imprisonment for contravening the Prevention of Corruption Act by selling five NRZ-owned houses in Botse: wana without proper authority.

The appeal is to be heard on October 24 or 25:- Sapa

Harare court Withdraws charge against Downeys  \title{ HARARE. - The-state yesterday withdrew allega-

} tions against a Harare couple of failing to report the presence of South African commandos in Zimbabwe, the national news agency Ziana reports.
Kathleen Gail, 33 face Downey, 35, and his. wife, Kathleen Gail, 33, faced allegations of failing to report to the authorities the presence of SA commandos whose attempt, to spring alleged South AfriPrison in June was foiled's Chikurubi Maximum The chief law officer in the security forces.
The chief.law officer in the Attorney-General's office, Mr Yunus Omerjee, told provincial magistrate Mr Albert Mkandla that the state had perused it contained insufficient evidence to justify that prosecution. The magistrate pointed out justify the prosecution. The magistrate pointed out to the Downeys that a withdrawal before plea was not an acquittal. - Sapa

rro The Star's Africa 5 News Servic 362 HARARE Bribel and corruption may have cost Zimbabwes army millions of dollars.
mitt parliamentary, committee says that spare
fou trarmy vehicles
bund their way into the quantities. met nhuge Thites th
The commituee as ghat one garag alone had been found with army spares valued at neary Remilition
The report reveals that last year 149 soldiers were detained for inyestigation when a base work shop was closed down. A police officer told the committe that mem bers of the army had been bribed, by garage owners to cover ip the Swinde. 5 Y Stor

Zimbabwe extends a helping hand

MOZAMBIQUE. - After years of dereliction, there are new signs of life in the small town of Mapai in southern Mozambique. Most of them are centred on the railway station, where old diesel locomotives previously confined to sidings, are at last pulling trucks 80 kilometres up the railway to the Zimbabwean border.
$\therefore$ Mozambican and Zimbabwean soldiers move up and down the town and a team of 200 workers from National Railways of Zimbabwe (NRZ) has been based there for several months, Sometimes an unofficial passenger service runs to the border. This has meant freedom of movement for Mozambicans living around Mapai for the first time in years. The station has been crowded, even on days when the chances of a lift to the border are remote.

Facelift

- Mapai's welcome facclift is part of a much larger and more ambitious plan to rehabilitate the whole of the Limpopo railway. The line runs for 530 kilomerres from the Mozambican capital Maputo, on the Indian Ocean, through the Limpopo valley and up to the Zirntegbwean border at Chicualacuala.
${ }^{1}$ The Limpopo line is regarded as a vital rail link by the Southern African Development Coordination Coference (SADCC), a nine-member grouping of southern African states sceking to reduce their trade and transport dependence on South Africa.
NRZ is in Mozambique because Jandlocked Zimbabweans stand to gain as much as Mozambicans if the railway can be rehabilitated after a decade of disrepair.
Zimbabwean businessmen, who are keeping a close eye on the work, belicve that the single track line could eventually accommodate some 40 percent of the freight traffic Zimbabwe now routes through South Africa. They say this could save the country up to R40-million a year.

It would also free Zimbabwe, Zambia and Botswana from some of the pressure South Africa exerts through its powerful transport links which terminate at excellent ports.

In a move seen by many as an attempt to balance its anti-sanctions stance, Britain provided initial funding for the Limpopo railway over a year ago, when Margaret Thatcher's government put R40million towards the first phase of the rehabilitation, which has since risen by 40 percent.

Abstract

Even as peace moves in southern Africa continue, African countries in the region are struggling to reduce dependence on their white-ruled neighbour. Transport is a key sector - like the Limpopo railway which runs from the Mozambican capital to the Zimbabwean border. JEREMY HARDING has been travelling the line to assess the extent of the rehabilitation programme being carried out under protection of a security screen provided by troops from the two nations.

Mozambiquess railways

Mozambican Railways promptly awarded a handsome contract to their counterparts in Zimbabwe for comprehensive track relaying at the northern end of the project. Moving south from Chicualacuala for 60 kilometres, NRZ completed the work in May.
They have since continued down the line, moving at a target rate of 20 kilometres a month. Mozambican Railways, meanwhile, have been moving north from the capital, Maputo, with extensive repairs of their own.
Progress has been very slow. According to Joe Strachan, assistant general manager of NRZ, the Mozambicans have now agreed that Zimbabwe should carry out critical maintenance on the worst sections of the line to within 80 kilometres of Maputo, while continuing their relaying at the northern end of the project.

One of the many causes of delays at the Mozambican end is the presence of Mozambique National Resistance (MNR) insurgents around the line. The MNR has wrought havoc in Mozambique, bringing much of the country to a slandstill by targeting key road and rail links.
Britain is currently training nembers of the Mozambican armed forces in castern Zimbabwe. The first two fully integrated companies to complete the course and retum to Mozambique have been deployed near the railway at Ungubana.
At the nothern end of the project, the Zimbabwean track crews are moving down with their own security shield of Zimbabwean National Army Units. In July the Zimbabwean army had set up provisonal bases along the line and a fourth was planned south of Mapai.
It is ironic that the Zimbabwean army has returned to the Limpopo valley. In Mapai, many of the buildings around the station are scarred with bullet marks. But they are not the result of the current conflict in Mozambique. They were left by Ian Smith's army during the 1970s in a succession of altacks on Zimbabwean liberation fighters based in the town.
It was the Rhodesian Central Intelligence Organisation, morcover, that created the MNR during the 1970s - a force all Zimbabweans must now contend with, threatening their transport links through Mozambique and even infiltrating castern Zimbabwe itself.

Tight leash

The Rhodesian war also gave the Zimbabweans thorough experience of running a railway during a conflict. That experience has tumed out to be very valuable on the Limpopo line, where MNR sabotage is frequent.

Says Strachan: "We've got accustomed to security problems. Itd be rather strange if things were any different."

In July a donor's conference in Maputo raised new pledges of R120million for the Limpopo rehabilitation. Donors include Britain, the United States, Portugal, Canada and Botswana

Most of the money will be used to purchase track materials. But the commitment of foreign donors to the railway also makes it hard to mount a full-scale sabotage operation on the Jine. So far, South Africa has kept the MNR on a tight leash at the northem end of the project.
If the rehabilitation proceeds and regular commercial traffic is running by the carly 1990 s, the advantages for Mozambique will be immense.
A thriving, well-protected railway bring in handsome revenues. It would also allow thousands of the country's million internally displaced citizens to be resetlled in a secure environment - a policy which is already beginning to pay dividends along the Beira railway furlier north.
If, however, South Africa decides that aggression, rather than discretion, is the better part of its dubious valour, it will step up attacks on the railway and ensure that it can never run to capacityGEMINI NEWS

Torture by Zimbabweans alleged

 Court concerned at SA man's trial delayThe Star's Africa News Service
HARARE - A Harare magistrate yesterday expressed concern at the "inordinate" delay in bringing to trial a South African national, Mr Leslie Johannes Lesia (52), who has been in custody in Zimbabwe for 16 months.
Mr Lesia is alleged to have arranged for a booby-trapped television set to be delivered to the ANC in Maputo. It was brought to Harare where it exploded in a flat, killing a woman.

At a specially convened court near the Chikurubi maximum-security prison yesterday morning, a lawyer - appearing for Mr Lesia for the first time - said his client was entitled under the constitution to a trial within a reasonable period.
a Mr Kevin Arnott also drew the magistrate's attention to a claim that Mr Lesia had been tortured during his detention and said that he would challenge a 10 -page statement as he claimed it had been obtained under duress.

The state undertook to probe the allegation of torture and Mr Lesia was remanded in custody to October 4.

$$
\pm
$$

Present at the hearing were the head of the South African trade mission in Harare, $\mathrm{Mr} \mathrm{N}^{\mathrm{Nel}}$, and his deputy, Mr W de Groot.
The trade mission arranged for legal representation after a firm of lawyers in Bloemiontein, Mr Lesia's home town, had guaranteed payment.
It is reliably understood that the trade mission recently protested to the Zimbabwean government over Mr Lesia's alleged torture.
His legs were allegedly broken during interrogation. .. :
The slightly-built 52 -year-old man, whose' address was given as Mutsabela Location;'; sat in court in leg irons, his glasses pushed up on his forehead and his arms folded.
Also remanded yesterday at a separate hearing at Harare Central. Prison officers' mess was a Johannesburg man, Mr Denis Charles (Sammy) Behan (40), who is alleged to have led the abortive attempt to spring suspected South African agents from prison.

Mr Behan's lawyer argued that the former Rhodesian SAS soldier was being held unlawfully in Zimbabwe as he had been brought into the country from Botswana without legal formalities.
He said that every day Mr Behan was held would add to the claim to be brought for damages.
The state' maintained that Mr Behan's detention on remand was lawful.
Mr Behan was remanded for another month, as was Mr Guy Bawden, a Zimbabwean being held on allegations of carrying out bombings and stockpiling arms of war on behalf of South Africa. For the state, Mr. Yunus Omerjee said Mr Bawden's case would be given some priority after his lawyer, Mr Robin Hartley, asked for a trial date as soon as possible. Mr Bawden was arrested eight months ago with a number of others.
The first trial before the High Court will be held next month.

EVERY week, hundreds of lorry drivers travel to "hell" and back, risking their lives to deliver their various cargos.
Dubbed the "Hell Run", the main road between Zimbabwe and Malawi runs right through the heart of bandit land he western limb of Mozambique, most of which is controlled by Renamo gucrillas.

It is too dangerous for traffic to travel independently, so six days a weck lorrie carrying goods between Zimbabwe and Malawi join an armed convoy to make the tortuous 240 km trek through Mozambique under the supervision of Zimbahwean soldiers.

By 6am a long line of lorries (cars very rarely make the journey) have assembled a Nyamapanda, the border post between Zimbabwe and Mozambique. Drivers chat and joke while they wait for the customs offices to open, the jor anxiety about the journey ahead.
Most are old hands at the "Hell Run", many taking the route twice a week. Many, too, have already been on the road for at least 24 hours, having started their drive in South Africa
The customs officers arrive and process papers as quickly as possible, as the lorries must be ready to move by ham - the time the army wants the convoy to roll.
Through the Zimbabwean gate and then take a short drive through no man's land to the Mozambique border control, a collection of crumbling buildings guarded by a handful of Frelimo troops.

Documents checked

Identification papers and passports are handed through a hole in a screen behind which an official chocks the documents. The room is dimly lit by a single lightbulb dangling from flex. Portraiss of President Chissanno and the late Samora Machel peer down at you through the gloom.
Formalities complete, the lorries draw up a few kilometres down the road and wait for the Zimbabwean soldiers to arrive. There is silence, broken only by the distant rumble of the approaching armoured division

With lorries checked and numbered, the commander gives tie word to go and the convo pulls away in clouds of diesel smoke. Almos minedately, he line slows down as one by ore he jonies manoeuvre carctully round a hug polhole, caused by a Remano landmine, the firs , of countless obstacles to come.

Huge chunks of the road surface have been destroyed so the convoy is reduced to a constant crawl as the juggernauts lurch over the damaged stretches, their cargo swaying from side to side

Into the bush

The dense bush beside the road hems in the convoy as though the main road were nothing but a backstreet alley, making it impossible to see .
Any minute there could be a burst of gun or rocket fire from the trees or nearby hillsides; any part of the road could be mined; any one of the hundreds of bridges along the way could be about to blow.
Several bridges have already been wrecked, so the truckers have no choice but to take a dirt track detour down the river bank, through the dried-up stream and up the other side, the huge machines and their cargo bouncing and swaying, looking as hey are about to topple over.
Some do. All along the route are the shells of lorites. Many are memorials of crashes caused by the rutted road surface. Either way, the drivers are usually killed and their cargo looted by the guerillas.
"The bandits murdered my best friend there a couple of years ago," says Reggie the lorry driver, pointing to a rusting skeleton now almost burried in the bush.
"They attacked, and my friend was left behind. When we retumed, we found they had stripped his clothes off his body, and taken all his belongings and food before setting light to the truck."
This, was just one of Reggie's horror storics

It is too dangerous for raftic to travel independently, so six days a week Iorites carring goods between Zimbabwe and Malawi join an armed convovand make the torturous 240 km through Mozambique under the supervision of Zimbabwean soldiers

Once of the few white drivers to have done the run went insane after he was taken captive by bandits Who taunted him with death threats. 'They didn't kill him because he was white and the bandits get their funding from whites," Reggie explains.
He says the lorries were first attacked two days after the 1984 signing of the Nkomati Accord non-aggression pact between South Africa and Mozambique.

In the two years which followed, ambushes 1986 only a handful of trickers frequent, and by journey, the majority preferring as many still do o take the much longer route via Zambia.
But since the Zimbabweans army has bee guarding the lorries, the number of Renamo thecks has dropped and the number of trucks in convoys has increased.
The guerillas seem now to lack explosives and have resorted to press ganging local villager into physically digging up the road surface at ght.
However, danger still exists. A few weeks onsidered the truck had a puncture. The soldiers 0 repair his tyre To bandit free, so left him found the bodies of three villagers, shorror, he their heads, lying not 20 metres away throug
The journey continues and 30 kilometres diverted onto a 40 km stretch of the convoy is European Economy Community dirt road. The million towards the cost of rebuilding the main road south of Tete and work is now maing head, again under heavy ammed guard.
As the convoy continues on its way, the oadside is swarming with undernourished children dressed in rags who hold out their Reo the drivers to beg for food
Reggic wiggles uncomfortably in his scat and concentrates on the bumpy road. The sight of the rest of the joumey through Mozambique
After three and a half tense hours, the convo reaches the brow of a hill and below lies the graceful Zambezi river with the town of Tete acstling on her banks.
Into the town, once an elegant settlement bu now a crumbling mess, the lomies cone to a hait and wait for the all clear to cross the suspension bridge over the river, Ragged traders try to sell the truckers everylhing from fish to spanners while Mozambican soldiers, eager for foreign currency nct as money brokers.

Over the bridge and there is another long wait as another armoured division takes over escort lorrics hoping for scraps of food while aduls also in rags, idly watch them. Other children pass in an ant-ike procession carrying huge bundles of firewood.

The convoy climbs the steep road away from Tete and soon the bush thickens and the road surface deteriorates. "We're back in the bandit territory," Reggie wams.
More remains of lorries, more blown bridges and the shells of what were once roadside shops and cafes are added to the scene.
"The owners were either murdered or they חed," says Reggic. 'There's now nowhere we can stop for refreshment, not that we would dare to."
For an hour or two no people are to be seen beside the road where the bush towers over the convoy. Thirty kilometres from the Melawi border, people begin to reappear, though in no great numbers. Many villagers are deserted the residents having fled to the neighbouring country
"Here some people celcbrated Mozambique's independence by lining up and shooting some remaining villagers, Reggie grimaces as his looking trees. "It's a wonder cluster of forlorn-

The driver gives a sich of relief as he pult at the wooden gate, eight hours after selting off That was a good run," he says. "We did $\mathfrak{i 1}$ ' quite quickly."
In two days time Reggic will make the return joumey. While most of the "Hell Run" truckers are paid danger money why else does Reggie do it? "ti's a job, isn't it?"

 are - OOZ nnoqe - ipuuosiad ureas
 צset snoiasuep e кем!̣é ododu! 7

 Mayers and a handful of colleagues

 snore any more

\section*{$\stackrel{F}{6}$} | 5 |
| :--- |
| 3 |
| 0 |
| 0 |
| 0 |
| 3 |

 -sard

 three rail corridors through Mozam- babweans have reached the conclu--

Own Correspondent

HARARE, The Zimbabwean semi-official daily newspaper, the Herald, has warned the former Rhodesian Prime Minister, Mr Ian Smith, that his public opposition in the United States to sanctions against South Africa "must come very close to subversion".
The Herald recalled that president Robert Mugabe had said: "Mr Smith will remain a free man so long as he does nothing to subvert our govern mint.
An editorial commented: "But' for him (Mr: Smith) to campaign on behalf of a hostile neighbour against economic measures which this country's governmont sees as a top priority in the fight to topple apartheid, must come very close to subversion.
"The tolerance afforded Mr Smith is an extension of the policy of recon ciliation adopted at independence but President Mugabe's words sound a warning that he would do well to hear: tolerance, and patience, is wearing thin."
Mr Smith was expelled from parliá mont last year in advance of the abolidion of the 20 "white" seats, for telling South African businessmen they could beat sanctions by showing the unity and enterprise of Rhodesian during 14 years of United Nations embarges from 1965-1979.
Last week the Herald carried a report from Washington quoting Mr Smith as saying: "There is more freedom, more justice, more honesty in South Africa than in $90 \%$ of the cointries to the north of them."
Mr Smith was reported to have told a meeting at the Centre for Strategic and International Studies that "South Africa was "a bastion of the free world fighting a communist onslaught" as Rhodesia had been:
The Herald claimed that Mr Smith's current visit to North America had been timed to coincide with President Mugabe's address" to the UN.
The Herald said it had nothing against Mr Smith voicing hiss political beliefs in Zimbabwe because he was "a political irrelevance" but by addressing "rabidly anti-socialist"" audiences abroad he harmed Zimbabwe and its government.

Former Zimbabwe outlaws exchange ${ }^{\text {zisisf }} 82$ rifles for farm tools

From KARL MAIER of the Independent in Harare

FORTY-THREE young men, recently hunted as outlaws, have exchanged their AK-47s for farm tools to build a new life at Nkayi, a dusty town in south-western Zimbabwe.

The men, some of the 113 dissidents who emerged from the Matabeleland bush to accept President Robert Mugabe's amnesty in May, now wield picks and axes to develop the land they once roamed as guerrillas. They see the transformation as another stage in the process of bringing "socialism" to Zimbabwe
"We always believed that one day we would work the land," said Rainfall Msimanga, one of the former guerrillas. "The revolution did not stop with independence and now we must work to make the revolution a reality."

At Nk'ayi an experiment is being carried out which could establish the pattern for reintegrating former rebels into society, not just in Zimbabwe, but perhaps also in other Southern African countries such as Mozambique and Angola, both ravaged by civil war.

In spite of the smooth beginning at Nkayi, many of the former rebels remain cautious. "At the moment everything is going well," said Lantern Mkhwananzi, a former guerrilla commander. "But if an incident occurs, we are going to inform the people about it."

Factional violence

Mostly veterans of the guerrilla war against Ian Smith's government, they returned to the bush after independence in 1980 when factional violence erupted between Mr Mugabe's largely Shona-supported Zanu-PF party and Joshua Nkomo's Zapu, which was backed mainly by the minority Ndebele people of Matabeleland.
The beginning of the end of the conflict came in December last year when Mr Mugabe signed an accord to merge Zanu with Zapu, to which the ex-guerrillas at Nkayi owed allegiance. Several senior Zapu officials, including Mr Nkomo, were given Cabinet posts.
In April Mr Mugabe decreed an amnesty for anti-government guerrillas and members of the security forces guilty of human rights abuses. Most of the rebels laid down their arms, the army pulled out of the area, and the violence, which had cost thousands of lives and threatened development in Matabeleland in the early years of independence, tailed off.
However, soon after the 43 former rebels arrived in Nkayi in late May, it became clear that the government in Harare felt it could do no more for them. It was argued that there was no reason why former rebels should receive special treatment when hundreds of thousands of Zimbabweans faced the same challenge of earning a living without skills, land and money.

Local officials and non-government organisations, fearing that the lack of job and other prospects was a recipe for trouble, stepped in.

Mr Robert Mugabe
The Roman Catholic Church's Justice and Peace Commission and the Zimbabwe Project, which helps former guerrillas to start development schemes, raised about R20 000 to buy food, clothes and tools.
The Nkayi district council handed over a 165acre parcel of land and the ex-gunmen provided the brawn. The goal is to establish an agricultural co-operative producing grain, vegetables, dairy produce and fruit.
Local officials hope the project will produce food and jobs for some of the 10000 unemployed young people in the Nkayi district.
"This project is not just for these fellows," said a district administrator, Stanley Bhebhe. "It should be an embryo of development for all Nkayi." The challenge now is to find cash for wells, farm equipment and houses.

As they sweated to clear tree stumps, the former rebels appeared determined not to fail.
"We are going to develop this area and become self-sufficient," Mr Misimanga said. "The only painful thing is that when we go back home we find our wives and children going naked and hungry. Right now there is nothing we can do about it."

Plans are being made to set up projects similar to the Nkayi one for the remaining 70 former rebels waiting at police stations in southern Matabeleland. Ten are planning to set up a gold mining co-operative and there are hopes of finding land for the rest.

Most of the former rebels here were born in the Nkayi area and relations with the locals appear to be good.
"We have no problems at all with these men," police officer said. "It is difficult today to imagine them running around the bush with guns."
 ?

Mugabe warns of coming catastrophe 362 Hy Robin Drew, 36 Die Star's Africa VICTORIA FALLLS Zimbabwe's President'Ro bert Mugabe yesterdáa urged the world comminit ty to maintain pressure on South Africa and not to become complacent:over recent peace moves.
He warned of an impending catastrophe in southern Africa, insa speech to a meeting of 150 newspaper owners execu tives and editors' of the Commonwealth Press
Union : ${ }^{2}$ tar
The speech was read by the deputy president, Mr

to the Falls, has as Mr Mugabe was too busy to come and America wherg returned yesterday from Britain dentReagan.
In a slashing attack on South Africa he accused Pretoria of a gruesome catalogue of terror, murder sabotage and espionage aimed at giving it control of the southern African region.
One million lives had been lost, eight million people displaced, he said.
He urged the media to always be wary of South African propaganda and its false claims of normality and reform.
Many whites were not prepared to change peacefully, Mr Mugabe said, adding that apartheid had" to be destroyed, not reformed.
In only a passing reference to Angolan and Namidian settlement moves, he warned against complacency.
to lasting peace.

'Root out apartheid demon, then I'll see PW'  HARARE - Zimbabwe president Mr Frobert Mugabe appears to have ruled out a meeting with the President Mr PW Botha as part of Pretoria's new diplomatic offensive in southern would want to have an appoint- ' Prime Minister Mrs Margaret ment with Botha unless he "Thatcher was unlikely to visit ceases to be possessed by the demon of apartheid," Mr Mu-  South Africa unless win change took place".

CARL

From Michael hartnack

Victoria falls. A hard-line speech delivered here yesterday for the Rimbabwean president, Mr Robert Mugabe, dampened speculadion that he might be prepared to join Rambia's President Kenneth Kaunda and other frontline leaders in a roundtable conference with President PW Botha.

Political correspondent

PRESIDENT PW Botha will not be attending the five-nation two-day summit starting in Lusaka on Thursday to be attended by heads of state of Angola, Congo-Brazzaville, Gabon, Zaire and zambia.
Questioned after his visit to President Mobutu Sase Seko of Zaire, about whether he would attend the meeting aimed at bringing reconciliation between the warring parties in Angola, President Botha said: "No, I have not been invited. I am not going."
However, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr Pis Botha, added :"We will be interested bystanders or observers on the sidelines." - Sapa-Reuter some powerful nations."

President Mugabe said the rise of "the more fanatically faccist Conservative Party" proved the intractable nature of white voters.
"We are only South Africa's neighbour," he said. "We find the system abhorrent but, if Botha is serious, he should invite leaders
Vice-President Simon Muzenda read Mr Mugape's speech for him at a meeting of the Commonwealth Press Union attended by 150 delegates from 18 Commonwealth states, ineluding international press magnate $\mathrm{Mr} \mathrm{Ru}-$ pert Murdoch, owner of The Times and the British mass-circulation tabloid The Sun.

Mr Mugabe said President Botha should talk to anti-apartheid leaders in his own country instead of deceiving the international community by inviting discussions with frontline states' leaders.
The president made it clear he had no wish to meet. Mr Botha while he still adhered to the policy of apartheid, Ziana reports.
President Mugabe said: "Dialogue within South Africa itself and between that country and the international community will not yield any beneficial results as long as South Africa continues to enjoy the full support of representing the South African masses and talk.
"This is why we believe that mandatory economic sanctions against the Pretoria regime are the only peaceful means of bringing about lasting peace in South Africa and the entire region:"
Mr Mugabe's words appear to contradict reports from Canada that he softened his calls for sanctions during his three-week North American and British tour which ended on Sunday. President Mugabe was said to have told Canadian Prime Minister Mr Brian Mullroney that Zimbabwe was not yet ready for an economic confrontation with Pretoria, and wished sympathetic states to defer further boycott action.
"The Commonwealth press must tell the international community that apartheid is an evil system that maims and kills life, has destabilized the region and has destroyed our socio-economic infrastructure.'

Mugabe could scotch P W's African venture

It has been roses, roses all the way for the State President, Mr PW Botha, in his diplomatic ventures into Mozambique, Malawi and Zaire.

Now comes the hard part in maintaining the momentum among African states that may be more difficult to win over.

South Africa's diplomatic drive in black Africa needs another break through if it is not to be in danger of running out of steam.

Mr Botha must either have an other meeting with a fourth African head of state or, better still, take part in a regional summit.

Participation in a regional summit would have infinitely more political value than a bilateral meeting. It would imply a far greater degree of acceptance, confer a great deal more respectability and open vastly more promising avenues for future exploitation.

Next stage

Mr Botha said after his talks with President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire that he hoped the next step would be a.conference of all the leaders of southern Africa.
This suggests he has reason to believe he might be accepted soon into a regional conference. The visible evidence suggests the contrary, however.
Not all southern African leaders are yet ready to sit down together at a conference table with South Africa, at least not without conditions that Pretoria would find unacceptable, such as insisting that the agenda include the dismantling of apartheid or South Africa's alleged destabilisation of its neighbours.
Some of the leaders might agree to a joint meeting without strings, but President Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe, for one, would not.
A regional meeting at some time in the future cannot be ruled out, however, especially if the ground is further cleared by more bilateral meetings or even multilateral meetings with only some of the regional leaders and with a limited agenda, such as the Angola-Namibia peace effort.

Three visits

Whatever happens next, nothing can detract from the significance of the three visits Mr Botha has made, in the past month. By simply making them he has broken a gaping hole in' the wall of official ostracism that has for decades separated South Africa from most of black Africa.

It now becomes much easier for other states that have been dealing with Pretoria under the counter to bring these dealings out in the open and for states that have had no direct dealings to begin them.

This is what South African diplomats have been aiming at in their patient and skillful efforts to widen Pretoria's relations in the continent. The hope is that if enough states start dealing openly with South follow, creating a snowball effect. But the going is likely to be much harder from now on.

BY GERALD L'ANGE, Editor of The Star's Africa News Service President Botha's diplomatic moves into black Africa need to be consolidated to prevent them foundering. The man most likely to put a spoke in the wheels is President Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe.

Mr Botha's meeting with President Joaquim Chissano in Mozambique was a breakthrough in that it was the first meeting at this level since the Nkomati Accord went into disuse. But its significance was lessened by the fact that it was a meeting between leaders whose countries already had trade, labour and semi-diplomatic ties.
The meeting with President HK Banda of Malawi was in much the same sort of category.

President Mobutu's lavish recep. tion for Mr Botha at Gbadolite last weekend was much more of a breakthrough, for even though Zaire has long relied on South Africa's transport and supply resources the two countries have never conducted open diplomatic exchanges.

In looking for another summit to keep up the momentum Mr Botha must look next to Zambia.
It, too, relies heavily on South Africa for trade and transport.

President Kenneth Kaunda, while maintaining the stiff posture befitting a member of the Frontline states grouping, has repeatediy offered to play an intermediary role in black Africa's efforts to persuade South Africa to drop apartheid.
He has already had one meeting with Mr Botha at the "marula summit" on neutral ground on the Botswana border in 1982.
There has already been specula-

Mr Botha and Dr Kaunda. If it were to come off, it would do a great deal to maintain the momentum of the South African diplomatic drive.

After that Pretoria would logically turn its eyes to the Francophone states, mainly Ivory Coast and Gabon, with whom it has long had covert or tentative dealings
In the meantime, Pretoria will be working to consolidate the new relationships established with Mozambique and Zaire. The presidents of both countries have accepted invitations to visit South Africa and a visit by President Chissano is the most likely next move.
The South Africans would be delighted if Zaire agreed to follow the example of Mozambique, Lesotho, Swaziland and Zimbabwe and open a trade office in the Republic. Given the considerable volume of Zaire's trade passing through or coming from South Africa, this would be a logical move.
Whether it will be made remains to be seen, but it would do much to increase South Africa's acceptability in black Africa.
Despite their deep-seated objection to the South African pariah, many African states have almost as strong an incentive to deal with South Africa as the Republic has to deal with them.
Pretoria hopes to achieve several things: wider acceptance of gradual rather than revolutionary dismantling of apartheid, the denial of bases and transit routes to African the undermining of the international sanctions campaign, the promotion of trade, the ending of conflicts in southern Africa and the opening of new development opportunities.

For the black states, one of the incentives is the chance to tap into the South African industrial and transport infrastructure and draw trade and development benefits not obtainable elsewhere.
In addition, African states hope that through South Africa a peaceful solution may be found to the wars in Namibia and Angola, ending their fears of the conflicts spreading wider in the region.
A growing number of African states see political reconciliation between the MPLA government and the Unita rebels in Angola as the only way to achieve a lasting peace there. Some think it might also hold the key to independence for Namibia, so closely linked are the two issues now.

Peace initiatives

South Africa's close association with the, Namibian and Angolan peace initiatives has almost certainly provided the lever for the new diplomatic breakthroughs.

Particularly effective was the impression of good faith that was created by South Africa's troop withdrawal from Angola and its offer to implement the United Nations independence plan for Namibia from November 1.

If the plan were actually to be implemented, and South Africa withdrew from Namibia, the rewards would be even bigger - per haps not exactly a stampede by African states to open relations with South Africa, but certainly a much greater willingness to deal openly with the Republic.

Other developments likely to encourage such a trend would include the release of Nelson Mandela, which was raised by President Mobutu in his talks with Mr Botha.

Unacceptable

The whole initiative could be jeopardised, however, by developments within South Africa itself that African states would find unacceptable, such as an SADF attack on ANC targets in a neighbouring state.
Pretoria has claimed that the ANC intends to try to disrupt the municipal elections by a campaign of bombings and urban terrorism and has warned Botswana that it may take its own measures to stop ANC infiltration through that country if the Gaborone government does not do so.

South Africa's reputation as a deliberate destabiliser in the region militates as much as does its apartheid policies against open dealings with other countries in the sub-continent.

To win acceptability, South Africa must demonstrate that it has abandoned destabilisation rather than provide evidence that it retains:

The Star's Africa News Service

HARARE - A legal tug-ofwar developed in a makeshift courtroom at Chikurubi maximum security prison in Harare yesterday over freedom for a South African against whom charges had been dropped.
Mr Leslie Johannes Lesia, who has been in custody for 18 months, was alleged to have arranged for a booby-trapped television set to be delivered to the ANC in Maputo. It was brought to Harare where it exploded in a flat, killing a woman.

The head of the South African Trade Mission in Harare, Mr Nico Nel, and his deputy, Mr Willie de Groot, were in court to hear the magistrate order that Mr Lesia should be released im mediately and could wait in the courtroom with his lawyer while his civilian clothes were fetched from his cell.

Mr Lesia's lawyer, Mr CR Hartley, had told the court that he was worried that if his client returned to his cell to change clothes he would be re-detained.

He asked the magistrate to release Lesia into his custody, promising to return the prison clothes himself.
The prosecutor objected and a prison official gave evidence that regulations stipulated that released prisoners should first return to their cells.
But the magistrate, Mr
Charles Hungwe, ruled that any such regulations would be unlawful and unconstitutional.

He said that, once pronounced free by the court, the prisons had no lawful grounds to detain for his arrest was isesh warrant A man in plainclothes.
scribed himself simply as."a 0 delice officer" then arrived and said he was re-arresting Mr Lesia.

Mr Hartley argued that the detention document he produced was out of date and invalid and the man left to consult hiss superiors, 客

Then the head of the prison service arrived and ordered that Mr.Lesia be returned to his cell. The South Africans protested but Mr Lesia was handcuffed and led away.

- Mr Hartley said later yesterday that; despite his protests, Mr Lesia was still being held at Chikurubi maximum security prison under the old detention order.
the general said.
But Mr Dos Santos made it clear in an earlier interview with the New York Times that Dr Savimbi would not be negotiating from a position of strength with his government.
"From a strategic point of view Unita is militarily defeated, and the weak don't dictate the political rules of the game," he was quoted as saying.
Speaking to Libération in Gabon, Mr Dos Santos said the Angolan government was prepared to talk to Unita once factors such as the presence of South Afri can troops and the independence of Namibia had been resolved.
He predicted that an agreement on Cuban troop withdrawal and Namibian independence will be reached soon.
Mr Dos Santos said the "problem of Unita" had to become "a purely Angolan problem to be resolved by the Angolans themselves"
The Angolan leader appeared buoyed by recent government advances ;along' the Benguela railroad/and said that without "massive intervention of SA forces, Unita cannot last very long",
He would "not exclude". granting cabinet posts to Unita members, with the exception of Dr Savimbi himself, whom he described as "a special case".
He also ruled out any formal constitutional system to balance power between the main tribal groupings in Angola.
Meanwhile, Unita said yesterday it captured an important northern town this week, killing 30 government soldiers. It said Sanza-Pombo, 80km from the Zairean border in Uige province, was taken in a dawn battle on Monday.
: In another development, Zimbabwe and Botswana were yesterday given thinly-veiled warnings by two senior government spokesmen that retaliatory action would follow if they continue supporting terrorists.
They were singled out at the NP'l Cape Congress bstboth the General Malan and the nehtum

"We have made very deputy Minister of fruitful political conForeign Affairs, Mr Ko- ruits in Africa," he said bus Meiring, as the only two neighbouring countries with whom relations were not improving in the current diplomatic out-reach to Africa.
Mr Meiring singled out Zimbabwe and Botswana as being out of step with other neighbouring states with whom relations had improved as a consequence of recent diplomatic activity.
General Malan lashed out at Zimbabwe and Bostwana, stating, for the first time, that terrorist bases operate in both countries. In addition, he said, there were also bases in Zambia and Angola Zimbabwe's President Robert Mugabe was at the forefront of the propaganda attack on South He had been astonished at the ease with which the various leaders "found one an other" during the recent visits into Africa by President Botha.
"If political rhetoric can be replaced by practical considerations the sky is the limit," he said.

Africa in general needed technology, expertise and experience not handouts, and South Africans were all over the continent helping other countries to help themselves.

Only one African country did not trade with South Africa last year," he said. - Own Correspondent and Political Staff Arrica and was now calling for sanctions at the United Nations.
"He says he does not trust the Boers. At the same time he trusts us to work on his railway lines for 24 hours a day.'

Mr Meiring said that apart from Zimbabwe and Botswana, regional relations were improving and hardly a week pased without him, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr Pik Botha, or other senior officials visiting some African state.

The "reality" of South Africa was getting through and, he hinted, President P W Botha would be making more trips into Africa soon as the government's outward policy gained mo-

[^9]
$88 / 01$ हा-七 ר14\%M (292

national and as far as we knew promoters anic other people dealing with the concert were ab pointed by Amnesty：
She said she had dealt both with Mr Walls and MrSophos．
Contacted in Johannesburg last nieht，Mr Wall said I was doing the job as a favour thach noth ing to do with politics．My wife，Eunice is the mother of one of the organisers．＂
Amnesty International spokesman Mr Glenn Metshe－Ampel said they weere discussing the mat ter and would issue a statement later：
Meanwhile，the Saturday Star＇s Harare corre spondent reports that further controversy erupted yesterday as local promoters strongly denied ru mours that any of the sound equipment for the con cert had come from South Africa
Spokesman Mrs Ann Ashburner，reacting to sug gestions that some equipment came from Sun City， said：＂Definitely not．One hiundred percent no：＂
The swiftness and vehemence of the denials was a measure of the sensitivity of organisers on the South African issue．
Mrs Ashburner said the promoters had originally planned to use a combination of equipment from HieTech Systems in Lesotho and Pro－Sound in South Africa but dropped the ided of dealing with the South African firm after realising the delicacy of the situation＂．

Fully aware

She said Amnesty International had flown equip． ment from the United States as a substitute Am nesty representatives had spoken to the musicians performing in the concert，who were fully a ware of the situation

But Peter Hillmore，columnist for The Observer ＂heondon，is not so sure．

In his column＂Pendennis＂on Sunday he wrote Yy some members of Bruce Springsteen＇s＇stechni cal entourage went to Johannesburgrecenty－to check equipment that the organisers had ordered to see if it was suitable to be used in Zinibabwe：
The South Africancompany was going to ship through Lesotho，to disguise the origins in case Am－ nesty or the Zimbabweans objected（I can＇t think why． ，
When people got to hear of tt there was fury panic and confusion trang Harare last week and was met at first with an embarrassed silence
Later I was given an official statement that after a controversy began over the possible source of the equipment it was decided to hire the system from a company in Lesotho in no way connected with South Africa＇wa

[^10]

42

妾 | 8 |
| :--- |
|  | 8

$\square$

$1+$
回
 Springstend Im a rock and roll sing
 This low－key approach by one of the world＇s top entertalners typifiod a two－ hour press conference here on Thurs－ day night $\ln$ advance of yesterday＇s Amnesty International human rights concert．
The stars－Springsteen，Sting， Peter Gabriel，Tracy Chapman and Youssou N＇dour－worked hard to press home the message that the con－ cert was about human rights，not sex and drugs and rock and roll．
They each made an opening state－ ment explaining，why they were taking part in the concert，which marks the 40th anniversary of the international Declaration of Human Rights and has already played＇to＇more than 750000 people around the world．

Only Peter Gabriel，who has record－ ed a song about Steve Biko，strongly attacked South Africa in his opening statement，by referring to the＂filthy In＇ the 150 ． 0 onse to a request from one of the 150 local and foreign journalists at

HARARE ${ }^{4}$＂My name is Bruce  Apartheid is slavery，says rock star

SATURDAY STAR
AFRICA NEWS SERVICE
the press conference for a direct state ment on South Africa，Bruce Spring steen simply read out eight of the 30 articles of the Declaration of Human Rights，beginning with the first，which says all people are born free and equal．
Tracy Chapman，said she belleved apartheid was a fprm of modern－day slavery．
Asked about the cultural boycott and whether they made money out of sell－ ing their records in South Africa，the musicians defended different attitudes．
Peter Gabriel has banned the sale of his records in South Africa，while Sting and Tracy Chapman said they believed their music should be heard in South Africa because it had an important message for young people．

Amnesty representatives were ques－ tioned about whether the sound system the stars were to use came from Sopth Africa，
Thiey sald they had been assured by the local promoters that it came from Lesotho，not Scuth Africa．

THE national cricket and athletics bodies have backed rugby chief Dr Danie Craven＇s plea to re－ move apartheid in sport．
－Soe Page 2
 $\qquad$

-lिa jo yorimp padioip
continued detention of several of "their col-"

Shaid one official at the school "We're still wait ing for them to return to classes:
The ristudents in sdeten: tion are accused of leading protests that swere staged at the polytechinic and the University of Zimbabwe last week. Hunderds of , students demonstrated against yhat they called corruption and scandal inside the gavernmentand the Zanu PFparty One of the students, 192 year-old Itar Chilindo, is due for sentencing this week after being found guilty on Mondaysin a magistrates court on charges of taking part in an illegal demonstration. Six other polytechnic students - who appeared in another court will be held police custody untill December 5 .
A group of 478 stidents : were detained when the protests flared into batiles with police on the univer sity campus. Pólice fired teargas to disperse the students.
Mos students were reeased from custody that daygandunivérsity classes resubited on' Monday s ressident Robért Mu gabe said on Monday that accusations "of corríution? .
should nöt be made with out proof and that people should not listen to rumours ${ }^{3}$ wnemath Mugabe said corruption existed all over the world $/$ and there were placesishere it was múch worse than in:Zimbabwe zheysaid many corrupt Zingabweans had been jailed and others:idismissed from their posts: He rejected accusations made in a, recent court. case, against the deputy Minister of State for Roliticaly Aiffairs, fil Shuvai Mahofa, who allegediy or-t dered the burning of his rigals Abigail Hunis
 The court dismissed the case on'grounds of insulfficient evidenc Mugabe said if the cal people in Mathofa's district of Gutu andmemoers of Zanu-PF were.to tell him that they no long er wanted Máhof for it present them, then Ano., at

Confidence at high point in Zimbabwe

HARARE - Zimbabwean manufacturers are more confident now than a any time over the past two years, according to the confederTation of Zimbabwe Industries. $S t=r$ ' 10110188.362 Whe organisation reports in its latest tri-anual survey that the optimism stems from a good agricultural season,' a record year for: miting, extra foreign exchange allocations and promises, that a major economic policy review is under way.
(2) tor mor The confederation warned, however, that economic reform to encourage investment was urgently needed. Problems included:price control, labour regulations, collective bargaining, foreign exchange shortages, bureaucracy and the budget deficit. - The stars strica News Senvice whomen

Nearly R1million was raised during the Human Rights Now concert in Harare last Friday local organisers said yesterday montion but ou u According to Mr Neil Bunn, one of the organisers, the Harare show was regarded by the international artists and promoters astone of the best of all concerts since the world tourstarted seven weeks ago.
He said about 75000 eoplewatched the concert at the national'sports stadium \% y
WMe Dunn said he eouldnot be definite about the "total amountraised aspticket sales in South Africa - were still being collected but the figures should be ready by tomorrow, People did not only come for entertainment they also understood the message behind the concert. "Bruce Springsteen's message and song, War" and Peter Gabriels song, Biko'; were broadcast live in South Arica," Said Mr Dunnne, owe wo
He said there were no major incidents during the seven-hour concert Commenting on the number of people who signed the universal declaration of human rights, Mr Dunn said, "We are still counting."

The international organisers took as many boxes containing the signed documents as they could but many more are still being submitted to local organiments to send them to Box 5615 , Harare; from where they would be forwarded to Amnesty International. - Sápa.
$\qquad$

Odile Harington appeal heard

HARARE - It was totally reprehensible for Zimbabwe's Central Intelligence Organisation to have allowed an ANC representative to take part in the interrogation and torture of self-confessed spy Odile Harington, her counsel, Adrian de Bourbon, told the Supreme Court here yester day. Harington was not in court to hear her appeal argued.
De Bourbon challenged the legal basis of her conviction under Zimbabwe's Official Secrets Act, saying she had not imparted any information prejudicial to Zim. babwe, only to the ANC.

But he urged that if this was bected there should be a major rejected there she 25 -year maximum sentence imposed on her last November by the Judge last November the High Court, Mir Justice Sandura.
Mr Justice Sandura's regret in passing sentence that he could not have her shot showed he had not conducted the trial in a "calm and rational manner", said De Bourbon.
He said the worst aspect of the case was the complete failure of the Zimbabwean authorities to punish the CIO and ANC personnel responsible for Harington's 10 -month ordeal in detention.
De Bourbon said the state had not challenged the evidence that she was tortured, and noted her torturers were still at large.

Chief Justice Dumbutshena, who is hearing the case with Mr Justice McNally and Mr Justice Korsah, noted that at the High Court trial the prosecution had made no attempt to rebut Harington's torture evidence.
 were ruled by decree while whites were accorded democratic rights. mental contradiction at its political core: blacks seemed to think. I would not have had the arrorepresentative of the black people, as Mr Sithole W - and why - South Africa's racial policies

I to restrictions on press freedom.
invited to speak as a journalist not as a hrief which I interpreted as a request to outline Fundamental contradiction "I was further criticised for not condemning the Tother white liberal" and a purveyor of the opinWh But, instead, I was lambasted by the editor comost a dissenting idea or two country would wel

 When I accepted an invitation to give a keynote address at the Commonwealth Press Union (CPU) When I accepted an invitation to give a keynot数 1 日

Tight security in trial $3^{6}$ SA   agents'

 tired NCO in the Rhodesian special ber of the Rhodesian special air ser vice, are charged with complicity in vice, are charged with complicity the January 11 bombing of an ANC house in Bulawayo's Trenance suburb.A Zambian-born driver, Mr Ober Mwanza, was blown to pieces when his car detonated, apparently by remote control.

The Zimbabwean authorities have said they suspect the actual bombing was perpetrated by ${ }_{i} \mathrm{Mr}$ Christopher Bawden, another former member of the Rhodesian security forces, who fled to SA on January 13 .
If Mr Woods, Mr Conjwayo and Mr Smith are convicted, they almost certainly face the death penalty.
No white "per'son has ever been hanged in Zimbabwe, or in its pre decessor state, Rhodesia, for a secur-ity-related offence.
Under Zimbabwe's Official Secrets Act, journalists could face a maximum 25 -year prison sentence if they disclosed the precautions surrounding today's trial.
HARARE - The first of a series of sensational spy trials, in which South Affica will be the unsen accused in the dock, starts today under heavy security.
On trial for murder following the blowing up of an ANC house in Bulawayo in January will be former Zimbabwe intelligence officer Mr Kevin Woods: (35); farm manager and former Rhodesian serviceman Mr Michael Anthony Smith (34); and Mr Philip Conjwayo (54); formerly of the Rhodesian police.
The driver of a booby trapped car was killed when the car exploded next to a house in the Bulawayo. suburb of Trenance occupied by ANC members:
The three men were committed for trial byat the High Court in Harare after several remand appear ances at specially convened hearings' in a canteent adjoining Chikulubi Maximum Security Prisody Special precautions weretakenafter ansabitive atfempt to spring the men was thwarted 10 serving air force officer, Lieutenant Gary Kane fled the country after stealing a helicopter that was to have been used to spirit the prisoners a way once their prison trúck had been ambushed
The plan fell apart when border officials became suspicious of two men who tried to enter Zimbabwe from Botswana One was subsequenty caughtirimo tswana and returned to Zimbabwe He is Mr Denis Charles Behan ( 40 ) of Johamestorg, who is awaiting trial for allegedly committingan act of terrorism.
The High Court frial of Mr Woods, Mr Smitheand Mr Conjwayo is expected to last at least two weeks. It is understood the trial will be at the Highteourt building in Harare.

Zimbabwe

tobacco

sells well

O Own Coriaspondent

HARARE-Zimbabwe's 1988 flue cured tobacco sales have closed after a record year in which the average eaf price rose more than $80 \%$. About 118 -million kg of tobacco was sold at an average price of 397 Zimbabwean cents a kilogram Total grower revente from tobacon ls estimated at $Z 8470 \mathrm{~m}$ - up $68 \%$ on last year The sharply higher prices reflect a much better crop than in 1987 , along with some worldwide firming in tobacco prices. Tobacco exports from Zimbabwe will exceed $\$ 500 \mathrm{~m}$ this year and rein foregold as the country's top export
In foreign currency terms, however pressice improvement is far less im pressive In Zimbabwean cents this double that achieved in more than US cents, the 1988 price is fraction in ly lower than that ruling six years ago and ony $15 \%$ higher than in 1986 . this vear's owners are delighted with edge that conditione they acknowl much tougher than in 1986 - Financial Times

SA 'agents' on trial over bombed ANC house

Allaged South Atrica agents . . . (from leff) Mr Kevin John Woods (35), a former Central Intelagence Organisation member, Mr Philip Conjwayo (54), ex-Specia (34), ex Rh desian Light Infantry, are led into the Harara High Court yesterday. They

Massive security at hearing    Act dealing with explosions and acts of ter-

By Robin Drew, The Star's Africa News Service762 rorism.
HARARE - Unprecedented security pre- It is alleged that the three men "acting cautions involving hundreds of troops and in concert and with common purpose" depolice and even an anti-aircraft gun were in evidence yesterday at the start of the trial of three alleged South African agents accused of bombligy an ANC house in Bu lawayo.
A motorised column of six armoured personnel carriers carrying heavily armed soldiers of a commando battalion escorted Mr Kevin Woods (35), Mr Michael Smith (34) and Mr Phillip Conjwayo (54) to the High Court from the Chikurubi Maximum Security Prison and back to the jail.

Sharpshooters patrolled the bullding and armed police were stationed in the courtroom itself.

The heavy security blanket followed an abortive attempt to free the men from custody in July. The dramatic rescue attempt involved a helicopter stolen by an Air Force officer who fled the country

In the sombre wood-panelled courtroom, the three men pleaded not guilty to charges of murder or alternatively contravening the Law and Order (Maintenance) in concert and with common purpose" deonated a car bomb in the grounds of by ANC members in January this year.

When the booby-trapped car blew up, the drlver, a Mr Obert Mwanza, was blown to smithereens. He had been out of work and was allegedly offered the job of driving the car without knowing the purpose of the journey.
According to the State outline, the bomb was detonated by a remote-control device by Mr Smith, a former Rhodestan Light Infantry soldier, and a fugitive still a large, Mr Christopher Baw frio is believed to be in South Africa.
The State will seek to prove that Mr Woods, who was an offlcer in Zimbabwe's Central Intelligence Organisation (CIO) until 1996, had been recruited by the "South African Intelligence Organisation" in 1803. Mr Smith is also sald to have been recruited as an agent by the South Africans that year while Mr Conjwayo, a formerSpecial Branch policeman during the Rhodesian era, was taken on in 1885 .

in to cast prior ballotstian  By Esmaré van der Merwe Political Reporter  to city council said many voters showed up on Monday, but the flow had decreased since.  - After three relatively quiet days at Johannesburg's white municipal election polling booths, the National Farty and the Progressive both claimed the lead.  A confident Mr Alwyn  A confident Mr Alwyn Marx, the NP's campaign organiser, said his party had taken the lead in virtually Ber Mr Peter Soal angrily dismissed the claim as "rub dismissed the claim as "rub- bish" and "blatant distor tion".  The Conservative Party's Johannesburg chairmant;, Mr Fred Rundle, was less optio mistic but said his partyutas in the lead in a few wards. Mr Rundle said the NP was leading the field, adding: "The Nationalists are intimidating pensioners to vote for them by threatening to take their pensions away if they don't vote Nat."

ean rugby rage to laughter

$f$ the Chilean er the collar te Sout trday. ngry because standing. The standing. The lloping up belle Kobese to pass the ball so he could join the try-scorers.
Kobese duly obliged and the downeast Chileans were spreadeagled in Lock's wake. At the start of the sumptuous barbecue of thick juicy steaks, the Chilean rugby chief was still simmering. But manager Abie Malan explained what the Pioneers had been laughing at. It wasn't too long before the long face was replaced by smiles as rugby friends ate and drank a little in a night of marvellous bonhomie and frlendship.

See Back Page.

Trying the case with wo assessors is the Judge-President, Mr Jusyear sentenced South African spy odile Harington to the maximum 25 years.
The charges faced by the three men carry the death penalty.
Most of yesterday's proceedings were taken up with argument over an application by senior defence counsel, Mr Michael O'Meara, for a tria within a trial to determine the admissibility of statements and the validceedings before a magis ceedin trate.
Mr O'Meara sald all statements and confirma tion hearings were belng challenged on grounds undue influence, the lack of proper access and in Contwayo's case, because it would be alleged that he had been tortured.
The hearing will continue today.

At Club Med we've removed all the hassles of life and replaced them with a little peace on earth. The perfect climate for body and soul.
You can lie back and relax at your own pace, in your own fashion. You could try a new sportor perfect anold one. At Club Med . . you'll see . . . the choice is yours.
Take it easy there's no rush.
Only Club Med gives you that unique almosphere, as well as all Only Clubs extras ... Without paying a cent extra.

For all infomation call ( 011 ) 3355340 , or your friendly travel agent.
$\qquad$

Mrs Scholtz told him that Mr De Pontes, who acted as Palazzolo's attorney, would "sleep better" once the files were in hw possession
Palazzolo, an escapedtonvict with drug and or ganised-crime links, was arrested in Franschhoek soon afterwards for illegal entry into South Africa.

Denied in affidavit

Mr Scheffer was arrested in February, 1988, after a police investigation into the missing files and Palazzolo's illegal entry into the country.

- Much of this is denied by Mr De Pontes in an affidavit read into the commission record earlier yesterday althowgh he edmits beifg instrumental in untröducing Mr. Scheffer to plalazzolo in. Cape. Town during September last year and sketching the latter's particular difficulties to him.
Mr Scheffer said heifirst met Mr De Pontes in 1983 in East London where he worked as a clerk in the regional office of the Department of Home Affairs. Mr De Pontes visited the office often as a member of Parliament.
In 1987 when Mr Scheffer was working in the Pretoria section of the department, Mr De Pontes telephoned him from Cape Town and asked if he could assist in filling out permanent residence application forms for a group of his friends.
Mr Scheffer agreed because of his friendship with Mr De Pontes and took a week's leave to go to Cape Town. The air ticket. was paid for by Mr De Pontes. ontes
Mr De Pontes met him at the airport and a meetJewellers in Thibault the next day at Ben Smit Jewellers in Thibault Square.
$\mathrm{Mr}_{\text {I }}$ Scheffer said he found out only later that ## crack of dawn

PW Botha appears to be trying to strike an alms deal with the Swiss bankers.

Syfrets Cape Times

Share Challenge

TODAY'S PRIZE:

 R1200 TODAY'S INDEX: ( + ) R1,57There was no winner yesterday
IF your share price total movement equals exactly R1,57 today, you are a winner! Call (021) 208 4702/4760 between 9am and 2 pm today to make your claim. if you haven't already applied call 2084760 for a free card. No queries or requests for cands will be dealt with on any other telephore numbers.

DAILY LISTING — Page 11 STOCK PRICES - Page 12

Palazzolo had an interest in the business.
At the meeting with Mr De Pontes, Palazzolo, his two sons and several other people, the forms were filled out. Mr De Pontes told him that Palazzlo had been in a Swiss jail for offences which did not apply in South Africa, and that an appeal was pending against his conviction for laundering money from, and for, drug transactions.
He said Mr De Pontes had told him that Palazzolo could be very useful to South Africa because of the powerful contacts he had in Europe.
De Pontes had told him that some of these contacts included President Francois Mitterrand and Prime Minister Jacques Chirac of France.
Questioned by Mr Justice Louis Harms on why Mr De Pontes, with all his government connections, needed the services of a clerk, Mr Scheffer admitted that it had been explained to him that certain information which had to be entered on the form, was not completely legal.
For instance, Palazzolo's criminal record was not included and the application was in the name of Kolbatschenko. He said he knew that a previous application by Palazzolo had been dismissed by the minister.
To page 3 ,
He admitted that he and MriDe Pontes were committing fraud.
He had expected nothing frome Mr De Pontes. Therair ticket was paid for and ${ }^{3 / M M}$ De Pontes and Pálazzolo took him out to dinner at a Sea Point.club, Charlie Parkers.
He was shown a gold chain at Ben Smit Jeweller's which Mr De Pontes and Palazzolo had said was a present for President Lennox Sebe of Ciskei for his help in getting permanent residence for Palazzolo in Ciskei.
Mr De Pontes had made much of Palazzolo's talents and connections with foreign heads of state. He said Palazzolo had played a role in the prisoner swop involving Caiptain Wynand du toit , Questioned by Mr Juistice Harms on why he had not asked Mr De Pontes: why allithis infor mation had not been passed on to the minis ter Mr Scheffer said he belieyed thät he was told all those thin ence $h i m$ and to convince him that he wa doing doing the right thing to Mr De Rontes flew to Sape fown where Mr East London with alr the that he had had a bur application forms He glary at his Pretoria flat: apen posted Palazzolo's Palazzolo paid R1 300 then:

(under the name' of Kol- for new clothing for Mr batschenko) to Mr Scheffer in Pretoria and submitted the others to the regional Home Affairs office after it had fairs orn decided that it was safer for Palazzolo's application to be handled personally by Mr Scheffer.
The applications were processed normally and submitted to the immisubation board.
Mr Scheffer was invited by Palazzolo to Cape Town.
When he contacted Mr De Pontes to let him know of the trip, Mr De Pontes asked him to meet him in East Liondon first and to bring with him the two department files on Palazzolo.
Admitting that he stole the files, Mr Scheffer said that by that stage he could not turn back on what he had done throughout the whole affair 4 He spent the weekend in East London and on the Monday certain information was putwinto the computer at tife Home Áffairs redónal office to show Palazzo 10 S legal entryint South Africa:
Both meflew on to Boln, Scheffer
He was visited by police at his flat in February and arrested for the theft of the files.
In an affidavit submit ted by police to the in quiry yesterday, Mr De Pontes said he was ap proached to act as Palaz zolo's attorney at the end of 1985 by Mr Robert de Lange, the then mayor of East London.
He and Mr De Lange went to Switzerland to see Palazzolo.
"I was under the impression that Mr Palazzolo had exchange problems but at no stage was it disclosed that he was in prison serving a sen tence," Mr De Pontes said in the affidavit which was read out by Detective Warrant-Offi cer Andre Fouche.
It was explained that
$\qquad$
in Durban in August 1986, Mrienotha con-

Palazzolo had been convicted and sentenced for handling money channelled from a bank in the United States by clients. The suspicion, although never proved, was that the funds possibly had been from illegal business. - Sapa
Mr De Pontes said he discussed with Palazzolo the possibilities of residence and investments in both South Africa and Ciskei.
He followed this up.on his return to South Africa and the Department of Home Affairs said they needed more said they
After negotiations in the Ciskei, President Sebe personally agreed to allow Palazzolo into the Ciskei if he wanted permanent residence.
During sthe National Party federal congress
$\qquad$
firmed to him that Palazzolo's application would be considered and that he should have full details.
When Mr De Pontes told him of the Ciskei decision, he said that was their affair and he had no objection. He added that Palazzolo should make a full application if he wanted to stay permanently in South Africa.

Mr De Pontes said he visited Palazzolo in September accompanied by Mr Douw Steyn, a roving ambassador for Ciskei, and again in October. -

Story of an African Dream

The SABC production Mugabe would not accept a part in.

THE recent flurry of diplomatic shuttle by State President P W Botha has been hailed as a major breakthrough from the isolation that characterised this country's relations with the rest of Africa.

The Government's propaganda machinery has lost no opportunity to show that Mr Botha's visits to Mozambique, Malawi and Zaire mean SA's sincerity in the search for peace in the region is accepted.
In the heat of the euphoria over these visits, every person who so much as express an almost similar view becomes an instant candidate for prime time TV. Thus we saw last week the chairman of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) on South African screens when he addressed the United Nations General Assemby. The OAU chairman said there was a chance that the Botha-Mobutu talks could yield results leading to peace in the region.
The holding of the Angolan and Namibian settlement negotiations in the Congolese capital of Brazzaville has also been hailed as further proof of the acceptance of SA's sincerity.
The talks themselves have been hailed as a breakthrough in the stalled Namibian decolonisation process. A new nutimi process. A new caught everyone except the Namibians themselves who have seen earlier "breakthroughs" wither away.

FOR President Robert Mugabe the memories linger on.
A man singled out for special and opposite treatment is Zimbabean president, Mr Robert Mugabe. President Mugabe has categorically stated that hewoulditot sup with the "apartheididemon" and has rejected Botha's

The Government's propaganda tools have brought together all sorts of alleged experts to Africa to say that Mr Mugabe was out of touch with the trend and would soon find himself standing alone outside the Botha created laager.
In this regard, a meeting with Zambian President, Kenneth Kaunda, and a Botha attendance of a Southern the historical perspective, of the man's track record. President Mugabe, having come to power eight years ago following a protracted guerilla war, still has fresh memories of Smith's similar gimmicks to thwart the revolutionary onslaught or Gukura Hunde.

In his early days in politics with the Zimbabwe African People's Union (Zapu), Mr Mugabe and other Zapu leaders analysed the situation in the then Rhodesia and concluded that only the armed struggle would liberate the country.
The Zapu leader, Mr Joshua Nkomo, was not necessarily sold on the idea and this led to the formation of the Zimbabwe African Natonal Union (Zanu) It was in Zanu that Mr Mugabe learnt to stand for what he believed was the correct path no matter who said or did what.

Surrender

At one stage Zanu had virtually no friends in Africa because the party was seen as too militant and a splinter group - a position similar to the one experienced by the Black Conerinionese

Zanu. Indeed Machel put Mugabe under quartantine when the latter fled Zimbabwe to revamp the armed struggle together with Edgar Tekere.

Time however was eventually to prove Mugabe's character and commitment to the cause and Machel became the greatest supporter of both Zany and Mugabe personally.

Ian Smith's midnight dashes to Lusaka to meet Kaunda and Nkomo on the one hand, whit sending the Selous Scouts and airborne troops to neighbouring states to massacre refugees, sound too similar to Botha's present initiative for Mugabe to miss the semi larity.

Vorster

Whether the meeting: between Kaunda rand Botha takes off eventally will however make no difference to Mugabe. The Zambian leader met Vorster at Victoria Falls in August 1975 and again met Botha at the Macula Summit near the Botswana border in 1982, President Kaunda has: not in any case been known for taking. principled stands as was: evidenced by his'actions: during the 7imhahurian:

For Mugabe sity is useless to meet a teleader responsible for the suffering of black: South Africans at home and the destabilisation of the region generally by súpporting bandits in Angola, Mozambique and Zimbabwe Peace in South Africa and the southern African region, Mr Mugabe has said, cannot come from Bothă's tete-a-tete with black GAfrica, but with the solition of the settler domination problem in South Africa itseelf The only way Mugabe can be really isolated would only be where the South African Govern ment is prepared to relinquish power to the black majority And; asitt is generally accepted that that 2 g hotwon Botha's Affic an Sataty kenda Mr Mugabe s refusal 120 meet Bothásishikely leaders. presenty chamouring to host Botha, pointed at the lackof progress and doint him outside the piesent laaget M Mathathat $Y$ Tsedu is a staff writer based wins the Noithern Transvaal?

为

'SA agents' trial expected to last 2 weeks

 identified identified

By Robin Drew, The Star's Africa News Service

HARARE - The body of the person killed in the car bomb blast at an ANC house in Bulawayo in January was so shattered that it was not possible to establish if it was male or female, according to evidence heard in the Harare High Court yesterday.
On the second day of the trial of three alleged South African agents, all Zimbabwean citizens, a witness said he was able to identify the victim from a foot among the remains of the body sllown to him in a plastic bag.

Mr Kevin Woods (35), Mr Michael Smith (34) and Mr Phillip Conjwayo (54) are accused of the murder of Mr Obert Amon Mwanza, a Zambian-born resident of Bulawayo.

The trial, which is being conducted under heavy security, is expected to last two weeks. The State says Mr Mwanza was the driver of a booby-trapped yellow Renault 5 which was blown up by a remote control device.

The witness said he was able to identify the foot as he had shared a house with Mr Mwanza and had often seem him barefoot. The defence counsel, Mr Michael O'Meara, had referred to the post mortem report which said the body had been completely shattered.
The State says remains of human flesh were found 100 m away.

An identity document, damaged in the blast, belonging to Mr Mwanza was said to have been found at the scene.

Another witness was shown the number plate of a car attached to a twisted piece of bumper found at the blast.

He identified it as the number plate of an R5 car, which he had sold for R7800 to a man calling himself Mr James Sibanda, but whom he identified in court as Mr Conjwayo.
The sale took place four days before the bomb blast.
Earlier yesterday, Mr Justice Sandura reserved his decision on an application by the defence for a "trial within a trial" to establish the validity of confirmation of statements, proceedings and the admissibility of statements made by the accused.
Mr 0'Meara said all the statements were being challenged on the grounds of undue influence or lack of proper access to lawyers.
State counsel Mr Andrew Chigovera denied any impropriety in the proceedings and said that in the case of Mr Conjwayo he had made a cautioned statement before he was allegedly tortured.
$\pi^{T}$
The cave th.
peq sey eotuy ynos 'sरes әu 'snul pasyuqeisap Kipunoyod əq ol Inya oridsop - aqesny sonsie uolueH olu! pajiog uәaq Kโreכן sey ouessiw u!nbeor 7 uәpisəId əIəपू 'ənbiq

 Buol sey einopad dof Kupdurks sth

 butu was not invited to Zimbabwe's Mugabe and Zaire's Mobute have
 s. considerably to sustain a spirit of refrom our African brothers, has helpet

[^11] at pritumos əsoui $\ddagger 0$ pəsoduos auo,"' $L$ d $2 q 0100$ पо paวunoure $\operatorname{JqVS}$

宣

 - हiparisy up par leaders of independent African states in the last few weeks than ever be-$\because$ but saves Mugabe
 paqqnp иәaq sey әлlpenul

 puess staqusint roj uoyplopiddy

${ }^{241}$ uo si eylog Md

$$
0
$$

[MOOS
əQPônTAT IOI TMO.)S p

Zim spy trial: Foot led to mutilated ${ }^{362}$  are on trial for murder, terrorism and causing an explosion in connection vith the January bombIng. All risk the death penalty.  Mr Kevin Woods, 35, blast victim's IDHARARE. - A witness a the trial of three alleged South African agents accused of murder told the High Court here yesterday the only identifiable part of the murder victim was his foot.

The state claims the men hired an unemployed man, Mr Obert Mwanza, to drive a car laden with explosives to an ANC house in Bulawayo.
The accused allegedly detonated the bomb out side the house, killing Mr Mwanza. No one else died in the blast.
The witness, Victor Ndlovu, was describing how police took him to the scene of the car bomb on January 11 to help identify the body of # his lodger, Mr Mwanza.

"The body was in pieces and parts of the body and parts of the bag. In it was a foot which I identified. . . He used to walk barefooted so I knew his feet," Mr Ndlovi told the court
He also identified Mr Mwanza from his identity card and the clothes he was wearing when he left for work the previous day.
The prosecution says Mwanza was forced to drive unwittingly to his death in a booby-trapped car bomb which was exploded by remote control outside a house used by the African Nationa Congress.

Three Zimbabweans, two white and one black,

Mr Michael Smith, 34 and Mr Phillip:Conjwayo, 54, have all pleaded not guilty to the charges.
At yesterday's hearing, under heavy security Bulawayo office worker Mr Francis Kapfidze identified Mr Conjwayo as the man who bought his yellow Renault 5 car for about R6 200 on January $y$ under the name James Sibanda.

He also identified the number plate and front bumper of the wrecked vehicle as those of the car used in the bomb attack.

Juige Wilson Sandura told the court he would rule later on a defence application to have the pre-trial statements of the three accused ruled inadmissible in evidence. - Sapa-Reuter

ZIMBABWE

Outward bound?

The report of Zimbabwe's trade liberalisation working party, due to be submitted by Christmas, is already under attack by those opposed to likely recommendations.
The report of the party, appointed earlier this year by Finance Minister Bernard Chidzero, is expected to argue the case for an outward-orientated industrial strategy, with fewer government controls and a more entrypreneurial approach to the rapidly escalating unemployment problem.
Already, however, industry secretary Sam Geza has rejected a free market approach to industrial growth. He told a recent business conference the country needs more rather than less State control and a "more aggreslive" policy of investment and expansion by State-owned industries. Many observers see Gera's remarks as a warning shot across the bows of the working party and evidence that its report is likely to be met with little enthusiasm in some quarters.
The views of the working party were reflected in two recent speeches by Zimbabwe University academic Tony Hawkins. He advocates a sweeping structural adjustment programme, including the dismantling of inport controls, phasing out of price control, more flexible interest rates, a major reducetimon in the ZD$1bn budget deficit and furthe depreciation of the Zimbabwe dollar.
According to Hawkins, unemployment has more than doubled since 1980, to over 900000 or about a quarter of the potential work force. He estimates it will top 2 m by the mid-Nineties.

Zimbabwe, he says, cannot afford to rely on its primary sector to generate both sufficient foreign exchange and jobs. He pleads for an industrial policy based not on exports to countries in the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference (SADCC) and the Preferential Trade Area, but on a more international strategy that seeks to exploit markets worldwide.
"Africa's share in world trade has dropped from more than $4 \%$ in 1980 to less than $3 \%$ last year, while intra-SADCC trade fell by a third between 1980 and 1986. Zimbabwe would be ill-advised to lock itself into slowgrowth domestic and regional markets."
While many businessmen go along with his views, government obviously doesn't.
The issue is complicated by evident disagreement within government's own ranks. While Geza was arguing for more government intervention, Chris Ushewokunze, GM of the newly established Zimbabwe Development Corp -yet another public corporation designed to participate in the economy was calling for more foreign investment.
Hawkins warns that government will need to get its economic act together: which it shows little sign of. Geza's plea for more control and State ownership is hardly compatible either with Ushewokunze's. call for more foreign investment or the Finance Ministry and central bank's support for trade liberalisation. Not that there is any steam in the foreign investment argument anyway.
As one businessman pointed out at a recent business seminar, a foreign firm needs to earn $75 \%$ before tax on assets to secure a $15 \%$ remitted profit abroad. Hawkins points out that the average return on assets in Zimbabwe's industrial sector has been $7,5 \%$ since 1980, implying that foreign investors are likely to stay away until the policy environment improves and price control, in particular, is dismantled.

PRESIDENT Mugabe's Government, embarrassed by the events surrounding last month's anti-corruption demonstrations, has hit back at the University of Zimbabwe - accusing it of being a potential source of destabilisation.
The demonstrations by students at the university and the main technical college in Harare saw ugly clashes with the police and more than 400 arrests.
The students were protesting against corruption in the government, which they accused of being ideologically bankrupt, and took some leaders to task for going on a "plundering, slandering and looting spree".

Allegations like this touch a raw nerve as they are the sort commonly made among the ordinary people who queue for hours for buses while their leaders sweep past in Mercedes Benz limousines.

- Street interviews conducted by local newspapers saw considerable support ex pressed for the students.

President Mugabe, however, who was out of the country at the time of the disturbances, came back and said he did not know what the students were crying about.

ROBIN DREW

The government was doing everything to crush corruption.
Mr Mugabe's displeasure was followed a few days later by the removal from the country of a prominent Marxist propagandist and law lecturer at the university, Mr Shadreck Gutto, a Kenya-born socialist.

Campus discontent over this action flared and both staff and students issued statements condemning the government's action as high-handed and undemocratic.
The student leader, Mr Edgar Mwembwe, said students would not watch while Zimbabwe was reduced to a state of poverty by those who wanted to turn it into their private property, while workers and peasants toiled and felt betrayed.
He promised a continuation of the campaign against corruption, negligence of duty and the betrayal of the stated goal of a socialist state.
Home Affairs Minister Mr Moven Mahachi, whose police clashed with the students, has now accused the university of being a potential source of destabilisation, a word normally associated with South Africa and which carries grave implications.
He said lecturers and "outside people" had incited the student demonstrations and he said prosecutions would follow.
Mr Mahachi said the demonstrations were aimed at undermining President Mugabe's authority.
The students should not moan if action were taken against them. They had been told they could demonstrate on the campus itself, but they defied authority and tried to march into the city.
The Minister added that certain lecturers were involved in subversion. "I know their names and we will be taking action as the situation permits."
This is bound to result in further protests. on the campus from staff and students who will say they are being intimidated.
However, the problem for the government lies in the fact that accusations of squandering and mismanagement cannot be contained at the university. Indeed it was prominent politicians like Mr Edgar Tekere and Dr Eddison Zvobgo, who no longer find favour with Mr Mugabe, who first voiced their objections, both in Parliament and outside it.
However tough the action at the university, it will not put a stop to the demands for a cleaner administration.

HARARE S Southeafrica, wholost his wight eye when a car thomb exploded outside an ANC house in Bulawayo fol January, told the High Court here yesterday: "I am just a refugee, not a fighter for the ANC."
The man (24), who may not be named, was giving evidence on the third day of the trial of three alleged SA agents, Mr Kevin car hoot. He went outside and the next thing he remembered was waking up in hospital.
He told the court he left SA in 1985 for Duke camp in Botswana and then went to Lusaka where hë stayed for over two years.
He denied receiving training or instruction in Zambia. He had gone to Bulawayo in December 1987 to visit ANC members and "just to see Zimbabwe".

ROBIN DREW ( 262 the poline by the accused. " The application for a stay of proceedings led to an adjournment of several hours. The judge said he would give reasons for his refusal at the end of the trial.
The court was then partially cleared to enable the victim of the blast to give-evidence.
He told the court he had been lying on his bed when he heard a which now stood at about of unemployment， population of about 5 found，senior Finance ${ }^{8}$ ，million，had to be and Development Minister Bic Planning zero said at the weekend Bernard Chide In national speech read at the two dayzianu＇（PF current financial position and the country unemployment chidzaro and the problem of employment a generation said the question of broach，Ziana reports．

- Z

Because the cumulative unemployment is figure for the period 1880 to date is clarity tutolerably large，and because training instr－＂， absorptive approaching the limit of their anomy has been slow radial solutions to this problem have to berfouta，and found soon，
 He said greater investment in the produc－
Hive sector would create more jobs，but pro－ ductive investment on the part of govern $10 \%$ as limited in scope because about towards salarional budget was channelled cents salaries，and debt service repay Th absorbed a good deal of the balance Socle Ministry of Labour，Manpower and babe Instity in conjunction with the Rim－ （Zits）institute of Development Studies （Lids），was undertaking a comprehudies study on prospects for economic develop． mont and employment creation，including an investigation into the problems of invest ing in growth points，Chidzero said．- Sapa

Y

！
$\square$

Three

HARARE Nervice

 - Mr Henr Thompson, Ms Mary Baker and a man called John were named as people working for the SA Intelli gence Organisation by one of the accused, Mr Phillip Conjwayo, in the murder trial at the Harare High Mr Conjwaydamalleged to have recruited ithe driver of a yellow Refyalt 5 and to have boughert the car ${ }^{*}$ which was blown up out" side an ANC house in Bu: lawayo , in house in Bu:He said in a statemen to police that he had bought the car and given it to Mr Thompson and Ms Baker' - "SA agents who are connected with John, who was operating in Zimbabwe bombing ANC targets".
In his statement, another of the accused, Mr Michael Smith (34), said Mr. Kit Bawden ${ }^{\prime}$ had ask; ed him forthelp with a job to be carried out in Bu : lawayo on January 11 : He had left the farm at Chakari, where he was workshop manager; telling his wife he was going to Harare - but drove to Bulawayo. The statement de scribed how the two had placed explosives in the boot of, a Renault 5 vehicle, which was left outside a cinema.

- Mr Smith and Mr Bawden then drove to the tar get house in a Renault 18 car and parked in a side road. Mr Smilth said hewas driving the R18. 等 He had butw assisted in the planining of the operation and played no part in detonating the bomb. it He had asked wha would happen to the driv er of the R5. He was told that instructions had been given that the driver had to clear the area as soon as possible. The driver, recruited from an employ ment exchange, was blown to pieces.
Mr Smith said the plan was that if there were 0 ocupants in' the house the driver fowa to blow the hooter "and tell the occu-" pants that the care was to be left there for a bearded man. The driver was then to have left, was then to have left $\hat{H}^{2}$

362
cupants, he was to return the vehicle to where he had collected it.
"We heard no hooting and no vehicle came out of the driveway.
"We waited a further five to six minutes after the time he would have reached the house and eventually decided he must have been approached by somebody, and forgotten the hooter, $\%$
"It was decided tô detonate the bomb before they began searching it as the explosives were not' well concealed.", were not well

I gave info on dropping zone - accused Agent ${ }^{6}$ parachuted into Zimbabwe 362 .

By Robin Drew
The Star's
Africa News Service
HARARE - A South African agent parachuted into Zimbabwe at night to set up an attack on an ANC house, it was disclosed in a statement admitted as evidence in the High Court in Harare yesterday.
On trial for murder are three Zimbabwean citizens, Mr Kevin Woods (35), Mr Michael Smith (34) and Mr Phillip Conjwayo (54).
They are accused of blowing up the house in Jungle Road, Bulawayo, by means of a car bomb that resulted in the driver, Mr Obert Mwanza, being killed and several ANC men being injured in January. The three have pleaded not guilty.
Incriminating statements, which are being challenged by the defence, were yesterday admitted by Mr Justice Sandura.

In one, Mr Woods, who until 1986 was an officer in Zimbabwe's Central Intelligence Organisation (CIO), said he had been recruited in 1983 by an SA Special Branch officer, Mr Alan Trowsdale, a former Rhodesian.

Of the attack on the ANC house in Bulawayo, Mr Woods said he admitted knowledge of the fact that a South African agent was to infiltrate Zimbabwe over the weekend after Christmas 1987.

His mission was to assist another man, Mr Kit Bawden, in an attack on the ANC house, which had been identified by a captured ANC man as a base for ANC mili-tary-wing personnel.
The statement said Mr Woods

Mr Kevin Woods . . . recruited by a SA Special Branch officer.
gave information about a dropping zone in the Fort Rixon area.

The agent, whom he named as Mr Henry Thompson, parachuted in with equipment. The dropping zone, marked with lights, was on Mr Bawden's father's home.

In Bulawayo, Mr Thompson and Mr Bawden drew up a plan to attack the house in Jungle Road using a car, packed with explosives, which was to be driven to the house by someone recruited for that purpose. The command vehicle was to be a car bought by Mr Bawden from a former girlfriend of Mr Woods.

Mr Woods said that three days before the explosion he left by car for South Africa to take his son back to school at Irene.

While in Pietersburg, he heard on TV that a bomb had gone off in Trenance (the Bulawayo suburb) "and knew that Kit (Bawden) had carried out the atack".

After he arrived home, said Mr

Woods' statement, Mr ..Bawden. discussed the operation in brief "and said he took Henry Thompson to a point near Beit Bridge on Friday night (three days before the attack) where he was uplifted to SA by helicopter".
On January 14, said the statement, Mr Bawden got a lift to South Africa with a friend.

In a statement to the police, Mr Woods described how he had been recruited by Mr Trowsdale.

He had been asked to supply information about the ANC in South Africa and about the "bandit" situation in Matabeleland. Mr Woods agreed to do this for R400 a month. This was later increased to R600 but his "salary" stopped in June 1987 "because of non-productivity".

He was also given a camera and a "Textel 1000 " machine for transmitting information.

In early 1985 , said Mr Woods, he had been assigned to another "runner", Mr Alex West. The arrangement was made in Durban.

He supplied Mr West with information over the next two years about the ANC, the bandit situation and the restructuring of the CIO office in Bulawayo.
"In the main," said the statement, "with the exception of the CIO's family tree, the information passed by myself dealt essentially with the military wing of the ANC and the bandit situation in Matabeleland south, as ANC militants were known to liaise with them when passing through to SA or when returning from missions.
"I never passed on any information that would have directly caused harm to Zimbabwe."
The trial continues.

Mr Edgar Tekere

Expressing solid support for students who clashed with po: lice when they were stopped from demonstrating against corruption, Mr Tekere was cheered by hundreds in Mutare when hie declared "Democracy in Zimbabwe is in the intensive care unitiand the leadership has decayed before it is dead."
Reaffirming his total opposition to a one party state Mr Tekere, a former secretarygeneral of the party, said it was not a principle on which the party had been founded.

"Animal farm"

I fear we are heading to wards the creation of a dictatorship," he said, adding that he did not like the idea of an Ganimal farm" type of government
Mir Tekere's slashing attack on Prime Minister Robert Mu gabe's administration is headlined on the front page of the Chronicle newspaper, which is published in Bulawayo. 4
The public rebuke of the leadership comes at a time of mounting confusion within the party over events in another part of the country , maty
T Tension s high in the Gutu Warea of Masvingo province oyer the role of the local MP, Ms Shuvai Mahofa, who was recently acquitted of arson fol lowing the burning down of the home' of a woman allegedly be cause of a quarrel over a cause of a quarrel over a man

President Mugabe thas stepped directly into the row: over whether Ms Mahofa, a deputy Minister of State. should continue to represent the people of Gutumat

, -

- SAlosing 04 L on in in mports  HARARE - Metal Box Zimbabwe

 Which until last year imported 90 per cent of its tin-plate from South Africa, now imports 90 percent from Britain and brings much of it in through Beira according to Ziana.Senior management Met Metal Box told this yesterday to Mảpower Minis ter John Nomo
MetallBox managing director Maurice Ross said most of his company's tin plate now came from British Steel and was shipped to Zimbabwè through the ports of Beira and Durban. -We want to go along with the go: ernment policy of trying to reduce he use of South African ports for sir prod? ucts," he said

He said that from 9500 until 1987 the company had been getting 90 percent of its supply of tin plate from South Afric but now 90 percent of ilt came from British Steelt, $\quad$, $\quad$,
He said the company was now considering exporting its products to Angola and Mozambique: -Sapa

The star trica News Service

HARARE, Tape recordings of telephone calls between an alleged South African agent and his controllers in South Africa were played in the High Court n/Harare yesterday on the fifth day of the trial of three men charged with murder committed during an attack on an ANC house in Bulawayo.
Help me, you must get me out, I want money and assistance, was the message which came across as the court listened intently to the recording of a tele phone call alle ged to have been between Mr Philip Conjwayo and his South African contacts:
According to the State, Mr Conjwayo was already in custody when he made the call which was recorded by the police.
At this point the court adjourned abruptly when there was a report of a suspicious package in a lane outside the building It was a false alarm and the hearing resumed 15 minutes later.
Detective Inspector Liberman Ndolov told the Judge that if it had not been for the co-operation of Mr Conjwayo the police would never have caustit the Smith wo accused Mr Kevin Woods and Mr Michael
The firstrecording played in court was a telephone call made to a woman contact in So tht Africa ref fered to by the state as "Mary Baker"

Phone call

 1 H
$\qquad$ N: Mer "
 Mr Conseond cal to ta man referred to as "Brian", Mr Conjwayo saidy sit's yery, very bad My sons, my daughter and my wife have been picked up. They an the following day the wo the call; this titime from Mary Baker wasa another phone . whe We are very worried dabout youn," shestaid. Every thing will be fine."
and Sold him to go to Mactech Garáae in Bulawayo and speltiout the name , man s, "You will find the stuff in a plastic bag in the toinet You: know the little tank in the toilet,"'shé saie said.
He was then to make his way to: Francistown in Botswana.
The tape recordings and the recorder itself were entered as exhibits:
Mr Michael 0 Meara, speaking for the defence said the juidge would have to rule whether the record ings were admissible,
The two assessors who are trying theicase with Mr Justice Sandura were not present while the recordlings.were played:
d Mr Woods, Mr Smith and Mr Conjwayo have pleaded not guilty:

HARARE - Defence lawyers yesterday made an urgent application for Zim the : MICHAEL HARTNACK hbabwe's Supreme Court to intervene in the High Court trial of three former Rhodesian security force members accused of a fatal car bombing at an ANC house.
Legal sources confirmed the Supreme Court had been asked to declare invalid Magistrate's Court proceedings confirmxing statements made to the police by the three men, Kevin Woods, 35, Michael Smith, 34, and Phillip Conjwayo, 54;

All three, who were allegedly subjects of antabortive SAcéscue bid on June 30 , have pleaded not guilty to murdering, a hired Zambian driver, Obert Amon Mwanza, who was blown to pieces by a remote control device on January 11 outside the ANChouse in Bulawayo.
It is believed if the Supreme Court finds a prima facae case that Mr Justice Sandira erred in accepting the confirmation proceedings, it will halt the murder trial for several months
Michael O'Meara, appearing for the defence, yesterday argued his clients had been prejudiced through Press publicity given to the alleged statement made by them to police and admitted in court this

The defence claims the statementswere made under torture or obtained unlawfuilly by other undue influence.
Prosecution witness Det-Inspor Lazarus Ndiovu yesterday continued his evidence, claiming the "Mary Baker" tèlephoned from Bulawayo CID headquarters by Conjwàyo on Januâry 16 , was a former officer in the Rhodesian CID.
Conjwayo was permitted to telephone Mary Baker at Johannesburg 795-2444, in an attempt to snare whites involved in'the bombing, said Ndlova:
Mary Baker was allegedly instrumental in organising from Johannesburg á"deád letter", drop of money for Conjwayo at Mactec Garage, Bulawayo, which resúlted in the arrest of Wóds.
Johannesburg ter yesterday answered the Johannesburg telephone number referred to in court, saying it was the third callhe had had for Mary Baker during the day. He said he had been given the number on having his tele ephone installed last Friday He said he had lived in the same fouse for some time before the tele ${ }^{\text {bonden}}$ was installed, and he had never heardof a Mary Batsert, and he had never heard of a Mary

TOBACCO

Profits fliter back

Zimbabwe's tobacco sales are drawing to a close, with growers having enjoyed their best season since independence.
Although output, estimated at 119 m kg , is below the post-independence peak of 128 m kg last year, quality was excellent; the average price, $\mathrm{Z} 397 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$, is a record and up by more than $80 \%$ on last year's 218 c.
However, this $80 \%$ improvement is misleading to the extent that, in 1987, leaf prices plunged $30 \%$ following the drought and the resultant poor quality crop. Since 1986, prices have risen at an average annual rate of little more than $12 \%$, which puts the 1988 performance into better perspective.
Converted into US\$, the price looks somewhat less impressive at US218c/kg - but even this is $66 \%$ higher than last year and the second highest average price on record since 1980. The peak US\$ price - $220 \mathrm{c} / \mathrm{kg}$ was paid in 1982, but that was for a droughtaffected crop and the industry's total realisation of US\$193m was well below 1988's record US $\$ 255 \mathrm{~m}$.
Tobacco, which slipped from number one to Zimbabwe's number two export last year, will regain top place - from gold - in 1988, although this could turn out to be short-lived, given the anticipated rise in both the volume and value of gold output over the next two to three years.

Last year, tobacco exports excecded $Z $ 400 \mathrm{~m}$ (US $$ 245 \mathrm{~m}$ ) but in 1988 , helped by the country's $13 \%$ devaluation against the US currency, earnings are expected to exceed $\mathbf{Z} $ 500 \mathrm{~m}$ (about US $$ 270 \mathrm{~m}$ ).
Prospects for 1989 are mixed. The industry expects a small increase in crop size to at least 125 m kg , though much will depend on the weather over the next five months. Traders say prices are unlikely to increase much in 1989, and growers are worried that profit margins will be squeezed by rising production costs.

Given good rains and yields, growers should enjoy another good year, but the 1988 bonanza is not going to be repeated.

For many growers, 1988 is little more than an opportunity to restructure their finances and repay bank borrowings after last year's leaf disaster. These growers need at least one or two more good seasons before they will be out of the woods.

1y October 211988  Counsel accuses Zimbabwean (x2) officer of crime

The Star's Africa News Service HARARE - Counsel for the defence of three alleged South African agents on trial for murder suggested yesterday that the police officer who made tape recordings of telephone conversations could have committed a criminal offence for which the penalty is up to seven years' jail.
'Mr Michael 0' Meara was questioning Detective Inspector Liberman Ndlovu who on Wednesday told how he had recorded conversations, betwen Mr Phillip Conjwayo (54) and his alleged controllers in South Africa.
When Mr 0' Meara asked what authority the police had for their action, Inspector Ndlovu replied: "We were dealing with a case concerning State security."
Mr O' Meara asked if that was an excuse for anything.

Asked about a Mary Baker, a woman who had given Mr Conjwayo instructions, Inspector Ndlovu said she formerly served in the Rhodesian CID.

The inspector said the taped telephone, conversations had been done purely as an aid to the investigation.
He denied that the number in South Africa had been supplied by a Zimbabwean Central Intelligence Organisation officer who was present when the telephone calls were made.

Car-bomb blast

The judge, Mr Justice Sandura, has not yet decided whether the tape recordings should be admitted in evidence.
Mr Conjwayo, Mr Kevin Woods (35) and Mr Michael Smith (34) have all pleaded not guilty. Their court appearance follows a car bomb explosion at an ANC house in Bulwayo. in January when the driver of the car, Mr Obert Amón Mwanza, was killed.

Méanwhile lawyerṣ have filed an appeal with the Supreme court against the trial judge's decision to admit as evidence statements made by the accused to the police.

The main trial continues today.

Own Correspondent

HARARE. - A Zimbabwean electronics expert yesterday demonstrated what was claimed to be an item of South African "James Bondery" issued to retired Central Intelligence Organisation agent Kevin Woods.
Woods, 35, Michael Smith, 34, and Philip Conjwayo, 54, all former members of the Rhodesian security forces, have pleaded not guilty to the murder of a hired Zambian driver, Mr Obert Amon Mwanza, when a remote-controlled car bomb was detonated at an ANC house in Jungle Road, Trenance, Bulawayo, on January 11.

Mr Trevor Howard, an electrical communications engineer who qualified in South Africa and Britain, told the court he was attached to the president's office. Although not a member of the C10 (the secret police), he frequently "works with it".
Mr Howard demonstrated a portable computer and telephone transmission modem said to have been taken from Woods after his arrest in January.
He said identification marks had been removed from the machine and a series of special modifications carried out.

Mr Howard said a "minute switch" had been fitted to a panel at the back of the small computer. If thrown, it would erase every item of information in it.
Another modification was a small "window". If a piece of tape was removed, infra-red light filtered through to a photo-electric cell which caused the memory to be wiped out.

A third peculiarity was the programming, which made it almost impossible to call up to the computer screen items which had already been sent, unless the user could identify whole blocks of characters and command a memory search.

Mr Howard stripped the portable computer down before Mr Justice Wilson Sandura, and showed him soldering which had been done subsequent to manufacture.
Mr Howard also demonstrated an illegal "encryption machine" which could be attached to the computer, putting messages into code before they were transmitted.
Under Zimbabwe's Posts and Telecommunications Act, per mission has to be granted before encryption machines can be used

The case was adjourned until Monday when the investigating officer, Superintendent Bernard Jambawi, will have returned from a trip to Egypt.

As on previous days, the three accused men were brought to court escorted by a military ar moured column with armoured cars and mobile anti-aircraft guns to prevent any possible South African rescue bid. It is alleged they were objects of an abortive South African raid on June 30 when a helictoper was stolen from New Sarum Air Base outside Harare.

Democracy is in TCU, says Zimbabwe MP(362)
babocracy in Zim- enter the contest for the babwe was dying, contro versial MP Edgar Tekere declared this week Galling for clean leaderShip, Tekere; MP for Mutare urban area, told a well-attended meeting that democracy in Africa's newest state was in the Intensive Care Unit.
He also told his 500 strongatadience he would enter the contest for the grated Zanu (PF) in Manicaland.
"We do not want corrupt léadership ás is the case at the moment.' The behaviour of some of the leaders is eroding the image of our country," he said.

He said thèré was no democracy in Z Zimbabwe.
"Democracy in Zimbabwe is in the Intensive Care Unit," said Tekere to thunderous applause.
The chairman had to close the meeting towards midnight, but the audience still wanted to hear Tekere talk, Ziana said.
Tekere also said he was totally opposed to the for mation of a one-party state. adding that this was not among the founding princi- ples of Zonu 188 'ples of Zanu.
"The integration of the "The integration of the party state, no. I do not like the idea of establishing animal farm type of gov ernment here. In fact, $p$ fear that we are heading towards the creation of a dictatorship, he said.

$$
\begin{aligned}
& \text { City Press } \\
& 23-10-88
\end{aligned}
$$

bour relations

Human resource management is the key to the future4

Tekere's sacking leads to battles

From Michael hartnack

HARARE. - Students of the University of Zimbabwe fought a savage battle with "counter-demonstrators" of the ruling Zanu (PF) party youth wing outside the gates to the campus yesterday.
The students, who idolise the sacked party leader Mr Edgar Tekere, threw up barricades and the two sides pitched into each other with sticks, iron bars and rocks.
-No official report of casualties could be obtained.
Police took a passive role as the "counter-demonstrators" tried to show solidarity with the official party leadership, censured in recent protests by the students against alleged unpunished high-level corruption in Zanu (PF).
The young wing eventually drew off, leaving university groundsmen to clear up tons of litter and rubble.

To face charges

At the beginning of the month nearly 500 students from the university and the Harare Polytechnic were detained after clashes with riot police. They had attempted to march into central Harare with placards supporting Mr Tekere, condemning the alleged servility of the main national daily newspaper, the Herald, and demanding the resignation of prominent figures implicated in recent scandals.
Meanwhile Sapa-AP reports from Harare that according to the Zimbabwean national news agency, Ziana, the senior Zimbabwean political affairs minister, Mr Maurice Nyagumbo, said yesterday that Mr Te - kere would face charges of defaming the party if he continued to make unsubstantiated allegations.
Mr Nyagumbo, who is the Zanu (PF) secretary for administration, told the Zimbabwe Broadcasting Corporation (ZBC) that Mr Tekere, who was fired from the party on Friday; would have to explain in court the allegation of corruption against the party.
Mr Tekere, who has made several public statements accusing the party leadership of corruption, was fired at a central committee meeting for continuously breaching party protocol.

Mr Nyagumbo said the party welcomed criticism and allegations which were supported by evidence.
"Those who are found guilty of corruption will be expelled from the government and party," he said.
Mr Tekere, who helped Mr Mugabe found the party in 1964, said in an interview published yesterday that he would continue to attack leaders - for alleged corruption.
"I am not going' to sit back and see the country go to the dogs," he told the Sunday Mail.
Speaking to reporters at his home outside Mutare, Mr Tekere, 51, lashed out at the members of the Zanu (PF) central committee who voted for his dismissal, on Friday.
"It is a very clear trend towards repression and dictarship," he charged.
Referring to President PW Botha and South Africa's alleged responsibility for unrest in Africa, he said "Botha is not the only destabiliser. There are lots of other destabilisers among ourselves."
Ziana reported that the'students at the barricades yesterday urged Mr Tekere to form a new political party.

Mr Edgar Tekere . . . will con tinue attacking corruption.

By Robin Drew,
The Star's Africa News Service
HARARE - Thousands of Zimbabweans turned their backs on the ruling Zanu (PF) party at the weekend and boycotted rallies called to mark the second anniversary of the death of President Samora Machel of Mozambique.
In Harare the stadium was about half-full to hear President Mugabe, but elsewhere in the country the snub was almost total.

A few hundred, mostly children turned up in Gweru and about the same number in Bulawayo.
And in Mutare, home of the maverick political leader Mr Edgar Tekere, the rally was a flop when only a handful of people turned up to hear Mr Tekere denounced by Minister Mr Maurice Nyagumbo.
In the Masvingo province, where the party is divided over the future of a Deputy Minister, Ms Shuvai Mahofa, the rallies were postponed for a week when even the main speaker failed to arrive at the scheduled gathering in Masvingo itself.

The party says the snub was because only short notice was given. But obsevers'believe that disillusionment with the general leadership and sympathy for the views of university students and Mr Tekere dictated the weekend events.

Mr Tekere, "sacked on Friday from the party of which he was once a key figure, hàs said he will go on attacking corrupt leaders. He has so far declined to say if he will form another party."

Minister Nyagumbo, the Zanu (PF) chief administrator, has warned Mr Tekere that the party intends to sue him if he continues to defame it. He said that any allegations of corruption must be supported by evidence.

University students yesterday barricaded entrances to the campus after rumours spread that the Zanu (PF) youth wing were on their way to "teach the students a lesson".

Party spokesman Dr Nathan Shamuyarira, the Foreign Affairs Minister, said over the weekend thar the Students' Representative Council would be dealt with by the security ministries.
-icnond

Riot police stood by as students : shouted anticorruption slogans and denolinced Fridays dismissall from the party centralt icommittee for \% former secretary-general Edgar Tekere, the agency said.
Unversity sources earlier tod the Associat ed Press that students and party youths had classhed violently at the campus entrance and seyeral people were reported injured on Sunday. But the samé soutces later fadmitted they had heard these reports second hand and bad witnessed no trouble They said they; believed the initial reports when they saw debris on the entrance to the road.

She campus was quiet and there Was no sign of police later in the day Buththe bars cades remained and the y yord leading to the evexance was sticewh with buicks,
Gars andologs \% 4 ,

Barricade

One stüdent standing

- at a barricade said "We were expecting them (the party youths) We'd been preparing for them since yesterdy when we heard they were going to try wand teach us a lesson?
"No through road" signs Were placed actoss the road, but visitors were allowed in and out of the campus without hindrance.

On Saturday, party youth league secretary Ernest Kadungure had issued a nine page statement criticizing students: for theirsanticorrûption demonstra emtion Yon September, 29 , saying the protese was to "tarnishthe mámeof our party wand "plant seeds an of discontent idisorder and generalconfuson?
worry about: my con" science," he said at the weekeñd in his modest home in Mutare, about 150 miles east of the capital.
4
The honeymoon days of post-independence in Zimbabwe have been replaced by student protests against alleged corruption, biting criticisms of government in Parliaments unrest in Masvingo province over the alleged sexual activities of a deputy $\rightarrow$ minister, and Mr mekere's charges that "the whole leadership is a jungle of sharks" and that Zimbabwe's young democracy is, as he puts it, "going down the precipice".

Angry

The Foreign Minister, Mr Nathan Shamuyari ra, reflected the ruling party's angry mood áfter the central committee meeting.
"We are not going to is allow people to denigrate \% leaders of the party
"without any founda-
$\therefore$ tion," he said. "We intend to crack down on these elements. Wc cannot tolerate unfounded and unjustified $\therefore$ friticism . . . in public." $\because$ Born to an Anglican minister on April Fool's Day 51 years ago, Mr Tekere became a founder member of Zanu in 1963. After spending 10 years in a Rhodesian jail, he and Robert Mugabe escaped into Mozambique. By 1977, Mr Tekere had assumed the powerful post of . . secretary-general. After independence in 1980, he took the key portfolio of the planning ministry.

But at the end of the year, a bizarre incident 7\% farmer, Gerald Adams was shot dead after Mr Manicaland, Edgar Tekere today stands in the political wilderness, shunned by the party he helped build a quarter of a century ago.

His roller coaster career with President Robert Mugabe's ruling Zanu-Patriotic Front slammed to a halt on Friday when the 90 -member central committee, angered by Mr Tekere's repeated public outbursts against alleged corruption in top party ranks, voted to make him the first ever member expelled.

After it was over, Mr Tckere seemed almost After it was over, M content. "In a sense, they content. "In a sense, they have helped me not to worry about my conscience," he said at the weekend in his modest home in Mutare, about 150 miles east of the capital.

The honeymoon days of post-independence in Zimbabwe have been replaced by student protests against alleged corruption, biting criticisms of government in Parliament, unrest in Masvingo province over the alleged sexual activities of a deputy minister, and Mr Tekere's charges that "the whole leadership is a jungle of sharks" and that Zimbabwe's young democracy is, as he puts t, "going down the precipice".

Angry

The Foreign Minister, Mr Nathan Shamuyarira, reflected the ruling party's angry mood after the central committee meeting.
"We are not going to allow people to denigrate leaders of the party without any foundation," he said. "We intend to crack down on hese elements. We cannot tolerate unfoundd and unjustified criticism . . in public" Born to an Anglican minister on April Fool's Day 51 years ago, Mr Tekere became a founder member of Zanu in 1963 After spending 10 years in a Rhodesian jail, he and Robert Mugabe escaped into Mozam bique. By 1977, Mr . Tekere had assumed the powerful post of secretary-general. After independence in 1980, he took the key portfolio of the planning ministry. But at the end of the year, a bizarre incident occurred in which a white farmer, Gerald Adams, was slot dead after Mr Tekere and a group of his aides wearing military fatigues, forcibly entered his farm. Though Mr Tekere was acquitted of murder charges, Mr Mugabe sacked him from the government, and soon after Zanu-PF abolished the post of secretary-general which he held.

For the Zanu-PF Icadership, the last straw came last Monday when Mr Tekere took another shot at plans to bring in one-party rule. "I do not like the idea of establishing an 'animal farm' type of government," he said. "In fact. I fear we are heading towards the creation of a dictatorship." ship."

they demand to speak to the station commander and they find he is also drunk."
A police liaison officer yesterday said police were "taking note" of Mr Ngxobongwana's comments.
The liaison officer said that the police station was it temporary measure while the Crossroads squalter camp was being upgraded and a new "model" police station would be included in the final development - Sapa.

HARARE - Zimbabwe's political fire brand, Mr Edgar Tekere, has come to the end of a long and stormy relationship with the country's rulers.
The former guerilla leader, who sprang to international prominence when he was accused of murdering a white farmer short ly after independence, has been axed from the ruling Zanu (PF) party after charging that democracy in the country was dying. Mr Tekere, who was acquitted on the murder charge but dropped from his Cabinet post, has been increasingly critical of corruption in government and the plamined creation of a one-party state, saying he feared a dictatorship:
He is also immensely popular with rank and file black Zimbabweans and received an enthusiastic response from more than 500 people at a constituency meeting in the eastern border town of 'Mutare last week when he told them: "Democracy in Zimbabwe is in the intensive care unit and the leadership has decayed before it is dead","

His previous criticisms of the party lead ership have, over "the years, lost him the key post of secretary-general of the party and a provincial chairmanship.
But, until Friday, he remained a member of the powerful central committee, having been elected by an overwhelming popular vote.

PARLIAMENT SEȦT

Now, the man who was at President Ro. bert Mugabe's side as they slipped out of Zimbabwe in 1974 to lead the guerilla war: from Mozambique, appears to have gone too far: $\%$
All he retains now is a seat in parliament and the government has indicated that it will act to deprive him of that too.
But it is unlikely that Zimbabwe has. heard the las't from Mr Tekere, who said after being sacked from the provincial leadership. It will remain a political anit mal untill Idie in spite of all that has hap pened to me?
In a statement after last Friday's centrál Comittee meeting President Mugabe accused "political dissidents" within the party of helping foment discontentamong univer sity students who, last month, clashed with police during a demonstration against corrruption in government:
The students supported Mr Tekere in a statement produced at the time of the demonstration and referred to the "corrupt, rot ten and ideologically bankrupt mentality of the ruling party:
S So although tekeres voice may be offit Cally silenced it has found an echo among anew generation of Zimbabweans who

Mr Edgar Tekere . . . Zimbabwe is unlikely to have heard the last of him.
 charged with murder.

Mr Conjwayo; with Mr Kevin Woods $(35)$ a former Zimbabwe intelligence officer and Mr Michaelsinith (34) is charged with murder-ding the driver of a Hoooby-trappedcar which blew up, injuring some ANC personnel. no

Mr Conjwayo was giving evidence during the trial-within a-tria foto determinethe admis: Sibility of taped selephone conversations he s said to have had with South Africancontacts: Police witnesses dened that $\mathrm{Mr}^{\text {Conjwayo }}$ ad been ill treated huring the interrogation the day after his arrest: The head of the interLogation team, Chief Superintendent Blessing
Monandambira, said he Whad known Mr Conjyenayo as a brother zand hardinterrogator when they seryed together in the Rhodesian WHe claimed that Mr

W

agent  in South Africa because $26 / 10$

Argus Africa News Service HARARE. - A 54 -year-old for mer Rhodesian Special Branch officer, Mr Phillip Conjwayo, has said he followed the ininterrogas of his Zimbabwean interrogators because he was fear of his life
Mr Conjwayo, an alleged South African agent, speaking in Xhosa, told the High Court here yesterday that he had taken part in a tape-recorded telephone conversation with tele-no alternative
He denied co-operating free ly with the Zimbabwean off cers questioning him about the car-bomb attack on an ANC house in Bulawayo in Janaury when a man was killed.
Mr Conjwayo, with Mr Kevin Woods, 35, and Mr Michael Smith, 34, is on trial for murder. They pleaded not griity. The defence is challenging the admissibility of the tape-reclaims is which the State lions is a record of conversations between Mr Conjwayo and his South African controllers who arranged for him to pick up money to get out of the country.

Mr Conjwayo said he had been severely assaulted and had been promised he would be freed if he co-operated would be been told whet to coped. He had did not know the to say and he sneaking to the people he was ber had come from a Zimbabwean intelligence officer.
He told the judge it was both the offer of freedom and the assault which made him "cooperate".

Police officers have denied assaulting Mr Conjwayo. They thanked him for his alleged cooperation, saying this had enabled them to arrest the other two accused men.

Cops ordertant ine phone SA - spy suspeet

HARARE. - Police here set up taped phone calls with alleged South African intelligence agents to incriminate a black Zimbabwean suspected of bomb attacks, the High Court heard yesterday.
Mr Phillip Conjwayo, 54, on trial for murder, terrorism and causing an explosion, told the court that the police had ordered him to speak to the alleged agents and told him what to say.
"I was instructed to ask for money and where I could find the person who would assist me," Mr Conjwayo stated.
"I was told I should ask these people outside Zimbabwe that they should come in and pick me up and not that they should pick me up outside the country," he added.
Police testified at previous hearings that Mr Conjwayo, who served in the local police force for 19 years, had volunteered to telephone his contacts in South Africa to ensure the arrest of his alleged accomplices - Mr Kevin Woods, 36, and Mr Michael Smith, 34. - Sapa-Reuter

Zimbabwe rises to level SA has not yet reached Africans, Zimbabwe is a neighour  tatiors are seen as a challenge by

we cannot ignore; a neighbour who shares and has shared with us many bonds. traditions and past loyalties.
Do we really care these days about our once closest of friends and neighbour?
The challenge of this question is conveniently forgotten in the deluge of antagonism and vituperation that is constantly being exchanged between Harare and Pretoria.
The Business and Economy Forum of the Five Freedoms organisation has long had a concern for rebuilding some of the old bridges of friendship between our two countries. This resulted in the arranging of an eight-person business study visit to Zimbabwe.
The purpose of the visit was to discover and come to understand something about Zimbabwe society and its quality of life since the coming to power of the Zanu PF following the general election of 1980.

Deep yearning

We also wanted witness to the fact that there were business people in South Africa who had a deep yearning for a non-racial society in South Africa. South African business has long earned the reputation in the rest of Africa of being participative in perpetuating the structures and traditions of apartheid the modern day antithesis of the domocratic ideal.
Our time was limited. We cannot claim therefore to have become fully conversant with all that makes up the Zimbabwe of today.

Our programme of meetings was most varied, and included discussions with members of the Cabinet, banking, stock exchange, manufac'turing, property, agriculture, organised industry and the engineering profession.

We also visited Parliament, township developments and schools outside Harare.
The experience was beneficial and most informative.

It achieved much in reducing the reciprocal sense of alienation and estrangement that now invariably characterises attitudes between Zimbabweans and South Africans.
The concepts of a non-racial society and non-racial democracy are not generally synonymous in the politics of Africa.
Zimbabwe, having endured the fiery crucible of independence, certainly has a government that espouses and manifests a non-racial attitude and policy. There is also an openness of attitude and freedom of expression shown by those we met concerning their differences with the Zimbabwe government.

This sense of freedom has, of course. to be seen acainct the font

> South Africa can learn much from Zimbabwe's experiences since independence, writes ALEX ANDERSON, chairman of the Business and Economy Forum of the Five Freedoms organisation.
that Zimbabwe is moving towards, if it has not already attained, its realisation of a one-party state.
Hardly a tenable model for a democratic order, an order that has nevertheless been accepted by the world community.
It has to be admitted that this development has arisen out of a basically democratic process - the general election of 1980 .
The remarkable leadership exercised by President Robert Mugabe over the last eight years has been a very significant force in attaining a national reconciliation.
Had it not heen for his "Let us join together" speech that memorable evening immediately after the election, a mass white emigration to South Africa would most certainly have taken place.
Promises made in that speech, that there would be no sweeping nationalisation and a guarantee of property rights, have been honoured to this day.
Consequent to this is the marked evidence of a nation in the building. Reconciliation between black and white, between Shona and Ndebele, is evident.
Certain bitterness remains, but this is being increasingly neutralised by a sense of national pride and, as one of our delegation noted, a growing attitude of "confidence and happiness".

Collective responsibility

There is now a collective responsibility for the growth of the country. try.
Concern for democratic institution and the traditions associated with democratic procedures were cleary evident in the Harare parliament.
Many of the vestiges of the Westminster order were alive and well. Sworn allegiance to the ruling party is at the same time not a necessary condition for being a member of the Cabinet. The Minister of State (public service) as a Cabinet Minister, for instance, does not belong to the ruling party.

Since indenendenne tha sime of the public service has most certainly mushroomed. Not in the manner we have seen in our own Bothamonic era, but largely due to the vast expansion that has taken place in the area of a most adequate educational system.
The population growth rate of Zimbabwe is 29 percent. The growth in the GDP for 1987 is estimated at 2 percent. Unemployment stands at a figure in excess of 23 percent. There are an estimated 200000 school leavers joining this pool every year.

A long time

Wages and prices are controlled. Government approval for new projects, however, takes a long time. Too long.
The country has a well-developed manufacturing sector, prosperous commercial farming and a wide range of mineral resources. It has the potential for rapid economic growth.

These facts assist the government in now arriving at a growing realisation as to the vital necessity for what Mr Mugabe calls his government's desire to see "a harmonious, mutually supportive relationship between government and the business community".
The role of private enterprise is now widely recognised as being a vital element in correcting what could otherwise be a major crisis in this eight-year-old government's record.
The recent visit of Mr Mugabe to New York, the proposed new investment code and the statements this July of the members of the Cabinet at the congress of the Confederation of Zimbabwe Industries clearly indicate a commitment to the need for a restructuring of attitudes and policy towards economic development.
Established business continues to prosper despite a lack of foreign exchange. Cars are in short supply. The country upon occasion runs short of certain basic domestic all.
The lifestyle of the past largely remaus. The quality of life in the bettel suburbs has not deteriorated with the opening of residential rights to all.
Ex;ensive "site and service" home building projects outside Harate have done much to overcome the housing problems of the country. Squatting is firmly and rigorousy dealt with.
We cortainly never encountered the likei of an Alexandra township. or a Soveto-type Mshenguville in: our traveds.
For wite Zimbabweans, the opportunity to get on with the job" of living, working and playing their sport in th manner they enjoyed in the past is of immeasurable value. To enjoy, their wonderful climate and unique scenic surroundings in. the knowledge that they are accept ed by the rest of Africa and the world is a plivilege South Africans" must surely évy.
Over the eatire duration of our stay, we never witnessed a harsh or antagonistic instance that could be ascribed to the hurtful grievances of Zimbabwe's past history.
The Zimbabwean experience has nevertheless a number of clear lessons for South Africa.
First and foremost is the need to realise the inexorable fact that a non-racial South African society is our ultimate destiny.

Change in hearts

South Africa cannot be thrust into the demands of a new order without a change in the hearts of the people. We require a positively disposed business community.
Certainly there will be pressure to have black chief executives at the head of our larger corporations.
Let us get these individuals trained now and ready to assume that role in due course. Otherwise the appointments may become an embarrassment to the individual and a disaster for the shareholders.
We will need a properly prepăred public administration and local government structure. Without this, and much more, we can only achieve' a disorder and chaos that will suppoit expectations of those who opposed transition in the first place.
Zimbabwe has shown that transition to majority rule, though painfully achieved, has produced an order where respect for both winners and losers has been achieved.) The previous capacity for brutality has been equally matched by a remarkable forgiveness.
In Zimbabwe we have a neighbour who is most anxious for our future - a neighbour who has graduated to a level we have yet to

SA spy suspect was

 'in fear for his life' Stern$26108 \quad \begin{gathered}\text { The Stars africa } \\ \text { News Service }\end{gathered}$ 269188 (362)

HARARE - A 54 -year-old former Rhodesian Special Branch officer, Mr Phillip Conjwayo, said yesterday he had followed the instructions of 'his: Zimbabwean interrogators because he feared for his life.

- Mr Conjwayo, an alleged South African agent, told the High Court in Harare that he had taken part in al tape-recorded telephone conversation with poo-ple in South Africa because he had no alternative but to do as he was told
He, denied cooperating freely with the Zimbab-: wean officers questioning him about the car bomb attack on an ANC 'house in Bulawayo in Janaury when a man was killed.

Mr Conjwayo, with Mr Kevin Woods (35) and Mr Michael Smith (34), is on trial for murder. All three pleaded not guilty.

The defence is challenging the admissibility as avidance of the tape recording which the State claims is a record of conversations between Mr Conjwayo and his South African controllers who arranged for him to pick up money.
Mr Conjwayo said he had been severely assaulted and had been promised he would be freed if he $c_{0}$ operated. He had been told what to say and he did not know the people he was speaking to. He said the nom-: bet had come from a Zimbabwean clio officer:
He said it was both the offer of freedom and the assault which made him "cooperate".
Police officers, giving evidence earlier, had denied assaulting Mr Conjwayo They thanked him for his alleged cooperation? saying this had enabled them to arrest the other two

HARARE - The Zimbabwe government has seized control of property belonging to seven individuals and a company under the powers it has under the istate of emergency to deal with enemies of the state. 362
Two individuals, Mr Gordon Gray Branfield and Mr Malcolm Callaway, have been associated in reports over a number of years with anti-Zimbabwean activities conducted from South Africa. Both are former Rhodesian policemen. Star $26 / 10 / 88$

The other names giver are Mr Bentley Monty Creveler, Mr Sydney John Beech, Mr Barry Newton Lodge, Ms Harriet Ross Lodge, Ms Dorothy Anṇ Dryburgh and Spraypave (Pvt) Ltd.
7
 Zimbabwe seizes 7 White preperties

HARARE. - Zlimbabwe's Minister of Home Affairs Mi Moven Mahachi, hos invoked the emergency bowers to seize the propenty of seven whites and a pruate company, The Herald news paper reported yesterday.
Two of the whites ane former members of the Rhodesian secur: ity forces, named in tecentcourt. cases as agents of south African military intelligenoe. No explanation has been given by Mr Mahachi for his action.
The seven people are Mr Malcolm John Calloway, Mr Gordon Gray Branfield, Mr Bentley Monty Creveler, Mr Sydney.John Beech, Mr Barry Newton Lodge, Mrs Harriet Ross Lodge and Mrs Dorothy Ann Dryburgh.
The company whose assets have been taken over is Spraypave Limited.
During a trial in the High Court earlier this year it was alleged that during the 1982 Matabele land unrest, four members of Mr Joshua Nkomo's Zapu party re peatedly met Mr "Matt" Calloway at secret locations on the Botswa-

HARARE- Ag de tryingtree
Zimbabweans fon murder yester day ruled that one the accused had freely telepliónedosonth arris can intelligence agents afternitis arrestin Jánuary
Mr Justice Wilson scondurairejected testimony bu Mr Philip Conjwayo 54 , th the het hat ben aşsanitfo ${ }^{2}$ and coerced by police into making the taped phone calls which were played n $n$ eourt fast week

Dhe judge said be woild give his reasons later whe
Mr Conjwayo, a former policeman, is accused with Mí Kevin Woods, 36, and Mr Michael Smith, 34, of murder, terrorism and causing an explosion at an ANC home in which one person died;-SapaReuter na-Transvaal borden where truckloads of arms were deliv ered fon smuggling into Zimbab we.
Mr Calloway servedrintine police until shortly ádeterndependence. He was attachéd to the Matobeleland vorth Late and Orden ectiondaty Harage ownen, Row Burt Ma guis, wastjailed fobseyen years for failing to repont South African agents, it was alleged that Mr Lofty Branfield was the controlyer sof sotage squads who platea bombs at African National Congess targets in Zimbabwe simagure testified that calls were placed to Mr Branfiéd in Pretoria from his Grey Street garage

Ünder a government proclamation a person named in a property restriction order has to return physically to Zimbabwe to seek legal redress in the courts. Mr Calloway and the others affected would therefore appear barred from hiring lawyers here to press their rights. It is believed Mr Calloway, Mr Branfield and at least one of the other people hamed were receiving a pension gaid from zimbabwe. This has now been stopped
Legal sources say they may have a case to challenge the apoperty réstrictón ordess under the Britishitesigned 1980 Lancastern Huse constitution. A court action wolla, howeyen cost tens of thousands of rands

Tekere flays Mugabe in anti-corruption crusade  MUTARE, Zimbabwe. - Mr Edga Te- one-party Marxist-Leninist state.

 kere, the dissident leader expelled from Zimbabwe's ruling party, says President Robert Mugabe has failed to show he can lead the country."The corrupt are finding comfort under (Mugabe's) umbrella," Mr Tekere said at his home here.
"It's a major disappointment (that) Comrade Mugabe has failed to prove he is able to lead this country, government and party," he said.
It was the first direct attack on the president by Mr Tekere, who was last week thrown out of $\mathrm{Zanu}-\mathrm{PF}$, the Zim babwe African National Union (Patri otic Front), for criticising other leaders in public.
Mr-Tekere helped Mr Mugabe found the party 25 years ago and once served as its secretary-general.
He said he would not form an opposition party but pledged to continue fighting Mr Mugabe's plan to establish

Mr Tekere is member of parliamen for Mutare Town in his home province of Manicaland
He dismissed threats by Mr Maurice Nyagumbo, number three in the Zanu hierarchy, that he would be charged with defaming the party if he continued his anti-corruption crusade.
"I think Comrade Mugabe can assist me in giving proof," he said.
Mr Tekere began to fall out of favour shortly after independence from Britain in 1980. He was acquitted on a technicality on a charge of murdering a white farmer and lost his post as party secretary-general
But he still wields' immense influence in his home province and generally enjoys popular; support countrywide. Muitare residents packed a hall on Tuesday night to hear him repeat earlier attacks on the government. - Sapa-Reuter

by 'SA agent

Til 88 By Robin Drew 362
HARARE - Tape recordings of telephone converstations by an alleged South African agent and his controllers in South Africa were admitted as avidance yesterday by Mr Justice Sandura in the marder trial of three men?
The judge said he was satisfied that Mr Phillip Conjwayo (54) had made the telephone calls freely and voluntarily and without undue influence.

Mr Conjwayo, Mr Kevin Woods (35) and Mr Michael Smith (34) are accused of the murder of the driver of a booby-trapped car which blew up at an ANC house in Bulawayo in January. They pleaded not guilty:

Defence Counsel Mr Michael O'Meara submitted that the police denied Mr Conjwayo access to a lawyer and subjected him to interrogation.

MOTIVATED
But state counsel Mr Andrew Chigovera maintaine Mr Cónjwayó, 'at former Rhodesian Special Branch officer, had cooperated freely, motivated by a desire to see his white accomplices arrested.

The ruling yesterday means that both the warned and cautioned statements in which the accused admit their involvement and the telephone tape recordings form part of the evidence to be examined by the judge and the two assessors.

Earlier yesterday Mr Conjwayo admitted receiveing a call from a Mary Baker asking him to go to Bulawayo from Harare to meet Henry Thompson, who intended to open a business there.

The State maintains that Henry Thompson was the South African agent who parachuted into Rimbabwe to plan the attack on the ANC house.

[^12]$\qquad$
$\qquad$

$\qquad$

$\qquad$ ,

'I thought I was  going to die' SA spy accused

Argus Africa News Service

HARARE. - A" former Zimbabwe Intelligence Officer, accused of being a South African spy, said he thought he was going to be killed when he was arrested by extremely aggressive men, many with cocked weapons.

Mr Kevin Woods, 35, was giving evidence in the High Court here when the defence case opened on the 11th day of the trial of three men accused of murdering the driver of a booby-trapped car which blew up at an ANC house in Bulawayo in January.
Mr Woods, Mr Michael Smith, 34, and Mr Phillip Conjwayo, 54, have all pleaded not guilty.

Armed men

The full-bearded former intelligence officer'told the court he was in Pietersburg in the Northern Transvaal on the night of the attack on the ANC house. He was returning to Zimbabwe after taking his son to school.
The car bomb exploded on the evening of January 11, injuring some of the ANC personnel in the house:
Mr Woods said that on Sunday, January 17 he had been working in his yard when he saw an armed policeman approaching him with an Uzi sub machinegun. He then saw other armed men in the garden, some in camouflage uniform, with their weapons cocked.

He was marched at gunpoint to a group of senior officers who were very aggressive.
"There were armed men all around - it was a terrifying experience," Mr Woods said.
One of them who knew him said: "You've really done it this time, Kevin."
His wife Jane and two daughters aged 10 and five, who were in the house, were also arrested and put in a police vehicle.
His wife was upset and scared and his daughters were bewildered and had tears in their eyes.

Emotion

"I begged them not to hassle them," Mr Woods told the court, showing some emotion.
He was handcuffed and taken in another vehicle to the police station where he was taken to an office crowded with people, some of them armed.
An assistant police commissioner, Mr Ndove, shouted and screamed at him for about an hour.

A senior assistant commissioner then pushed his way in, Mr Woods said.
"He stuck his face three inches from mine and screamed at me: 'You are dead'".
He then stormed out of the office.
"I thought I was going to be killed, still not knowing why they were treating me like that," Mr Woods said:
He was put in leg irons and taken to another police station. At one stage he called out to a Central Intelligence Organisation officer and personal friend: "Tommy, look after my wife and kids, please."

Mr Woods, who drank water frequently while he stood in khaki prison clothes giving evidence, said Assistant Commissioner Ndove had told him not to even think of a lawyer "because you will never see one".
That night interrogation had continued at another police-station where threats were made against his family. As an exmember of the CIO, Mr Woods was told he would know what happened to people who did not co-operate, and he was also asked: "Why let your little children suffer?"

Mr Woods said he knew from his CIO experience that his wife and children would not be capable of taking detention in the general condition of police cells.
Mr Woods served four years in the CIO in Bülawayo from 1982 to 1986. He had about 10 years' service in the police before then:
His wife was in"court when he gave evidence, which will continue today.

[^13]
ZIMBABWE  Balance of payments

While the 1987 balance of payments (BoP) surplus of $Z $ 234 \mathrm{~m}$ (US $$ 124 \mathrm{~m}$ ) is Zimbabwe's largest since independence, it does not represent any real improvement in the underlying external payments situation.
Official figures, just published by the Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe (RBZ), show a trade surplus last year of some $\mathbf{Z} $ 635 \mathrm{~m}$, but this was largely wiped out by the deficitit on invisible account of $Z $ 553 \mathrm{~m}$, leaving a surplus of only $Z $ 82 \mathrm{~m}$. The capital account saw an increase despite the outflow of $Z $ 50 \mathrm{~m}$ private capital, a net inflow of $Z $ 152 \mathrm{~m}$ reflecting government borrowing abroad.

FINANCIAL MAIL OCTOBER 281988
The capital account surplus of $Z $ 152 \mathrm{~m}$ and current account surplus of $Z $ 82 \mathrm{~m}$ gave an overall surplus - before repayments to the International Monetary Fund - of Z $$ 234 \mathrm{~m}$. These absorbed $\mathbf{Z} $ 171 \mathrm{~m}$, leaving a liquidity or cash flow improvement of Z$63m.
RBZ points out that the improvement on current account was largely attributable to tight import and exchange controls. Exports rose by only $9,5 \%$ - failing to keep pace with the $13 \%$ trade-weighted depreciation of the Zimbabwean dollar - while imports rose by $5,6 \%$, reflecting a further decline in import volumes. Indeed, calculated in special drawing rights, 1987 exports were $6 \%$ below 1982 levels, while imports were down almost $40 \%$.

In this situation, it is hardly surprising that investment levels should be depressed and that several industries - especially the transport sector - are suffering an acute shortage of imported spares and components.

While the BoP numbers make good reading superficially, the RBZ warns that export performance simply isn't good enough. "Policies to stimulate exports and bring about a sharp rise in investment are critical if the objectives of sustainable real growth and employment creation are to be achieved," says the bank's latest Quarterly Review.
This view is echoed by the business community, which is increasingly critical of the apparent paralysis of decision-makers within government. As one top industrialist puts it: "We all know what should be done, but no one in government seems capable of setting the wheels in motion."

Russian's call for talks  HARARE - Zimbabwe's differences with the Soviet Union on the correct approach to South Africa have become a public issue following remarks in Harare by a senior Soviet newsman.  Zimbabwe claims to stand for the "all or nothing" approach. Any suggestion of talking to President Botha meets with a definite and resounding "Nyet!" from President Mugabe.  Mr Botha must talk to South Africa's own black  BY ROBIN DREW of The Star's Africa News Service.  The suggestion from a visiting Soviet journalist that the Zimbabwe leaders should talk to Pretoria has sent shock waves through President Robert Mugabe's administration.

leaders first, after letting them out of prison, and also do something meaningful about ending apartheid is Harare's line.
It was reinforced only this week with vitriolic remarks by the Foreign Minister, Dr Nathan Shamuyarira, about Pretoria's "hand of friendship being stained with the blood of black brothers and sisters".
This attitude is well known. So it caused something of a stir in Harare when, last week, a leading Soviet newsman, the deputy chairman of the Novosti Press Agency, Mr Karen Khachaturov, urged African leaders to talk to the South African Government.
The question of Pretoria talking to South African black leaders was a different issue, he said.

He clearly implied that it was unrealistic for President Mugabe and other African leaders to refuse to have dealings with Pretoria, relating this approach to outdated Soviet policy concerning the destruction of all imperialism in one sweep.
A senior Zimbabwean government official, who met the the three-man Soviet team led by Mr Khachaturov, told me he was quite bowled over by their views. "I never realised things had changed that much," he confessed.
Now the main newspaper in Zimbabwe, The Herald, which normally reflects government policy on all foreign policy isssues has described Mr Khachatumn'c etntomant as "trilly friahtanịa"

Calling for a Soviet clarification, the paper added: "We say frightening because it spells serious trouble for such 'refuseniks' as Zimbabwe because General Magnus Malan issued a warning to this country for our stand on the apartheid issue."

The Herald said Pretoria had lost the initiative and it would be tragic if the system were to be rescued by wrong signals at this delicate stage.

The editorial also maintained that recent apparent contradictions within the OAU over talks with South Africa had been resolved.
The current chairman, President Mousa Traore of '" Mali, had appeared to be condoning talks now with Pretoria, but had since reaffirmed that political prisoners had to be released and apartheid dismantled before Pretoria could be taken seriously.
This position should have the support of the socia-". list camp in particular, said the paper, but had been $:-$ followed by the Soviet advice to accept "the crumbs", 1 , Mr Botha was offering.
The paper claimed "the stated Soviet position on" the issue no longer coincides with that of Africa with regard to the issue of isolating the racist regime".
With some bitterness, the editorial concluded: "The... not-so-subtle suggestion was that for the sake of. 'world peace', Africa should surrender to reformed. apartheid. That the apartheid regime will not relin-... quish racism, nor accept one "man-one vote, is. lost by Zimbabwe's feared Central Intelligence Organisation (CIO) was given in the High Court here yesterday by a former senior officer in the organisation.

Mr Kevin Johin Woods (35) was explaining why he was terrified that he, his wife and two young daughters would be interrogated by the CIO after his arreston January 17 after a car bomb blast at an ANC house in Bulawayo.
Mr Woods; MrMichael Smith (34) and Mr Phillip Conjwayo (54) are accused of murdering Mr Obert Mwanza, the driver of the car; and of acting for the South African-intelligence service.
Mry Woods was a member of the CIO from 1982'to 1986 when he was in charge of the administration of the anti-dissident campaign.
Asked about interrogation techniques, he said: It would see people being assaulted with anything from sticks to hosepipes.

I have seen subjects having their heads immersed in buckets of water
"A popular method in the water technique was to use a government issue canvas kitbag. The bag, half full of water, was'tied around the subject's neck and the rear part lifted so the water covered his face.
He had seen suspects beaten on the soles of their feet until the flesh was bruised and erupted
"I have seen people with broken limbs as a result of being struck with pick handles

I have seen electrical connections from a hand dynamo placed on the pri vate parts of subjects and the subjects being shocked by turning the handle."

The length of time this treatment was

Woods tells of CIO

methods

administered depended on the strength of the subject or how long it took him to tell the CIO what they wanted to know.
"It is never left unfinished. The subject has to capitulate or he will die," said Mr Woods.
"I was terrified," he said. "I knew for sure they would have no hesitation in applying any of these methods to my wife and children and myself."
Mr Woods, questioned by his defence counsel, Mr Michael 0' Meara, said statements he had made had not been made freely and voluntarily.
In a warned and cautioned statement, which the judge has admitted as evidence, Mr Woods confessed to being recruited by a South African agency to supply information about the African Na tional Congress in Zimbabwe.

His passport and a hotel bill have been produced as exhibits to show he was in South Africa on the night of January 11 when the car-bomb was detonated.

Mr Woods had gone to South Africa on January 8 to take his son back to school and only returned to Zimbabwe on January 12.

The court went into camera yester day afternoon when Mr. Woods was asked to speak about his knowledge of ANC activities from his days in the CIO
The trial will continue on Monday when it enters its fourth week

The Star's Foreign News Service PERTH - Qantas, forced by the Australian government to abandon a direct service to Johannesburg, wants to beef up its share of the back-door traffic through Harare.

It is considering the introduction of a second weekly flight to Harare within the next six months.
Qantas has already scheduled a record 15 supplementary services for the next three months to cater for Christmas and New Year business, and is reported to be making big'profits on the Harare run.
An estimated 50 percent of passengers flying Qantas over the Indian Ocean are going to South Africa, a fact which may concern South African Airways in its bid to attract passengers on the roundabout route through Hong Kong and Taipei.
This was introduced a year ago when the Hawke government withdrew SAA's landing rights in Australia.

The Star＇s Africa
＂News Service．
＂MARARE－The ANC killed innocent people in－ discriminately and its military tactics were a tow form of cowardice，the High Court in Harare Ho
4．Mr Kevin John Woods，the 35 －year－old former dathobabwe inteliligence officer on trial for mur－ der after a car bomb attack on an ANC house in Jubyayo in January，said he would grant the C the right to struggle for freedom but indis－等紬

Sympathised

As an educated，civilised man，he was sympa－ thetic to the South African Government＇s attitude towards the ANC because of the killings．

South African Government retaliation was not directed at places frequented by women and chil－ dręn．＂

Mr Woods，Mr Michael Smith（34）and Mr Phil－ lip Conjwayo（54）have pleaded not guilty to the murder of the driver of the car which blew up outside the house in Bulawayo＇s Jungle Road，in－ juring some ANC personnel．

Mr Woods，giving evidence on oath from the Witness box，said he agreed indiscriminate at－ tacks on civilian targets should be stopped．

He refused to answer questions on a warned and cautioned statement to the police in which he admitted being recruited by South Africa to supply information about the ANC．

He said the statement had been obtained under duress．

Asked what he knew about Mr Alan Trowsdale； Mr Alec West，Mr Gordon Branfield and Mr Lawrence Wasserman，he said they were former Rhodesian Police colleagues．

He also knew Mr Christopher Bawden，said by the State to have been involved in the car bomb attack．

The acting Attorney General，Mr Andrew Chi－ govera，suggested that Trowsdale，West and Branfield worked for SA Military Intelligence，$\cdots:$

Mr Woods；who served in the Zimbabwe CIO for four years until 1986，said he had co－operat－ ed with the police after his arrest because he feared what would happen to him if he did not．

Impunity

He said an innocent man，suspected of involve－ ment in the abduction of six tourists in Ma－ tabeleland in 1982，had been taken to a CIO inter－ rogation centre at Esigodini．
＂Because he was innocent he could not say what they wanted to know．The last time I saw him he was a completely destroyed rotten piece of living flesh；＂said Mr Woods．

He knew he would be dealt with with the same impunity and that was part of his fear to this day： The trial；in its fourth week，is continuing．

I hid money in toilet， admits ${ }^{\text {（in }}$ ex－zim  HARARE：－Mr Kevin Woods，a for－  gress member seriously injured．

on aimbabwean intelligence officer on trial for murder，yesterday ad mitted in the High Court that he hid Z\＄1．000 in days atpetrol station toilet five days after a car－bomb attack in Bula－ wayo：
He said he was told to leave the money in a telephone discussion with Mr Allan Trousdale，a former police colleague now living in South Africa who promised to repay him in rands．
Under cross－examination，however， he denied knowing what the money as intended for．
Mr Woods，35，is on trial with Mr Shillip，Conjwayo，54，and Mr Michael house in Tren the bomb attack on the house in Trenance，Bulawayo，on Jan－ uary 11 in which the car driver was killed and an African National Con－

The three are accused of being South African agents．Chargestagainst them include murder，terrorism and causing an explosion，all of which car－ ry the death penalty
Mr Woods refused to saytho acquired an electronic say he sion machine ectronic text transmis－ to havechine said by the prösecution Africe been given to him byi his South controllers asked ifs refused to answer when asked if he used the machine to send essages over the telephone
Mr Woods also denied that he had co－operated with the police during in－ vestigations into the bomb blast to ensure the arrest of another suspect－ ed SA agent，Mr Christopher＂Kit＂ Bawden，who is alleged to have es－ caped to South Africa following the blast．－Sapa－Reuter

yoo spoom
y．0． 5 Spoom
y007spoom

อココ甘

7ӘӘオ75

62
62 60 も
$\qquad$

Cape Times, Tuesday, November 1, 1988  'Firebrand' Tekere blasts Zimbabwe rulers

0 On Correspondent

MUTARE When Zimbabwe's ruling party isecretary-general, Mr Edgar Tekere, eight years ago led armed ex-guerillas on a mission to kill an old white farmer, opposition leaders such as former prime minister Mr Ian Smith bayed for his blood.
Today, the 51 -year-old firebrand of Zimbabwean politics is being toasted by whites for boldly standing up to the government, accusing President Robert Mugabe's cabinet ministers of corruption, greed and mismanagement.
"Democracy in Zimbabwe is in the intensive-care unit and the leadership has decayed," he told a public meeting in Mutare, provincial capital of Zimbabwe's eastern Manica province, four days before he was ousted from the ruling Zimbabwe African National Union (Patriotic Front) by the 90 -member central committee.
Officially, Mr Tekere earned the distinction of being the only member sacked from Zanu (PF) because he did not air his grievances through the correct party channels and could not substantiate allegations against his peers. But there is little doubt that he was fired for violating an unwritten code of the party hierarchy, públicly pointing up faults in the leadership.
"I fear we are heading towards the creation of a dictatorship,"

Mr Edgar Tekere
Mr Tekere had said, declaring his opposition to Mr Mugabe's aim of turning one of Africa's few West-ern-style democracies into a oneparty state.
And without identifying the alleged villains he also spoke of cabinet ministers, senior bureaucrats and security chiefs stashing away money in Swiss bank accounts "just like the Mafia". Mr Tekere's central committee colleagues were not amused.
They booted him out of the party and plan to strip him of his seat on 100 -member national assembly and threaten to drag him before the courts if he continues to impugn them.
Mr Tekere remains unbowed as he receives wellwishers at his home in Mutare, a city serving his tribal stronghold of Manicaland. "I will not be silenced," he defiantly told foreign reporters. ${ }^{4} \mathrm{I}$ am not going to sit back and see the country go to the dogs." Fear of the law does not bother the man who in 1964 helped Mr Mugabe found Zanu (PF).
Like Mr Mugabe he languished in detention without charge as a terrorist for 10 years. And on his release in 1975 he fled with Mr Mugabe to neighbouring Mozambique to lead a guerilla army in the war that transformed white Rhodesia into black-governed Zimbabwe on April 18, 1980.
Nor has he had any reason to be afraid of the courts. As party secretary-general, number three in the hierarchy, he was acquitted by a white High Court judge of the murder of the white farmer, 68-year-old Mr Gerald Adams, at a homestead near Harare shortly after independence in 1980.

Mr Tekere's sacking was denounced by labour leaders and University of Zimbabwe students, who staged a demonstra:tion this week calling on him to launch a new "clean" political party. Most Zimbabweans seem to be on his side, too.
His political demise comes ata time when public patience is wearing thin with politicians who preach egalitarianism while they drive around in chaffeured Mercedes Benzes, live in mansions with swimming pools and servants and acquire properties, businesses and shops. worth far more than their earnings.

soulh FEATURES

Humbled heroes find going tough

BULAWAYO. - When dissident Sontayi Nare gave himself up at Plumtree police station, he was asked how he had survived in the bush for six years.

His answer was simple: "We were fed by the peasants, because they were sympathetic to our struggle."
"If I go to that village now," he continued, pointing toward a nearby settlement south of the police station near the Botswana border, "they will slaughter a chicken for me."

Chicken is a delicacy in Zimbabwe, symbolising welcome and great respect for visitors.
Nare is one of the 113 dissidents who responded to an amnesty declared by President Mugabe in April.
He was saying that the rebels were popular with the peasants - not harassing them or forcing them to provide food as the government had been saying.

The point was repeated by Juluka Mkwananzi, spokesman for 41 dissidents who gave themselves up in a group at Nkayi two days before the amnesty's June deadline.

Mkwananzi asked police to assemble the villagers outside the police station, where he presented a list of demands drafted by the dissidents. He told his audience that the dissidents had given themselves up in the spirit of the unity accord signed between the leaders of the two political parties, ZAPU led by Joshua Nkomo, and ZANU led by Mugabe.

When Zimbabwean dissidents surrendered under a general amnesty earlier this year, they assumed they would rejoin society as heroes. Instead, reports CHARLES RUKUNI, they have been placed under police protection after threats and attacks by members of the public.
But today, several months after the amnesty left them free to return to their homes, 97 of the former dissidents are still at various police camps in Matabeleland.

They have nowhere to go. Those who tried to return to their homes or urban areas came back to the police camps within four days after members of the public made it clear they were unwanted.
The episode led the former rebels to the realisation that they had been "popular" only because they wielded guns. Once unarmed, they were challenged by ordinary people. Several were assaulted; at least one required hospital treatment.

Although the goverment had forgiven the dissidents they were told they would get no more favours beyond the initial pardon. Having convinced the dissidents to lay down arms and give information about themselves, the government could now easily trace anyone who might return to the bush. It had the upper hand and the dissidents were trapped.

Zimbabwe

Peace now prevailed in Matabeleland and Midlands, and ordinary citizens fully backed the government. They were prepared to apprehend even kill - any dissident.

The government position was put succinctly by Justice, Legal and Parliamentary Affairs Minister Emmerson Munangagwe: "They (the dissidents) were granted an amnesty so that they could come back and join society, but to say that the government should find resources to look after the former dissidents is taking it too far."

The dissidents, therefore, could not expect help finding jobs. Despite their protests that the government was going back on its word to help them, there was nothing they could do.

But letters to the press indicate that govermment help for the former dissidents would have been unpopular. Letter writers wanted to know why dissidents - some of them known as murderers . should get preferential treatment when as many as 13560 former combatants had not obtained jobs.
This leaves the government with a dilemma: where to house such people permanently so that they will be safe. So far, police stations seem to be the only place. - GEMINI NEWS

2 The Star Thursday November 31988

Car deal evidence in booby-trap case

Ex-policewoman is named as SA agent

$\because \quad$ The Star's Africa News Service
HARARE - An alleged South African intelligence agent, previously referred to as Mary Baker, was yesterday named in the Harare High Court as Katriona Marilyn Burger, a former Rhodesian policewoman.

The state prosecutor disclosed the name in crossexamination of Mr Phillip Conjwayo, one of three men charged with murder over the death of the driver of a booby-trapped car which blew up outside :an ANC house in Bulawayo in January.

SA contact for agents

${ }^{c}$ Mr Conjwayo, who denied any knowlèdge of a Katriona Burger, has pleaded not guilty to murder and alternative charges dealing with terrorism, as have his co-accused, Mr Kevin Woods and Mr Michael Smith.

The state maintains that the woman known as Mary Baker was a contact in South Africa for a group of agents including the three accused.
Mr Conjwayo said he met Mary Baker before independence, when she was working for a security company in Harare owned by a Mr Dancer, who has since died.
At that time, Mr Conjwayo said, he was l g for work and was introduced to Mary Baker by a Mr Begg, with whom he had worked in the police.
Mr Conjwayo said that in 1985 she had told him about a man who was starting a business in Harare and then in January this year she had phoned him and suggested he meet a Mr Henry Thompson in Bulwayo. Mr Thompson was thinking of opening a business there and might be able to employ him.
When the prosecutor showed him a file of photographs, Mr Conjwayo denied that the woman pictured there was Mary Baker.
However he identifed photograhs of men he said he had served with in the Rhodesian police including a Mr Price, Mr Begg; Mr Hart and Mr Wishart.
Mr Conjwayo admitted meeting Mr Thompson in Bulawayo, buying a car for him and hiring a driver. He insisted he did not know the use to which the car would be put.

Purchase of car

He had met Mr Thompson, as arranged with Mary Baker, outside the main post office in Bulawayo on January 6 .
"I had no difficulty picking him out," he said. "He was the only white man there."

The hearing continues.

A!  Zim cowirt told of SA spy 362

From michael hartnack
HARARE. - Further disclosures about the mysterious South African spy controller "Mary Baker" were made by the state here yesterday during the trial of alleged SA agents Mr Kevin Woods, Mr Michael Smith and Mr Philip Conjwayo.
Zimbabwe's acting attorney. general, Mr Andrew Chigovera, put it to Mr Conjwayo during cross-examination that "Mary Baker" was the code name of Ms Katriona Marilyn Burger, who joined Rhodesia's British South Africa Police on September 3 . 1973 and served in the Central Criminal Investigation Department until December 23, 1977.

Mr Conjwayo is alleged to have telephoned "Mary Baker" in Johannesburg from the Bulawayo CID headquarters following his arrest, and requested help in escaping from Zimbabwe. The call took place five days after a Zambian driver was killed by a re-mote-control car bomb outside an ANC house in Trenance, Bulawayo, on January 11 this year.
Mr Conjwayo said the only "Mary Baker" he knew was the daughter of Mr Heinz Taube, proprietor of Leemac TV repair shop in Baker Avenue, Harare. Mr Taube was inexplicably detained: in January, but was later released.

Mr Conjwayo said he did not know the "Mary Baker" shown in a photograph produced by Mr Chigovera in a display of alleged SA intelligence agents who formerly served in the Rhodesian security forces.
The state allegation that "Mary Baker" is the code name of Ms Katriona Marilyn Burger has caused confusion, because previously the court was told it was her real name.

The trial of Mr Woods, Mr Smith and Mr Conjwayo, who are pleading not guilty to murder, continues today: before Mr Justice Sandura and assessors Mr Heyi Malaba and Mr Steven Tutani.
HARARE - Zimbabwe's dependency on South Africa for a particular type of coal used in the ferro-chrome industry should be eliminated by -1990, a Ministry of Mines official said here.
The importation from South Africa of low sulphur, low phosphorus coal for the industry, costs about R6 million in precious foreign exchange every year.
These imports are like ly to stop in the next 14 months when a new coal mine opens at Sengwa in north Matabeleland.
"At present Zimbabwe imports coke and coal from South Africa at an annual foreign exchange cost of approximately R16 million for the. high carbon ferro-chromium production.
"The Sengwa colliery will substitute for all the imported coal," the official said.
Zimbabwe would however still need to import coke worth about R11 million annually from South Africa as there is no known coke substitute available.

POOR ROAD

Sengwa mine is being developed by Rio Tinto which was granted permission by government in February this year.
A major stumbling block has been the lack of an all-weather road to link the remote colliery to the railroad.
The Ministry of Transport is curronity workling flat out to complete construction of Gokwe-Siabuwa road.
The road is scheduled to be completed by the end of 1989 and would enable the haulage of coal to Union Carbide's ferrochrome operation in Kwekwe: - Sapa.

HARARE - A white Zimbabwean farm manager facing murder and terrorism charges here said yes it terday that police had used threats to make him talks about his suspected role in a bomb attack, ot of Mr Michael Smith, 35, testifying for the first timer in a trial that began on October 12, said policer interrogators-had threatened that he would "disapis pear", unless he confessed
Mr. Smith said he was arrested by dozens" of policemen and soldiers on January 19 at a Chakari farm, about 120 km south-west of Harare, along with his wife and the farm owner. They were driven to Bulawayo for interrogation
After five minutes of questioning police mem bers began to make threats - that it's possible for me to disappear and never be seen again," Mr smith, who is also charged with causing an explo? sion, said.
He testified that he had been kept in handcuffsth and leg irons and had been made to sit on the floor 2 s during questioning.
Mr Smith and his co-accused, Mr Kevin Woods, 36 andMr Phillip Conjwayo, a 54 year-old black former plainclothes policeman, are alleged to havee bombed a house in Bulawayo, killing one person) last January.
The hearing continues today, - Sapa-Reuter

Cenotaph - latest Zimbabwe battleground arms prepare to honour the dead of two world wars this month, an assertion that Hitler and the King of England "were not much different" has sparked a war of words in Zimbabwe.
The battlefield has been the letters page of the national daily, The Herald, and the weapon favoured by both sides has been indignation as blacks and whites engaged in one of their periodic public skirmishes.
The opening volley was fired by a black reader who said he was sickened by the cenotaph in Harare's central park with its plaque which reads: "We fought and died for our King."
"To the African, Hitler and the king were not much different. What Hitler intended to do to Europe is what the king intended to do, and did do, to Africa - only with different methods," he wrote.
The counter-attacks were not long in coming and words like "freedom" and "enslavement" flew like shrapnel, along with a wistful reference by an elderly white lady to "happy, loyal servants".
The former Rhodesian prime minister and wartime fighter-pilot Ian Smith, who said he had given up writing letters to The Herald because they were never published, had this to say: "Does he mean that our bringing Christian civilisation to this country is the same thing Hitler wanted to do to Europe?"

SATURDAY STAR'S AFRICA/2b2 NEWS SERVICE

Dismissing the writer as "one of our communist comrades", he said: "I think most of the people are proud of our history and what we have done for freedom."
Mr Smith said he planned to attend the wreath-laying ceremony at the cenotaph on Remembrance Sunday, if possible.
The ceremony, conducted on the same day at similar monuments in allied countries around the world, has been held annually in Zimbabwe throughout the eight years of independence.
"We never have any hassle," said a former army commander, who did not wish to be named. He said that up to 300 servicemen had marched to the cenotaph in 1980, the first year of independence but numbers had been dwindling.
"Some have left and some are just getting too old. But there are always representatives from some of the diplomatic missions here - the Americans, the British and the French, for example - and last year we had a total of about 150 people at the ceremony.'
Since 1980, however, blacks who had fought in the Rhodestan African Rifles ând the King's African Rifles had stopped attending, he added.

In the early days of independence a number of monuments erected during white rule were removed from public places. A statue of Rhodesia's founder, Cecil Rhodes, was taken from the centre of one of Harare's main streets to the back yard of the national archives.
A plaque commemorating Rhodesians "murdered by communist terrorists" during the guerilla war was removed from a country town.

But in 1984 the government rejected a: Harare City Council proposal to remove the cenotaph. It said the monument was erected in memory of those who died fighting fascism, a cause which the government supported.
The letters to The Herald have shown, however, that feelings still run high on the issue. The local news agency, Ziana, said an analysis of the correspondence showed "the divisions which lie below the surface between the formerly oppressed and the former oppressors in Zimbabwe".
It said that while whites and blacks got on with each other superficially in their: day-to-day lives "it is perhaps too much to imagine that the prejudices and attitudes of the past can disappear overnight".

SATURDAY STAR AFRICA NEWS SERVICE

HARARE - A Bulawayoborn mann accused of murder in connection with a car-bomb attack on an African National Congress house in Bulawayo in January, told the Hight Cour yesterday he had served in the South African Defence Force.

Under cross-examination, Mr Michael Anthony Smith (34) refused to say which unit he had served in for a year from June 1980 maintaining this; would be a breach of South Africa's Official Secrets Act

Mr Smith said if he had a choice his allegiance would lie with' South Africa He could not feel loyalty to the Zimbabwe government, he said, as it had allowed the massacre of Matabele people: Wy joining the SADFlon one year contract, he believed he had given his allegiänce to South Africa:

Mr Smith said that in Rhodesia he häd served as"a regular soldier in the Special Air Service for three © In Livingstone, Zambia, a man described as a Soúth African intelligence officer was yesterday jailed for six years for spying on behalf of Pretoria. $\%$, 18 , ariThe court heard that Kennedy Simvua, South African-governed Caprivi Strip, had been found early this year near Livingstone with ex plosives. Associated Aress,

Zim accused ${ }^{\text {qu/k }}$ to lure man from SA

1-7. Own Correspondent

HARARE. - Agents of the Zimbabwean Central Intelligence Organisation offered alleged South African saboteur Michael Smith a place in their ranks or in the Zimbabwe army if he could trick Christopher Bawden into returning from South Africa, it was claimed in the High Court yesterday. Mr Smith, 34, said he was asked under interrogation in January to send a message to South Africa "in an attempt to get Christopher Bawden back to Zimbabwe". He declined, he said. The Zimbabwean authorities allege that Mr Bawden detonated the January 11 remote-control car bomb that killed a Zambian driver, Mr Amon Obert Mwanza, at an African National Congress house in Trenance, Bulawayo.
Mr Smith is alleged to have been with Mr Bawden at the scene.
Mr Smith has pleaded not guilty to murder along with his co-accused Mr Kevin Woods, 35, and Mr Phillip Conjwayo, 54.

| иеәу јеэ!sпи ә!!м L ue pueqsnu polixa |  | uroujk ymos jo poșöduros uoṇestues.an jemplno paseq |  zze! yons yium pay.ом suч   |
| :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: |
|  | әyeu of әлеч गdoəd suezu it                        uo ofrmejng u! suado ${ }^{\text {II }}$  sis!ure suoue    s.dnoдs วчı јо э!    uoitonpoud is.ly stly si emng      ппоч    sч! u! sןвuо!!еи иеәмqеqu!Z sвч    -  stue sumarogrod s, epujv yinos     ou 'ע!         |  nous $\cap V V S$     рәл      - seoso  ue roj popeu!uou sem әч чэччм       әч   bu!n "inos jo ssonsoud ysitu әul 'eqoyen uridiw 'epoyasen   Kəjueis 'simey not se yons sıs!ıге Кq рәрюоәәл иәәq әлрч двчи sfuos pasurare pue posoduios suy fued s!̣ ioj snquile,  H!D ubinaq! s,uosyone prepin uo כoma   opnpu! suppos luวood juotu doy slooy 'solas uo!s!nopo depndod      IHOHS37 OSIGUHL KG | 108ึ    HOM S! eरuacuas snyduro   pue purqsny oчt 'osineo JO 10Kg элаия  pue !ustusew oquyl "sexipit      - (ә10אrg jo osip) nsurpyen вквчуен "(оракеg wonj   вquayi ane sur!p!snut oql  nynsew Kypoogl pur auress piaba rexuours "snudiej ןeoisnut jepluossy pue jemyod  e se poq!十osop 'uo!pmpos  окемiplng  pue aresen ul baing "uollonpord 151 y Sl! soiotuox 'Kouos V     ие!iomion จчi шогj dipy yin   ue 'ponun solsthy VS ril  sчoэм мој     pue sulsulic oulos jo iusas NV |

Mugabe promises action (3)  HARARE - Reacting to mounting criticism of Zimbabwe's leadership, President Robert Mugabe pledged yesterday a crackdown on official cor ruption and more jobs to ease record unemployment.Mr Mugabe, addressing a rally of 20000 supporters at Chitungwiza near Harare, said that a popular politician who had been fired from the ruling party for attacking corrupt and greedy eaders would now be allowed to appeal.

But, speaking generally about criticism against his government, Mr Mugabe said: "There is a lot of gossiping going on these days. Please stop it. We cannot run a country by rumour and gossip.":
In the past five weeks university lecturers and students, labour leaders, journalists and a founder: of the party have publicly spoken out against toplevel corruption.
The politician who is to appeal is former party secretary-general Mr Edgar Tekere, who helped Mr Mugabe formºrts Zanu (PF) in 1964.

ㄴth
He was fired from the 90 -member र $^{\dagger}$ : central committee after he claimedtrit many leaders were stashing money: away in Swiss bank accounts.
The committee said he was diss missed when he could produce no proof to back up his allegations. : ifsio
Many Zimbabweans have contrasted to Mr Tekere's sacking with the continued ${ }^{\text {To }}$ presence in party and governimentiof ${ }^{*}$ Ms Shuvai Mahofa, deputy Political Af-rent fairs Minister, despite efforts by herifli; constituents in southern Zimbabwe torim kick her out.

St 3
Ms Mahofa was recently acquitted of a charge of arson after the house of hef lover's girlfriend was burned down.

On unemployment, the president said his government had earmarked* money to open new factories that would create.jobs.

HARARE - ' A white Zimbabwean accused of a a bomb $S 1 \infty$ attack on a house used by the ANC refused yesterday to 8 D say where he was at the time of the blast. "Are you prepared to say where you were on the Michaeling Smithary who with two other men, is facing "I am not" Smith replied. He also refused to say whether he had any knowledge of the Bulawayo house where the car bomb went off and killed its driver. Smith said earlier he owed allegiance to SA rather

Britain pleads for release of detainees held in Zimbabwe

HARARE - The British govern ment has asked Zimbabwe to free two British subjects who have been detained for more than a year despite a tribunal recommen dation that they be released

The fate of Mr Ernest LewisWalker (55) and Mrs Patricia Brown (50) was taken up with Foreign Minister Dr Nathan Shamuyarira by the British Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mrs Lynda Chalker.

She is on a three-day visit to Zimbabwe and is understood to have pressed for the release in the interests of relations between London and Harare and in the interests of Zimbabwe's international reputation.
Mr Lewis- Walker, Mrs Brown and four other people who hold Zimbabwean, Canadian or . Irish citizenship were arrested in Sep tember last year on allegations of spying for South Africa
In August, charges against them were withdrawn because of insuf-

The Star's Africa News Service
ficient evidence but they remained in custody under detention orders. The tribunal, which reviews ail: detention orders periodically, recommended the release of Mr Lewis-Walker and Mrs Brown but President Robert Mugabe ordered that they remain in detention.
He has the power to do this under the state of emergency:

The six were originally alleged by the State to have spied on the homes and vehicles of ANC and PAC officials and South Africanexiles living in Zimbabwe for Pretoria's secürity service.

In addition to Mr Lewis-Walker and Mrs Brown, the State is holding MrIvor Harding (45) and his son, Clive (20), who are Zimbabwe citizens, Mr Jeffrey Mee (45), an Mrish national and Mr Richard Lábonn (51), a Cânadian:

Video used at Harare 36 murder trial

is expected in Zimbabwe's courts in January, when President Robert Mugabe plans to bring former British paratrooper Mr Dennis Charles "Sammy" Beahan to trial on allegations of leading the abortive attempt to rescue five other suspected South African agents.
At a special hearing at Harare central prison yesterday, magistrate Mr Ephraim Chiwara ordered Mr Beahan 40, to appear in the high court on January 23.
Mr Robin Hartley, for the defence, gave notice that an exception would be lodged against the jurisdiction of the Zimbabwean courts to try Mr Beahan, because he was allegedly extradicted illegally from Botswana to Zimbabwe on July 2.

Whoever wins the high court action, the losing side is certain to appeal to the supreme court, causing a delay of up to a year in finalising the case.
Mr Beahan, who served in the Rhodesian forces after leaving the British army, faces the death penalty if convicted under Zimbabwe's Law and Order Maintenance Act of conspiring to commit an act of terrorism.
He is alleged to have been the leader of the South African commando unit which planned to ambush a prison convoy on June 30, as Mr Barry Bawden, Mr Guy Bawden, Mr Kevin Woods, Mr Philip Conjwayo and Mr Michael Smith were being taken from Chikurubi to Harare magistate's court for a routine remand hearing.
Mr Beahan and a companion - believed to have been a Mr Ian Maguire - tried to enter Zimbabwe from Botswana on June 26 but reportedly jumped into the Zambezi river to escape arrest when border officials became suspicious. Mr Beahan was recaptured in Botswana two days later.

Air Lieutenant Gary Kane stole a helicopter from New Sarum Air Base on June 30 and fled to South Africa when the rescue ambush went awry.
Defence lawyers say Mr Bea han was tortured in Botswana before being handed over, illegally, to the Zimbabweans. Zimbabwe and Botswana have no formal extradition treaty.
Legal sources say the prosecution may cite Roman Dutch law precedents from South African courts, which went ahead with the trial of African National Congress supporters snatched from Swaziland by the South African Police
A representative of the British high commission was in court when Mr Beahan was brought in yesterday, in leg irons and handcuffed to two warders. Mr Beahan was given letters from his sister in Eng land.
Mr Beahan's financee, Miss Barbel Fabineck, lives in Johannesburg but the authorities have refused to relax restrictions allowing her to see him for only half an hour on a once-a-month visit.
At another hearing yesterday at Chikurubi prison, Mr Chiwara told Mr Guy Thomas Bawden, 32, that he would be brought to trial on July 24, on allegations of involvement in the 1987 car bomb explosion outside an Avondale, Harare, supermarket, which critically injured anti-apartheid activist Mr Jeremy Brickhill.
Mr Bawden's elder brother, Mr Christopher Bawden, alleg. edly detonated the January 11 car bomb in Trenance, Bulawayo, before fleeing to South Africa.

0

GARARE - The trial of three men accused ofinnol-Yement in the bombing of an ANC house in Butawayo
Winganuarytook an unusual turn yesterday with the discovery of a second steering wheel in the wreckage Of the booby-trapped vehicle Whe car was blown up at the house killing the driv er, and the Wreckage in an open packing case has been lying in the courtyard outside the High Court. Mr Kevin Woods Mr Michael Smith and Mr Phil lip conjwayo have pleaded not guilty to charges of terrorism andsabotage Refter M g ustice sandura nspected the two have to re-opents case to explain the second steering wheel, The Stars frica News Service wow

New attitudes seen

in southern Africa

Minister of state for For eign, Affairs, Mrs, Lynda Chalker, told a news conference here yesterday that during he cevist to Zimbabwe'she had seena change sin attitudes towards. the means of achieving peade sin south-en Africa: 362.

- Many \% Zimbabweans
now accepted that forc ing the South African Governmentinto a corner in a bid to end apartheid was not productive
News Service

. military intelligence tage for SA

Laughter
Kit. Kevin John Woods, 35, a retired Intelligence Organisation, and $\because$ Michael Smith, 34 , are due to appear dsintheir second trial on November 14, He their appearance before Mr Jusinntirdendura on charges that they Mwanza, allegedly killed by the ert at:bbinb on January 11 outside an ANC y: house in Trenance, Bulawayo, has inot ended maceleading not guilty with Woods and Smith is a retired SA-born ser-Nant-major in the Rhodesian Police Wo branch, Philip Conjwayo, 54. mouth to hias seen to cover his when a key State witness, Senior Assistant Commissioner James Ndove, gressive to ano in been ag. He is alleged to have threatened and his family He admitted 10 and five, were briefly taken into custody with their parents. The case continues today.

| An? |  |
| :---: | :---: |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |

Change lending policy is MUTARE, Zimbabwe-developmen $8 \%$ - The senior minister in the president's office, Mr Joshua Nkomo, said yesterday that the lending policies of financial institutions should be changed so young people without property could borrow and participate in meaningful development projects, the Ziana news agency reports.
He said the securities such institutions required at present had hampered the implementation of many essential
"The legislation has got to be changed now.
"This cannot be done now because financial institutions need collateral .in the form of immovable property and this is impossible for youths because they do not have such kind of property. So we must create institutions which will enable youths, even before they acquire property, to acquire initial capital," he said. - Sapa.

Whirter

HARARE. - A senior Zimbabwean police officer denied allegations yesterday that he had threat:ened a suspected car bomber and witnessed an: assault on another by a police detective.
Senior Assistant Commissioner Phillip Mhike wás ${ }^{*}$ testifying at the High Court here at the trial of three Zimbabweans facing charges of murder, terrorism and causing an explosion.
The three, Mr Kevin Woods, Mr Phillip Conjwayo and Mr Michael Smith, are charged in connection with a January 11 car bomb attack against the African National Congress in Bulawayo in which the driver of the car, an unemployed Zambian, was killed.
Mr Mhike denied allegations by Mr Woods that ${ }^{\text {? }}$ Soon after his arrest on January 17 Mr Mhike rushed up to Mr Woods and said: "You are dead".

Assault denied

The defence case has been based largely on challenging the validity of incriminating statements the three men made after their arrest.
Mr Mhike denied allegations that he witnessed an assault on Mr Conjwayo, a former policeman, by another, detective on January 16.
The court earlier watched a police video tape which showed Mr Smith describing to detectives how he and Mr Christopher "Kit" Bawden - who subsequently escaped - heard the explosion of the car bomb.
Mr Smith said in the video that it was detonated by Mr Bawden by remote control
Another trial involving Mr Woods, Mr Smith and Mr Guy Thomas Bawden, which was due to start in the High Court in Harare on Monday, was postponed yesterday until March 20 next year, according to the Zimbábwean national news agency, Ziana.
Lasthweek, Mr Woods and Mr Smith, who were to face their second trial on Monday, this time on allegations involving the bombing in Harare of the Avondale shopping complex on cotober 13 läst year, applied to the High Court for postponement of the trial. - Sapa

Lekere is still intent on Mugabe party clean-up

 HE hands were steady and the eyes clear. In his modest home in the eastern border town of Mutare, Edgar Tekere presented a different appearance from the unkempt, shambling figure of a few years ago.

Zimbabwe's best-known maverick seems to be back in form and ready to resume the attack.

In an interview he made it clear he was still intent on his self-appointed task of cleaning up President Robert Mugabe's ruling Zanu (PF) party, of which he was once secretary-general and from which he was sacked for his biting attacks on corruption and inept leadership.
"It's business as usual: I'll fight them tooth and claw, legally and politically," he said.
Mr Tekere, now 51 , has returned to the offensive at a time when President Mugabe faces growing public dissatisfaction with his party and increasing criticism of alleged corruption within it. The dissent surfaced recently in clashes between police and university students in Harare.

Mr Tekere's dismissal seems to have made him only more outspoken in his attacks on President Mugabe.
"It's a major disappointment that Comrade Mugabe has failed to prove he is able to lead this country, government and party," he said.
The main battle ahead, Mr Tekere be lieves, is for control of the new Zanu, which is scheduled to be born next August from the merger of Mr Mugabe's dominant party and Mr Joshua Nkomo's Zapu.
Mr Tekere plans to contest elections for posts in the unified party. "I am very keen to contest any position," he said. "The sky is the limit."

The planned creation of the new party has taken some of the sting out of $\mathrm{Mr} \mathrm{Te}-$ kere's expulsion from the party he helped to form 25 years ago to fight the Rhodesian government:
He pointed out that he had been expelled from the old Zanu and not from the new party, which could take' such action only af ter the August congress. Mr, Tekere already has a membership card for the new party.
"It is the party of yesterday from which I was expelled," he said. "I am confortably in the party of today."
For that reason, Mr Tekere has dismissed talk of forming his own party based in his political stronghold, the eastern province of Manicaland, to challenge Zanu: "Form a new party to do what?" he asked. "I would be guility of disrupting the unity process."
Immediately after his expulsion, Mr Te keresaid he remained dedicated to the principles of Zanu.
"Ihave yet to know anyone in the world Who can think of better principles to runa country , But many top government off:
cials, he said, "are deviating from those principles".
Mr Tekere admitted there was a danger that once the formation of the new Zanu was completed the current leadership would organise a similar expulsion.
"There is a real risk here that the new party is going to be flooded with the same corrupt leadership," he said. "The corrupt are finding comfort under (Mugabe's) umbrella."

The expulsion came, Mr Tekere said, because of his public criticism of alleged corruption in the party leadership and his strong opposition to President Mugabe's proposal to legislate for a one-party state in 1990.
"I ought to have complained more"quietly behind the closed doors of the central committee," he said.
The clear message the central committe gave him, he said, was: "Thou shalt not raise a finger against corruption in government. Thou shalt not complain against trends leading Zimbabwe to dictatorship."
The party's action against Mr Tekere, the police crackdown on university protests against corruption on September 30 and Zanu's plans for a one-party state spelt trouble for the future of democracy in Zimbabwe, he said.
"Once established, the dictatorship chews up in its first month all those who were busiest to create it," he said. "Those people are in too heavy gear to go in reverse."
As a firebrand politician, Mr Tekere has few equals in Zimbabwe. He has a reputation as a passionate man, given to wild words and deeds. But there is no questioning his popularity with the people.

From the very start of Zimbabwe's days as an independent country; Mr Tekere was in trouble.
Within a year of independence he had been dropped from the Cabinet after the sensational case in which he was acquitted on a split decision of murdering a white farmer.
From then on it seemed to be downiill for him. He was more than once seen in public in rumpled clothes and bleary-eyed. wis dismissal as party secretary-general was followed by his sacking from the post of provincial chairman in his home district
But his popularity was unaffected and the people chose him as chairman again even though he was out of the country He tolda court in a victorious libel action that he had been swimming in the Black Sea and not be ing dried out because of his drinking as al leged.
However, the party headquarters would have none of it and once again he was removed from the post
In recent months, however, the self-styled "political gangster" has pulled himself together and today presents a picture of a man in control again.

The Star's Africa News Service
HARARE - Judgment is expected to be given on Friday in the trial of three alleged South African agents accused of murder over a carbomb attack on an ANC house in Bulawayo earlier this year.
in The defence and the prosecution yesterday completed their submissions to the Judge-President, Mr Justice Sandura, and two assessors as the trial entexted its sixth week.
Mr Kevin Woods (35), Mr Michael Smith (34) and Mr Phillip Conjwayo (54) face the death penalty if convicted on the main charge or the alternative charges of contravening the Law and Order (Maintenance) Act dealing with explosions and acts of terrorism.
Mr Defence counsel Mr Michael O'Meara submitted yesterday that apart from statements made by the accaused after their arrest, there was "no evidence whatsoever" against Mr Woods and Mr Smith on any of the charges, and that even if the statemints were accepted there was no evidefence that any of the three committed murder.
fence has challenged the admissibility of statements made by the three men, arguing that they were not made freely and voluntarily.
Mr Woods admitted in his statements that he had been recruited by a South African Special Branch officer in 1983 and confessed to knowing of a plan to attack a house in which ANC members were living in Bulawayo.
Mr Smith admitted being in a controll car nearby when the car-bömb was detonated, but denied pushing the button

Mr Conjwayo admitted buying the car that was used in the attack and recruiting a driver, but denied knowledge of the car-bomb plan. The driver was blown to pieces in the blast shortly after arriving outside the house, and several ANC members were injured.
The defence challenges the admissibility of the statements on the grounds of undue influence and the lack of proper access to lawyers.
Tight security has been maintained throughout the trial, with the accused escorted from Chikurubi maximum security prison to Harare's High Court by a convoy of armoured vehicles.

'Naive' spy's sentence slashed to 12 vears Argus Africa News Service HARARE. - South Africa's "naive" spy, Odile Harington has had her "vicious" sentence of 25 years' jail cut by more than half on appeal.  The Supreme Court found that Harington's torture at the hands of Zimbabwe's Central Intelligence Organisation  trade, traffook and  links with Zimbabwe.  He described Harington as naive, a word first used by her defence counsel, who said her actions were not those of a skilled spy.  SUSPICIOUS  Evidence was that Haring-

 should have been taken into account when assessing sentence and that the trial judge "did not apply his mind judiciously to the evidence before him".Harington, 28, was convicted last November of contravening Zimbabwe's Official Secrets Act after admitting penetrating the ANC as a pseudo-refugee.

"ENEMY"

Her sentence was reduced to 12 years, but she lost an appeal against her conviction on the grounds that South Africa is not an "enemy" of Zimbabwe in terms of the Act.
Zimbabwe's Chief Justice, Mr'Justice Dubutshena, said South Africa was a "potential enemy", even though it had ton, while living in an ANC house, handed over to a Zimbabwean police guard an envelope to be mailed to South Africa. The envelope contained names of ANC officials, photographs and diagrams. The guard became suspicious and turned it over to his superiors.
At her trial Harington said that after her arrest she had been beaten, starved, halfdrowned and degraded by being forced to sit nude in front of five male interrogators.
Upholding the conviction, Mr Justice Dubutshena said that though Harington's offence was serious because she realised people could be killed as a result of her actions, the 25 -year sentence was "severe and vicious"
The Supreme Court
wyesterday found that 28
Ture at the hands of zomtbabwe Central Intelit Gence Organisation atter her arrest should have been taken into account
When assessing sentence and that the trial judge did not apply, his mind
* judicously to the evidence before $h i m$ Harington was convicted of contravening Zim babwe's Official sécrets Actin Noyember las year after admitting pen $\checkmark$ etrating the African Na
- tional Congress as psuedo-refuge to supply information about the or ganisation to her control lérs in South Africa
Her sentence was reduced to 12 years, but the appeal against her conviction on the grounds that South Africa was not an "enemy" of Zimbabwe
in terms of the Act failed.
Zimbabwe's Chief Jus tice? Mr Justice Dumbut shena, said South Africa was a potential enemy'
- even though it had trade, transport and consular links with Zimbabwe.
He said the "bombing of houses and the killing of people by: South African agents in Zimbabwe is a notorious fact" and noted that Harington had said candidly she wanted
the ANC destroyed.
"But," he said, it makes no difference to the court whether she is a staunch supporter of apartheid or an avowed liberal Her crime is not her support of apartheid."
He described Haring-Yton as naive, a, word first donas an ber detence cousedaby her, der her wactions sel who said heractions skilied spy. Those,

Chief Justice cuts spy's jail term by half

Own Correspondent

HARARE. - Zimbabwe's Chief Justice yesterday slashed the 25 year jail sentence on self-confessed South African spy Odile Harington to 12 years and de scribed her treatment at her High Court trial last year as "vicious".
Chief Justice Enoch Dumbutshena said Mr Justice Wilson Sandura mis directed himself by failing to take into account Harington's "gory" and un controverted evidence of torture by agents of the Zimbabwean Central Intelligence Organisation and the African National Congress.
Inan appeal judgment supported by Ghanaian-born Mr Justice Roger Korsah"änd Mr Justice Nicholas McNally, Chief Justice Dumbutshena said Mr Sandura had made "irrelevant" refer ences to his desire to have Harington shot by firing squad, which had distracted him from the need to take her torture ordeal in mitigation of sentence.
Mr Dumbutshena said no attempt had been made to challenge Haring-on's "stories of torture that do injustice to human decency and morality".
During her ten months in detention she was repeatedly flogged with hose pipe and wire flex, starved, subjected to water torture by having her head immensed in a bag, kept in solitary confinement, and sexually assaulted. She twice attempted suicide before being brought to trial last November

The chief justice noted Harington's evidence that she was made to strip before five men, one of whom spat at her private parts.
At her trial, Harington testified that she ceased menstruating for six months as a result of the shock.
"The presence of a member of the ANC during the interrogations and torture sessions was, to say thée lëast, improper."
Mr Dumbutshena said the country owed a debt of gratitutde to the police officer who had arrested Harington after she handed him a parcel of intel ligence information to post. He was guarding the ANC house where she was staying, and had opened the badly sealed envelope.

THE FALL  AND FALL OF EDGAR TEKERE

For years Edgar Tekere has been angering political colleagues in Zimbabwe with his controversial comments. His outspokeness and behaviour cost him a top government job, then a fop post in the party. Now, reports CHARLES RUKUNI, another outburst has pushed him out of the party aftogether.
${ }^{*}{ }^{2}$ BULAWAYO. - Politicians don't come more controversial than Edgar Tekere. And there is n indication that his expulsion form Zimbabwe's ntling party will quieten him down.
每 A day after his latest outburst finally brough dof on his head the wrath of the central committee of the ZANU (PF) party, Teker announced that he would continue attacking leaders engaged in cormption and dictatorship.
On October 19 front-page headlines in the Bulawayo Chronicle screamed; No in Zimbabwe...Leaders are comuph...I fear a dictatorship...Tekere hits out."
For that speech, Tekere, once number itree in the party hierarchy, was expelled for making "unfounded and unjusified criticism" of some of his colleagues in senior positions.
Party information and publicity sccretary Nathan Shamuyariza said Tekere had been expelled for failing to adhere to parly proocol. party publicly but in the party's supreme body. party publicly but in President Robert Mugabe expressed similar sentiments when he said a true central committee member accepted its authority and recognised its procedures and modalitics: "He identifics with the rest of the team and toes the line."

Murder probe
Tekere is no stranger to controversy, not only because of his views but also because of behaviour sometimes considered offensive. In 1981 he was sacked from the govemment a month after being acquitted of the murder of whice Yas Zimbabwe's first Minister of Manpower Planing and Development because he needed a rest
Seven months later he was fired as the parly's secretary-general.
He expressed views against a one-party state on more than five occasions since independence In 1980 he was quoled as saying: I do no believe Zimbabwe is the sort of country for one-party state. Opposition must be urc. must be tolerated, Apart from Ia, our ardent are too critical and volatile and themiselves.
belider in was in the political doldnems for two years before being elected in absentia in 1983 as ZANU (PF) chairman for Manicaland Province. At the time he was receiving medical treatment in Romania.

Ever since he has been making a lot of pcople very uncomfortable.
In 1984 he told the Catiolic monthly, Moto that there should be a leadership purge to wee out those he termed "hijackers of the revolution who had infilirated the party.

Same sentiment
He began to speak about the one-party state, but his time said it should be achieved through orgonisational efficiency rather than through legislation.
He accused those calling for a one-party stase of seeking to protect their party positions.
He repeated the same sentiments when ZANU (PF) held its second congress at which it adopted a leadership code of conduct.
His continued cricism finally led to his suspension as Manicaland char lo lambast the eadership.
In July he not only spoke against a one-party state but said Mugabe was being ill-advised. He added insult to injury in October when he said: "Democracy in Zimbabwe is in the intensive care unit and the leadership has decayed before it is dead. The integration of Io twa parties yes, but one-party state no ...I I do type of govemment here. In fact, I fear that we type of governmentherde, the creation- of a dictatorship."
It was the final straw. But probably not the final word. - GEMINI NEWS

Smith: more freedom in SA

HARARE--Former Rhodesian leader Mr Ian'Smith, back from his anti-sanc-tions-against-South Africa tour. of Britain and the United States, claimed yesterday there was more freedom in South Africa than in Zimbabwe, Ziana, the national news agency, reports.

Referring to a call by'a Minister of State to bar him from returning. to Zimbabwe in .view of his pro-South African commentsabroad, he said the South African Government ahad not suggested similar action against its critics.
"That clearly indicates there ismore freedom in South Africa than in Zimbabwe," he salid:
He defended detentions in South Africa, saying the country was at war:

He also defended South African sponsorship of the MNR in Mozambique $: s$ Acknowledging that his Rhodesian regime 'played' a part in establishing the MNR ; he said: '"They set themselves up, We encouraged them, because we had a common enemy. South Africa hà a common enemy. What would you have done under the circum-

Asked why he did not leave Zimbabwétand move to South Africa, he said it was a matter of principle, He was born here and would like to try to change the situation here, he said. Asked whether he would leave if he : was allowed to take his assets with him; he said: "I haven't facediup to that one." - Sapa.

Last hopeof avoiding the gallows
HARARE-Thetast hope Kevin Woods, Mi chael Smith and Philip Conjwayo have of escap. ing the gallows lies in Zimbabwe skupreme Cout where their appeal will be heardnext year
There was little doubbt that a death sentence Wuld mark the close of Zumbabwe's biggest spy case in which South Africa was implicated Con viction was never the issue, nor was the sentence, it would inevitably bring.
CAR BOMB
Star211188
The three, formerly members of the Rhode. sian security forces, were convicted for killing Mr Obert Mwanza, a Zam bian driver hired from a local employmentagen cy, on January $11 . \mathrm{He}$ Was driving around the back of an ANC house in Bulawayo when a bomb planted in the car went off, killing him and njuring an ANC member
Just before sentate Was passed on Ardays Woods said Smithsand hee had not meant to cause any harm to Zimbabtyo:
They had nevet men to kill Mr Mwanza, Woods said, and Mr Jus tice Sandura agreed He and his two assessors rejected the contention by the State that the plan was tomurder Mr Mwan za and instead, found them guilty of "constructive intent to kill"
tive intent to kill",

HARARE - Zimbabwe's Chief Justice, Mr Justice Enoch Dumbutshena, who last week cut South African spy Odile Harington's 25 -year jail sentence by half, has an impressive record of fearless independence of the executive.
The 68 -year-old man whom friends describe as a warm, gentle person, made history when he became the first black lawyer in the country to be appointed a judge soon after President Robert Mugabe's government came to power in 1980. Since then he has demonstrated a respect for the legal process and the rights of the individual which has on occasion provoked a furious response from government.

As Judge President in 1983 he presided over the celebrated trial of six air force officers charged with sabotage after the destruction of aircraft on the ground at the Thornhill Air Base. He acquitted the men, refusing to accept their "confessions" as evidence after hearing that they had been denied access to lawyers and tortured. The then Home Affairs Minis ter, Dr Herbert Ushewokunze, reacted angrily to the judgment and the state appealed against the decision, but it was upheld.

Unchallenged evidence of horrific torture also played a part in Mr Justice Dumbutshena's reduction of Odile Harington's sentence, which he described as "vicious".

CALLED TO THE BAR
In his judgment he described Harington, who spied on the ANC in Harare, as "naive" and said that "the punishment must fit the criminal as well as the crime".
The former teacher and journalist, who was called to the bar in England in 1963, was appointed Chief Justice shortly after the air force trial.
Two years later he figured in Iawyers and tortured The then Home Affairs Minis ter, Dr Herbert Ushewokunze, reacted angrily to the judg ment and the state appealed against the decision, but it was upheld.

Unchallenged evidence of horrific torture also played a part in Mr Justice Dumbutshena's reduction of Odile Harington's sentence, which he described as "vicious".

CALLED TO THE BAR

In his judgment he described Harington, who spied on the ANC in Harare, as "naive" and said that "the punishment must fit the criminal as well as the crime".
The former teacher and journalist, who was called to the bar in England in 1963, was appointed Chief Justice shortly after the air force trial.
Two years later he figured in another case that contained the seeds of potential confrontation between the judiciary and the executive. In a supreme court judgment declaring unlawful the detention of two alleged South African spies, Mr John Austin and Mr Kenneth Harper, he warned that law and order would break down if orders of the courts were ignored - a reference to the fact that the men were redetained three times after being freed by the courts.
They were eventually released after nearly two years in detention.
Mr Justice Dumbutshena has said the nation's integrity depends on that of the judiciary and has spoken of the need for judges to be free and independent in thought and to work without fear.
One prominent Harare lawyer who declined to be named said that while Zimbabwe's present high court judges were not generally admired, the supreme court, under Mr Justice Dumbutshena's leadership, was still highly regarded.
"You can be confident that the supreme court won't be swayed by what outcome it thinks the government would like to see in any particular case," he said.
Last year, Mr Justice Dumbutshena, in a speech to businessmen, condemned Zimbabwe's labour laws, saying they forced employers to keep on lazy, unproductive workers.
The Zimbabwe Congress of Trade Unions called for his resignation and his comments were sharply criticised by the then Minister of Labour, Mr Frederick Shava. But the outspoken Chief Justice, who is married with five children, remains in place and uncowed.
 over on site of Zimbabwe 362 massacrezz य4 48
The Star's Africa News Service
BULAWAYO One year after 16 members of the Chistian Community, of Reconciliation were hacked to death by dissidents on New Adams and oliye Tree farmsteads, in the Esijodini area outside Bulwayo, squatters have taken possession, of the farms.
A close friend of many mem. bers of the community, Mr Roy Mccrinde, said this week that the squatters who had threatened and harassed the community workers, and who were believed to have alerted a dissident gang to carry out the atro cities, have been told they may remain on the land
One week they were told by the provincial authorities that they had to leave The following week they were officially in formed they could remain on the farm. The police stili main taina presence at Olive Tree;; he said.
The shell of the house, which was, set alight following the massacre of $16 \mathrm{men}, \mathrm{womenand}$ children, is still standing but there has been no rebuilding programme.
It would require a great deal of money to rebivild and these. funds have not been fortheom. ing, said Mr McCrindée, Followng the killinges med morial fund was established to enswresthat the work of the community continued, The re sponse as poory There have beeno o vecuits' into commuinty Hife Mr Mecrindés said Whed dissidents, tresponsible, were ail pardoned understhe gneratamnesty ageément ana nouced wh: President Robety Mugate yh a priland somed of thent we widerstodd to tave banded o oether 1 n e establishing a smal gold mine in Matabele

THE award-winning anti-apartheid film, A World Apart, which is already on circuit in Europe and the US, was launched in Bulawayo yesterday; thed national news agency, Ziana, reports.

The film was shot in Bulawayo and many city residents participated as 8 N actors and actresses. The shooting and of yesterday's launch was sponsored by a 6 local multi-national company.

Company spokesman, Mr Saul Ndlovu, said the gala premiere, which simultaneously took place with one in Harare, signified the launching of the film in Zimbabwe. - Sapa.

Zimbabwe fences in war refugees

From JOHN MORRISON of Reuters at Nyangombe camp in Zimbabwe

ZIMBABWE, worried about a potential security threat from Mozambique rebels, is fencing in thousands of Mozambican refugees behind barbed wire.
Gangs of workmen are erecting a 2,5 -metre high fence around Nyangombe camp, home to 13000 of the 71000 Mozambicans registered as refugees in Zimbabwe.
Similar fencing has been completed at Nyamatikiti camp, but it is not clear if the two largest camps, Mazoe Bridge and Tongogara, will also be surrounded by barbed wire.
The move, described as a Cabinet decision, has disturbed both the local representatives of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the refugees themselves.
The paradox is that inside the wire the camps are well run with health care, food, training and schools which would be the envy of refugees elsewhere in Africa or of the average peasant inside Mozambique.
When two busloads of visitors arrived from a World Council of Churches meeting in Harare, some refugees complained that the fence was turning the camp into a prison.
"If we go outside without permission they beat us," one man said through an interpreter. The camp administrator told his guests that the fence was to protect the refugees against attacks by the Mozambican National Resistance (MNR).
The camp is 100 km from the Mozambican border.
The UNHCR representative in Zimbabwe, Godfrey Sabeti, said he had formally requested an explanation from the Zimbabwe government for the barbed wire. "We have indicated at every stage we are not in favour of the fence," he said.

"We feel it is a measure limiting freedom of movement," he added, though he expressed understanding for Zimbabwe's security worries and described the overall running of the camps as impressive.
Since 1987 MNR rebels have been accused of crossing into eastern Zimbabwe, killing and abducting dozens of villagers and stealing food and other supplies.

The government believes the MNR gunmen have been mingling with tens of thousands of Mozambicans who have settled in the eastern districts of Zimbabwe, many as casual farm workers. The result has been a major security clampdown since 1987 which has reduced, but not eliminated, rebel attacks along the border.
Some refugees say they were rounded up from farms and placed in the camps against their will. Mr Sabeti confirms this but says Zimbabwe has in fact been generous in granting refugee status to people who may otherwise have been sent home as illegal immigrants.
Meanwhile, the number in the camps goes on rising, though not as fast as in 1987. Altogether about a million Mozambicans have fled to neighbouring countries, including 700000 to Malawi, and their number is still rising.
The UNHCR says about 300 refugees from Zimbabwe have gone back to Mozambique after asking to be repatriated, but the bulk of them will probably stay until the day the war in Mozambique ends.
At Nyangombe, refugees are first housed in tents and then given materials to build their own thatched huts and latrines. The camp is divided into units with their own elected leaders.

A Zimbabwean nurse runs a clinic to treat basic ailments while more serious cases are ferried to hospital in Nyanga or Mutare. Foreign aid agencies are building schools and workshops where the unskilled Mozambicans can learn carpentry, metalwork, weaving and sewing.
Nyangombe has a football team which plays matches against the other refugee camps.
Lack of land means that unlike their counterparts in Malawi and the displaced people in Mozambique, the refugees cannot feed themselves. Though there is a small vegetable plot, the refugees rely almost entirely on supplies from the World Food Programme of Zimbabwean maize meal and other staples for their three meals a day.
Sometimes a patronising note creeps in when the Zimbabwean administrators and project leaders talk about the Mozambicans: "We even have one refugee who knows how to run the water engine and can switch it on and off," says a camp official.
The reliance on outside supplies gives the refugees a helpless look as they sit under the baobab trees on the sandy soil, waiting for the next food distribution.
"They are fully dependent; that's the negative side," Mr Sabeti said. "But we are caught in a dilemma in that we have to expand the facilities even though really they would all like to go home."

${ }_{6}{ }^{\text {R }}$ R12-m Zimbabwe property gift by Lonrho

©HARARE - The Lonrho Group in Zim 30 Executive director Mr Herbert Munbabwe, part of Mr Tiny Rowland's vast angatire said the gift was a gesture of In international empire, has given President Mugabe's government property valued at R12million around the ${ }_{1}$ played-out Inyathi Copper Mine in eastern Zimbabwe. goodwill

Since independence, Lonrho has made other substantial donations to the government and the ruling party. The Star's Africa News Service. Drom，Zimbabwe，Mrgodirectors are Mr Manas dirst ever manufacturing plant for hair care products at the Orlando East Indüstrial park，Soweto，at the

We kend，आol $1 / 188$ ，
Mr Ruhukwa，who is the chairman of Personal Care Products Commit－ tee under the Zimbabwe
Chemical Manụacturing Associations，is the chairman of the board of directors at Medico
（4） ＂多点解

ROBIN DREW

HARARE - Growing disillusionment with the performance of the government is becoming more obvious by the day in Zimbabwe.

This week, The Chronicle newspaper in Bulawayo stated bluntly that people were tired of being taken for a ride and this was the reason for the failure to attend political rallies.
"The truth is that among some of those in the leadership are people who now consider themselves deified," the newspaper said.
"They are inebriated with power. They consider it their celestial right to stand before the masses and, for hours on end, regurgitate a multitude of banalities.
"But the public, silent and discerning, has now seen through all this," said the paper.

The Chronicle is part of the Zimbabwe Newspapers stable in which the govern-

Honeymoon

 seems over for Mugabement, through the Mass Media Trust, has a substantial stake.
It was recently described by the chairman of the company, Dr Davidson Sadza, as the best daily paper in Zimbabwe and it was also praised by backbenchers in Parliament for its stories exposing corruption.
A Chronicle reporter was allegedly beaten up by the Governor of Matabeleland South, Mr Mark Dube, last weekend when he interviewed him about his alleged role in a dubious gold mining operation.
The editorial said: "For far too long now Zimbabweans have had to live on promises.

But promises alone do not solve an awful lot. And sometimes promises are used to buy time.
"These are some of the reasons why the Povo (people) feel a sense of betrayal by some of the leaders."
An independently owned weekly newspaper, The Financial Gazette, also takes the government to task this week.
It warns if the cycle of frustration and its repression continues, whether due to fear or simple indecision, the scale of repression will have to increase.
"Surely a better response is a kind of Zimbabwean glasnost," the paper said.
It urged "an openness to debate and a willingness to take, act on and explain difficult decisions".
The paper, which is widely read in busi-ness and diplomatic circles, said discontent and frustration were on the increase in almost all sectors of society.

This was fuelled by an apparent lack of clear direction by the government.
nce thas been asked to nvestigate alleged racial dilscrimination at white old aged homes': C Proith aintu \% 412188
AbThic pariliamentary mestimatis fommittee heard. that at one white old aged home whites were given. R 85 whileblacks roceived $R 38 . \quad(362)$
The commite
this made it diffes tol oldagad blacks tof get ac commodation as the Coutanot afford the 255 per wontho demanded to staym the hones ${ }^{3}$ 多 Hed

| system viable 362 81.3186 and improving?  Zimbabwe's legal system, al thioug not yet perfect is viable andimproving withits only real weakness being th youth says an editorial in the South Africandegal 00 rial, $\%$, Rebus.  The editorial refers to t ane cent Speech at the University of Cape Town by Mryustice N J McNally, , Zimbabwean apt peals judge, when he discussed legal developments in Zimt babwe since it became indepen dent.  He said the Zimbabwean experience demonstrated that a truly independent judiciary was possible in an African state.  He said legislative changes which had shortened egat eduts cation in Zimbabwe were an ad justing rather than a lowering of standards |  |
| :---: | :---: |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |

ZIMBABWE - 2 (362)

Money supply soars

The latest money supply figures, showing M2 rose $26 \%$ in the year to October - up from $15 \%$ growth in midyear - have set alarm bells ringing. The Zimbabwe Reserve Bank reacted promptly, demanding that commercial and merchant banks take up some $Z $ 200 \mathrm{~m} 90$-day Reserve Bank bills. These bills, which mop up excess liquidity, were bitterly criticised by the banks. The bills.pay no interest and are non-liquid assets which, one banker grumpily observes, means banks are lending to government at a zero interest rate. Short-term interest rates responged immediately, rising to $10 \%$ for 90 day money but, by month-end, market liquidity was again increasing and rates were expected to stolen.
While the move was hardly unexpected, the four merchant banks were disconcerted to find they were required to participate by subscribing for one-third of the $\mathbf{Z} $ 200 \mathrm{~m}$ issue. Merchant bank lending has risen more than $65 \%$ this year, reflecting loans to Cluff Minerals for its gold development and to the Mwenezi Oil Plan project in the lowveld.
The news is not all bad. A major reason for the sharp rise in money supply is buoyant exports. Economists estimate a $15 \%-20 \%$ rise in exports in 1988, with nickel earnings having doubled and tobacco revenues up by a quarter, while ferrochrome, cotton, beef and asbestos exports are all likely to reach records - though only in local currency terms. The bad news, though, is that increased government spending and borrowing and rapid money supply growth (currency and coin in circulation is up a whacking 30\%) point to rampant inflation next year. The authorities are putting a brave face on this by seeking to keep price controls in place longer than originally expected.

In May, a review of the price control regime within six months was promised (see above); that deadline has passed. Inflation, estimated at no more than $8 \%$ this year, is projected at $15 \%-20 \%$ in 1989, while complaints and criticisms of industrialists are becoming increasingly shrill as turnovers grow, profits slump and shortages worsen.

For industry, the best news is that import allocations next year will rise by at least "T But as one prominent industrialist says: "That wont help much if we are running at a loss because of price controls."

 The Star's Africa News Service  HARARE - Zimbabwe is launching an offensive against Mozambique rebels along its eastern border.  Defence force commanders have been ordered "to deal ruthlessly with MNR bandits and their collaborators", President Robert Mugabe said yesterday.  He told a joint sitting of the House of Assembly and the Senate in a State of the Nation address that there would not be an MNR without apartheid.  "No matter how the apartheid leaders deny the fact, left on their own without the logistical support and the sanctuary provided by Pretoria, the MNR bandits would long have become a thing of the past.  "Members will join me in condemning this marriage between apartheid and the MNR bandits as both unholy and inhuman," he said.  Mr Mugabe called on Pretoria to stop support for the MNR.  Zimbabwean troops would remain in Mozambique as long as routes to the sea were threatened, he said.  Zimbabwe lent its support to the ongoing talks between South Africa, Angola, Cuba and the US, and hoped a lasting solution for Namibia would be realised.  "Yet even if this hope should be fulfilled, we should not forget that apartheid is still the ruling oppressive ideology and the iniquitous basis of law and practice in South Africa itself," Mr Mugabe said.  "We therefore have a duty, as have all men and nations everywhere that place a premium on human freedom and dignity, to fight this evil system.'  Mr Mugabe said the economic picture in Zimbabwe had improved with anrexpected growth rate of 5 percent.

Policy on ice

As year-end nears, speculation over impending new economic policy measures by Zim babwe's socialist government is gaining ground. Over the past 18 months, Finance Minister Bernard Chidzero has promised new policy initiatives but deadlines have come and gone without any being unveiled.

In May 1987, he predicted the register of new investment projects would be published by the end of 1987, but neither the register, nor the much more important revamped invéstment policy guidelines, have appeared.
Similanly, when the price and wage freeze was imposed in mid-1987, government promised to replace it with a prices and incomes board in early 1988: this too is still awaited. On May 20 officials promised a new price control regime within six months; but that deadline has also passed.

.62) Funce 9112188

Optimists say the delays mean government is serious about meaningful economic reform and that this has run into left-wing opposition in Cabinet and the top policymaking body - the Zanu-PF Politburo. Pessimists argue that the delays are just one more example of government's inability to take decisive action, predicting - gloomily - that the policy pronouncements, when they come, will be much diluted to conform with socialist dogma.
Because the economy is having an excellent year, with real growth projected at $6 \%$ and exports estimated to increase by between $15 \%$ and $20 \%$, while inflation has slowed from $12 \%$ in 1987 to only $8 \%$, some officials say it is more important to make the right decisions than to take urgent action.
"There is," says one, "nothing to panic about."
This complacency is not shared by many in the private sector, whose chief concerns remain inadequate foreign currency, a deteriorating transport situation, both on the railways and in the road transport and bus industries, and the impact of price controis.

Buoyant exports in 1988 point to improved import quotas next year - but with inflation forecast to double, the Zimbabwe dollar will depreciate more rapidly, eroding the increase in import allocations. On the transport front, National Railways of Zimbabwe has reportedly bought 225 ageing steam locos from Sats to ease the dire shortage of power: The locos are to be used for shunting, releasing diesel locos for mainline duties.

While both developments are welcomed by businessmen, there is growing acceptance that 1989 is shaping up to be a difficult year with growth slowing, inflation taking off and another 100000 school-leavers joining the unemployed - now estimated at 1 m .

Little rice this Christmas

HARARE - Rice, a speciality on most arinner tables in rural at Christmás time, will not be available owing to a national shortage, ableowng to a nats branches in town received 50 bags last week but this was inadequate for their 10000 customers, said a company spokesman. There was also a shortage of fine table salt no Christmas turkey or chicken can do without. But for those who do not mind, coarse salt is available. other limited stocks include toothpaste detergents and bath soaps, with some supermarkets like OK and Bon Marche limiting four bath cakes of soap per cus tomer to ensure fair distribution. - Sapal.

\%ARE - With Christmas just ariound the HARARE - With ques are lengthening in corner, the queue But one queue is longer Zimbabwe's cap than the others.
Hundreds of Zimbabweans SA trade mission on the pavement outside the a shopping trip in the queue
"down south". The queues in Baker Avenue in mid-afternoon. the morning and wane only lack.
Most of the shoppers are wilinelm de Deputy trade representativ is "the world's Groot says the SA trade mission is 000 visas will Gusiest embassy", estimainst 80000 in 1987 . be issued this year, against already in most With Christmas bonus pay alread of visas workers' pockets, the monthly tota is expectgranted in Novenber ..... . "ed toprise to stream of shoppers is an embar the The rising stream rassmhest critics of SA's racial policies.
toughe has Since independence in citizens using their holibeen trying to stop its allowance to import lo-day foreign currency allowance $\left(\frac{562}{}\right)$ B/day cally-scarce commodities from neighbouring cally-scarce commo resell at exorbitant prices. Botswana andshewokunze, a government Herbert warned women in 1985 tod But the cial, once waree until SA was liberated. But the shopping sprees un notice.
shoppers took no no no shoppers took has tried to screen genuse their Government has those who use day makers from thos, introducing a specises: allowance lication form and issuing atimes.
bank application year instead of four times. only twice a year ing currency holiday allocal
The annually $$ $ 430$ a person, accumulated over three years.
accumuated Restricted
ernment banned importation of; In June government ban purchased with holi-: cars and oftice equin made it more difficult for' day allowances, and tombine their-allowances. family members it cosis. It also cut the mamily to import costly items. mum $\operatorname{mps} 000$ to $Z \$ 900$.
from $Z $ 3000$ to $2 $ 900$.
applications to 11000 but the figure soon rose.
applications. to again, and reached 17000 in October.
$13 /(2) 88$

sive. Nobody will discourage me from visiting that country."
Dr Herbert Ushewokunze, an official in the ruling Zanu-PF party, warned women in 1985 to cut out shopping sprees until South Africa was "liberated". But the shoppers took no notice.
The government has tried to screen genuine holidaymakers from those who are simply using their allowance for shopping, introducing a special bank application form and issuing allowances only twice a year instead of four times.
"I must warn that I will not hesitate to introduce stiffer measures if these shopping sprees and sponsored trips continue," the Finance Minister, Mr Bernard Chidzero, threatened in 1985 - to little effect.

Zimbabweans flocked into South trip in Johannesburg told Reuters: 'I am attracted there by very cheap fancy items. Some are available here but in poor quality and very expen-

Africa in 1986 and 1987, particularly to buy cheap second-hand cars. $x^{\prime}$.
The foreign currency holiday allocation is usually R450 annually per person, which can be accumulated over three years.
In June this year the government banned importation of cars and of fice equipment bought with holiday allowances and made it more difficult for family members to combine their allowances to import costly items.

It cut the maximum imports aggregate allowed to a family from R3 200 to R1 000 , restricted only to husband and wife.
Mr de Groot says the ban slightity reduced visa applications to 11000 but the figure soon rose again and reached 17000 in October.

Thirty-five Zimbabweans, supervised by two South Africans, man the visa section, which occupies two storeys of Temple Bar House, a modest office block which has housed the South African mission since 1952 Two more supervisors will arrive next year to reinforce the section.

The office remains open for business during the lunch break to reduce huge queues that have brought complaints from neighbouring stores Visa staff work overtime until 7pm processing piles of applications.
"We have unsuccessfully tried to get permission to buy bigger premises since 1986," says Mr de Groot.
Business was sometimes slowed down when there were anti-apartheid demonstrations outside. Police gave advance warning and the doors were closed.
A religious group calling itself the Liberation Support Committee distributed pamphlets in September urging visa applicants not to shop in South Africa.

Mr de Groot says: "Nobody seemed bothered."

Zimbabwes 62

Canada sign

 agreement (©)HAARARE - Zimbabwe and Canada have signed the long-awaited economic and technical co-operation agreement to expand trade relations and promote business and industrial links.

The Ziana news agency says the agreement, which has been on the cards for two years, will give rise to a joint commission to oversee implementation of activities and to identify ways and means of transfering technology.
${ }^{\prime}$ Finance Minister Mr Bernard Chidzero and Canadian High Commis-j; sioner Mr Roger Bull,r signed the pact on Thurs; day.

Mr Chidzero described ${ }^{\prime}$ the agreement as a mile stone. Stevizl 128 7. "We have a lot to learn and to receive from cant ada and in many waysume "have already done so.
?"But I also believe that We have much to offer "Canada," he said.

Zimbabwe govt might take legal action against newspaper

HARARE - Zimbabwe Defence Minister Mr Enos Nkala said yesterday the government was proposing to take legal action against the Chronicle newspaper for alleged continuous defamation of the integrity and esteem of its Ministers, the Zimbabwe Broadcasting Corporation (ZBC) re ported. Ster 16112180
Mr Nkala reportedly told the ZBC in an interview that the Bulawayo-published daily was fabricating the existence of a car racket in order to destroy the careers of some government Ministers.

Reacting to a news report that he had threatened Chronicle editor, Mr Geoffrey Nyarota, and assistant editor, Mr Davi son Maruziva, who were investigating whether government officials who had bought vehicles from Harare's Willowvale Motor Industries had resold them at inflated prices, Mr Nkala said he dissociated himself from any such alleged scandal.

He added that he was not aware of any other Ministers who were involved in the car racket. 362
He said the Cabinet and Parliament had authorised Ministers and MPs to obtain cars from source at Willowvale rather than through the complicated process of garages. This followed, he said, a decision by President Robert Mugabe that Ministers should not drive government cars.

The Minister said that following first res ports by the Chronicle that certain govermment officials were involved in the car racket, President Mugabe had instructed the police to investigate the case.
Mr Nkala accused the Chronicle of fabricating the racket in order to destroy certain government Ministers.

It was not the business of the newspaper to know the whereabouts of the car he had obtained from Willowvale becausesit was his personal property, he added. -- Sapa.

20000  THE Souther

7.

Mission in Hararican trade ISsued almost 20000 last month
a recordinice independe, period for the Christman at in SA for re consumer

The Zimbabwe Gos back home inflated prices ment has robwe Govern But peop coised its citizepeatedy, criti- this week one interviewed gying to sitizens for travel.
tu* South? Africa on going on shop they were not 全。

32
R

 sno!nexd of su!foeay - -utiod panariuy sey and

 proupuaz ssipyidie fivios

HARARE. - South Africa's judges yesterday received a unique vote of confidence when the Zimbabwean Supreme Court he will not get a fair hearing in's claim that he will not get a fair hearing in Cape Town if he tried to stop his Australian-born chil Aren being brought up under apartheid.
${ }^{4}$ Mrs Joy Hankins, Manyarara announced that her daughter Marian, 11,' and son Robin, 8, would be flight from Harare Cape Town on today's Had the Harare
Had they missed it, they would have been stranded in Harare indefinitely during the Christmas rush - with their mother's temporary residence permit due to expire on Christmas Day.
Mr Derek Matyszak, appearing for Mr Victor Hankins, 40, said a South African judge was likely to "give short shift" to his client's objections to having Marian and tion", which he alleged had a white racist bias, and to Robin being conscripted into the SADF the SADF.
The dramatic "tug of love" case forced Zimbabwe's courts to execute a judgment of Solomon between South Africa and Australia, which had a diplomat in court throughout the proceedings.
Mr Hankins, like his ex-wife, was born in

To page 3

ensorshipastictiogsinuppy
1

From page 1

South Africa but acquired Australian hationality after emigrating in 1977.
He snatched his chil dren from Cape Town in November, armed with a custody order from Paramatta family court in New South Wales and new passports granted him by sympathetic officials of the Australian Foreign Ministry.
He wasinintercepted by his ex-wife's lawyers in Harare before he could catch, á connecting Quantas flight to Sydney. Mrs Hankins had been granted de facto custody bya.Cape Town judge in August.
Mr Matyszak said Mr Hańkin's's "turpitude" in plotting the removal of the children should not outweigh the harm the children woula suffer growing up in a racially segregated society. Mrs Hankins had, he said, under-played the continuous political violence culminating in three bomb explosions in Cape Town last weekend:
Mr Matyszak said that allowing Robin Hankins to be called up by the SADF in eight or the years' time 'implies Robin may be in Mozam"Hique in Renamo".
"He may be in this country performing acts of destabilisation:"
Referring to the recent jail term imposed conscientious objector Charles Bester, 18 , Mr Matyszak said an Afrikaans judge, who was member of the Broeder bond, would saỳ w Well, man out of Robin make a erybody hobinardey their country, at some stage:"
Mr'John Sayce, for Mrs
Hänkins, chaillenged Mrs claim that an Australian court would be less bis ased South, African judges, knowing the situ ation, would be, better YOur lordships hour lordships will set up home together in be aware of the basis of Ho ral when Mrs continuing controversy to return the persuáded in Australia about that to return there in 1986 country s treatmenthot with their children The its.black population', morriage broke mp fout said Mr Sayce. Which is the greater evit A country whichoter preses its minority blacks or a country Whichoppressés its ma jotity?
Mr Matyszak said Auis tralian,courts would be entitled tó note the dec laration of the United Nations that apartheid was a crime against humanity, This now stood part of international aw when fons later and soon on arrived, having:obviously applied for emi: ration mueh earlier, he and:\% 4 y Mr Sayce said, These children havébeen sud away uprooted and torn "The con their mother. that "onsequences of that are potentially disastrous:
The case was heard by acting Chief Justice Gubbay; Mr Justice McNally and Mr Justice Manyar

Mr Sayce said that despite Mr Hankins's protests against South Africa's "racist society" he had returned there to live with them from 1981 to 1986, their formative years. They had spent most of their "conscions lives" in South Africa. The judges, who will give written reasons for the ruling later, joined Mr Sayce in making passing criticism yester day of the Australian courts for giving Mr Hankins custody in March Without hearing Mrs Hánkins's' pleas.
Mrs Hankins received her husband's tempo rary permission to take the children to South Africa on holiday in De Cember 1987, ina Seventh do remain ina Seventh Day Adyen tist church community at Somerset Wést after he set up home at Glenhaz ent Sydineyw with an attractive South African divorcees Mrs Dierdre Arderson, who has chil dren by hè three previous marriages. Mr Sayce aleged that Mr Hankins and Mrs Ant derson had and Mrs Ana dis S

\title{

Courageous BULAWA:YO - On a continent where newspapers are not generally known for their crusadiding zeal, a Zimbabwean editor has become a national hero and his tabloid a hit for exposing high-level corruption.
But the price for 37 -year-old Geoff Nyarota's principles has proven high.
A Cabinet Minister this month threatened him with detention. Two of his staff were allegedly assaulted by a senior politician, and his reporters were branded over-zealous enemies of the country by President Mugabe.
But Mr Nyarota, editor of The Chronicle in Zimbabwe's second-largest city of Bulawayo, remains unbowed. "Where corruption exists, at whatever level, and we find out, we'll expose it," says the editor, a schoolteacher until switching to journalism on a muck-raking weekly in the mid-7os.
The Chronicle's exposes are small change in Africa, where widespread graft infects most levels of society. But the stories are avidly read by Zimbabweans who have long suspected some of their leaders of dipping into the national till.

Huge profits

Only last week, The Chronicle published the names of several Cabinet members, security chiefs and ranking bureaucrats who allegedly obtained cars and trucks directly from the State-run Willowvale assembly plant, then evidently re-sold them at a huge profit. Private buyers must wait years for ordered cars and the demand has created a flourishing black market where vehicles fetch five times book value.
The Chronicle's front-page report was headlined "Willowgate Scandal" after the Watergate row that toppled US President Richard Nixon.
Defence Minister Mr Enos Nkala was one of those questioned by the paper's assistant editor, Davison Maruziva, on the whereabouts of a car he bought.
Mr Nkala demanded to know how the paper knew he had the vehicle and threatened to send soldiers to detain Maruziva and his boss.
"Where did you get that information?" the angry Minister was quoted by Maruziva in a front-page story. "That information is supposed to be with the police and the President. I want that information here in my office.... if you do not travel here I will use the army to pick you up...I am not the kind to play with."

\section*{Zimbabwean

Zimbabwean editor exposes corruption

Mr Nyarota and his assistant ignored the threat and, two days later, devoted most of their paper's front pages to further allegations about Willowgate.
The Chronicle, owned, like all other daily and Sunday newspapers in Zimbabwe, by the governmentcontrolled Mass Media Trust, quoted the Defence Minister as saying he and other politicians were considering suing for libel.
"Nyarota keeps pestering Ministers, wanting to know whether we still have our cars," Mr Nkala was quoted as saying. "I am still angry that I can be pestered by little Nyarota."
There has been no specific government comment. on Willowgate, but Mr Mugabe has in the past said that any allegations of top-level dishonesty will be investigated and culprits prosecuted.
If Nyarota is a pest to some, to many Zimbab:weans he is one of the most popular journalists to emerge since independence from Britain in 1980.
The Chronicle, usually 12 pages printed on a 50 -year-old press, boasts an average daily paid circulation of 65000 , mainly in Matabeleland.
Apart from its stories on corruption, The Chronicle carries a rather tame diet, but for the first Willowgate report, the press worked overtime to produce 100000 copies; all of them quickly sold out.
The 4000 copies of the Chronicle sent each day to the capital of Harare, 440 km away, are quickly snatched up from street vendors. Some entrepeneurs photocopy the paper and sell it in Harare's markets, bus stations and poorer suburbs.
The Herald, the only daily published in Harare, has a nationwide circulation of 135000 , but many readers say it lacks the bite of The Chronicle.
Chronicle editors say they would sell thousands more copies, in Matabeland and in Harare, if there was no shortage of newsprint. - Associated Press.

WHARARE: Matableland north prov- message in the latest edition of the (hince, which only a year ago was a provincial newspaper, Indonsakusa. Waven of dissident activity, this year A year ago on December 22 Presiwitnessed total tranquility, provincial dent Robert Mugabe and the Zapu-PF governor, Mr Jacob Mudenda, said in leader, Mr Joshua Nkomo, signed a a Christmas message. 362 unity accord to merge Zimbabwe's
" The year has witnessed total two main political parties in a move aimed at uniting the nation. $\quad$ "/4, The governor added that" "some province where yesterday there was times the peace has been so. frightturmoil andirdistress, wespeoially y eningly real and yet so unbelieyably among our beloved rural populace;", substantial and all pervasiye

4. Cape -Times, Saturday, December 24, 1988

'Editor 'threatened' over high-level corruption expose  BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe. - On a continent  teacher who broke into journalism with a  The Chronicle's front-page report was where newspapers are not generally known for their crusading zeal, an editor here has become a national hero and his tabloid a hit for exposing high-level corruption.

The price for Mr Geoff Nyarota's principies has proved high.
A cabinet minister this month threatene him with detention. Two of his staff were allegedly assaulted by a senior polltician, and his reporters were branded over-zealous enemies of the country by President Robert Mugabe.

But Mr Nyarota, editor of the Chronicle in Zimbabwe's second-largest city of Bula wayo, remains unbowed
"Where corruption exists at whatever level and we find out, we'll expose it," says the 37-year-old editor, a former schoolmuck-raking weekly newspaper in the mid-70s.

The Chronicle's exposes are small change in Africa, where widespread graft infects most levels of society. But the stories are avidly read by Zimbabweans who have long suspected some of their leaders of dipping into the national till.

Only last week, the Chronicle published the names of several cabinet members, security chiefs and ranking bureaucrats who allegedly obtained cars and trucks directly from the state-run Willowvale assembly plant, then evidently resold them at a huge profit.
Private buyers must wait years for ordered cars and the demand has created a black market where vehicles fetch as much as five times their book value.
headlined "Willowgate Scandal" after the Watergate row that toppled US President Richard Nixon.

Defence Minister Mr Enos Nkala was one of those questioned by the Chronicle's assistant editor, Mr Davison Maruziva, on the whereabouts of a car he bought.
Mr Nkala demanded to know how the paper knew he had the vehicle and threatene to send soldiers to detain Mr Maraziva and his boss.
"Where did you get that information? the minister was quoted by Mr Maruziya as saying, in a front-page story.
"That information is supposed" to be with the police and the president. I wand that information here in my office. If you do not travel here I will use the army to pick you up." - Sapa-AP

等娄

- $\because \cdots+$

The troops were not home for Christmas.
Indeed it would be a rash scholar who would predict how many decades, let alone years, Zimbabwean soldiers and airmen will have to be deployed in Mozambique, and in increasing numbers (so President Robert Mugabe tells us) along the frontier.

Mozambique has now suffered 25 years of continuous warfare, spreading. down like a creeping social gladoi area bordering Tanzania and from the central Tete Province bordering Zambia. Although up to 14000 Zimbabweans may be mobilised for major anti-rebel drives, and the battle zones are only a few nights' march from Harare, few conflicts have been more shrouded in secrecy. If publicity were the oxygen of the Mozambique Resistance Movement to be of other terrorist organ is said they would surely have suffocated years ago.
Gone are the days when radio stations here would broadcast: "Rhodesian Combined Operations Headquarters regret to announce ..." Then it was possible, at the year end, to tot up casualties and - to the horror of international opinion - the horror of international opinion- the huge numb crossfire.

I

Instead, there are rumours: Truck loads of bodies pouring into Mutare. Tombstones being delivered by the gross. Desertions, mutinies, spectacular robberies allegedly perpetrated by starving Mozambican troops and then ascribed to the rebels. Pitched offensives when the rebels vanished presumably because they were warned by Mozambican government troops. black or white, for Zimbabwean civilians to fete
Air Lieutenant Gary Kane irrevocably blotted his copybook in June by stealing a helicopter in an abortive bid to rescue men accused of spying for South Africa. Only later was it revealed he had been in line for a top gallantry award for his conduct in action in Mozambique.

It is impossible to judge how Rimthe war. There has been only one publicly proven case of a soldier (from Matabeleland, significantly) deserting because, he said, he did not want to be sent to Mozambique. One frequently meets educated young black Zimbabweans who say they scorn the war, but they invariably reveal gross ignorance about Kimest in the Beira and Limpopo Corrtors. dors.
Were Ian Smith still in power, he would be as concerned as Mugabe.
Since prominent businessman

No feted heroes in Zimbabwe's

 secret border warGrassroots opposition to the abuse of power by Zimbabwe's new elite and the bloody war on Mozambique's border could herald a return to liberal ideals, writes MICHAEL HARTNACK from Harare.

- ROBERT MUGABE

Sam Gozo last year appealed for a negotiated end to hostilities, leading to the withdrawal of Zimbabwean forces, no one has dared speak out. Government insists that every as his blood brothers, is bursting with gratitude for Mozambique's button to Mugabe's triumphs contriand is prepared to "give his all" to fight the "South African-backed bandits".
Contradictorily, however, Mugabe has made an appeal to Zimbabweans who really do have blood relations across the border not to shelter them when they cross to and fro, lest they
"It is these people apparently in. nocent workers or cousins by who turn into bandits and bandit collaborators by night, causing externsive damage to the security of the very people who keep them," said Mugabe in his first year-end "state of the nation" address to Parliament as executive president.
Delegates to a World Council of Churches conference here recently ailed to see the ambivalence of Mozambique-Zimbabwe relationships when they were taken to insect Nyangombe camp, between Mutoko and Nyanga. Through an in terpreter they expressed solidarity with the 14000 inmates as "refugees from the apartheid regime's destabiirisation
Some Western news media representatives, including the BBC, ITN, and Agence France Prase, were barred from entering the camp. The handful of inhabitants who could be interviewed briefly did not regard themselves so much as direct fugifives from war as migrant workers whom the Zimbabwean authorities had uncharitably decided to intern. had uncharitably decided to intern. wire fence, the close security surveillance, and some claimed to have been working in Zimbabwe for many years before being rounded up.

T

here are now an estimated 80000 people, at least, living in such camps along the trackless 700 km

Mugabe confirmed there have recently been increased rebel incur their into zimbabwe due, he said, to lowing resounding defeats in their traditional base areas deep in Mozambique.
int is my view that no understand

DIAN SMITH
ing of terrorism or guerilla war is possible without examining the emporarily unfashionable "Study of History" by the late Professor Arnold Toynbee.
It is quite clear that a sizeable. proportion of Mozambique's populatron is undergoing the classic transformation into a "seceded external proletariat" of Zimbabwe. The relaborder movement of abject migrant workers who become in time smugoglers, and then brigands. The final and most dangerous stage is when a mythology evolves to rationalise predation on their wealthier neighbour.

Between Zimbabwe and the rebeldominated areas of Mozambique there is, without doubt, what Toynbee saw as a line of brutal confrontion between peoples at sharply difrent levels of material culture.
It is essentially the same phenomenow which is found along the Limpopo River, where the bones of Rimelectrified "death fence", and along the Zambezi where Zimbabwean game guards shoot Zambian rhino poachers on slight.
The negotiations envisaged by Gozo offer elusory prospects of peace in themselves, for the only way Zimbabute can check the evolu-' ton of the classic embattled relationship withits Mozambican "exter-: Mozambicans up to a roughly equivtalent materizil standard of life before they convince themselves hey have a God-given right to plumder across the border.
Frontier wifriare may be glamoraus in the distant retrospect of romantic literature. In real life it is unutterably sordid, socially corrupting, morally degrading, and economy icily disastrous.

T his New Year's Eve marks the 25th anniversary of the demise of the I1-Cated Centra African Federation The white "liberals" who were its architects hoped to inaugurate an ra of prosperous partnership between differe nit ethnic groups across a broad sweep of south central Africa.
In 1963 they appeared defeated and discredited, yet they had per ceived a fundamental truth Africa's development problems are too vast to be tackled in isolation by individval nation states. zImbabwe canso, unique from birrerism. If it could, it would only confront further probwould on ty confront salient. South Africans should surely see the paralel in their own situation.
Many whites here seem to have been astonish ed in recent months by the powerful lklack grassroots opposition to abuse of power by the new elite.
One man who would not have been In the least surprised was the late Sir Robert Tredgold, the one-time Rhodesian and Federal Chief Justice who resigned in protest at the introaction Shortly before his death 10 years go Sir Robert told ne of his confidence that black people (of whom he return to the liberal ideals and liberal institutions of the federal era, because they corresponded with the nest ideals of African tradition.
It does not stem inappropriate in his Christmas period to find the faith of a courageous, practical Christian vindicated, and his polit al ideas startlingly relevant once gain

[^0]:

[^1]:    1－1
    运苞

    号

     | 0 |
    | :--- |
    | 0 |
    | 0 |
    | 0 |
    | 2 |
    | 2 |
    |  |
    |  |
    |  |

[^2]:    -

[^3]:    ARC4 Minister s non-existent school
    2544 The Argus Africa News Service reports from Harare

    TOP Zimbabwean Govern 1 ment: officials have hit out hard at some of their col leagues for bleeding the country diy for their own gain.
    Mr Justin Nyoka, former Secretary for Information and now in charge of National Supplies, said Zimbabwe had fallen into the Third World pitfall of appointing heads of public bodies on criteria other than professional ability.

    One fraud came to light when a Minister was asked to open a non-existent school
    The "ghost school" had been sited, planned and paid for with public funds which had found their way somewhere else.
    The Secretary for Industry and Technology, Mr Sam

    Geza, said parastatal bodies had been regarded as fair game by some boards of management to create personal fortunies or as a launching pad for private business ventures.
    "Plundering of the resources of these organisations by insiders at the top leads them to chronic sickness and in extreme circumstances bleeds them to death."

[^4]:    Dissident killer's amnesty plea arouses mixed feelings

    The Star's Africa News Service
    HARARE - The leader of the gang alleged to be responsible for the massacre of 16 white missionaries near. Bulawayo last year has accepted an offer of amnesty from the Zimbabwean authorities.
    Morgan Sango is reported to have accepted the offer made by President Robert Mugabe., $\quad 3.02$

    The missionaries at the Born Again farm, who had allegedly fallen out with some farm workers over land rights, were herded into a hut and beheaded as they prayed.
    4 Amission spokesman said this week that he did not believe the amnesty should apply to Sango t 4
    However, Mrs Lilian Slade of Glamorgan, Wales, who lost her grandson, his wife and their three children in the attack, said although she would never forgive the killers, the matter should be laid to rest.
    II can't see the use in taking more lives. It won't bring our family back

[^5]:    The area where Angolan and Cuban forces are moving towards southern

[^6]:    General Malan said that one of the "serious implications" of theBroederstroom discovery of advanced weapons was the evidence that they were brought in through Zimbabwe and Botswana.
    "Zimbabwe is indeed irectly and indirectly involved in the export of evolution and terrorGeneral Malan said hat probably the best known of the militant tatements made boweto Day speech on June 15 1986 in which he said:
    "The only language stand is the language of the gun. A bullet for a bullet, they will under stand that very easily The Boers are afraid The more of them you kill the nearer you get to your goal."
    General Malan said: "If thls is not a declaration of war, I would like to know how you declare war."
    See also pages 7 and 11 :

[^7]:    THE csotents of this isum the Sumay Thes hure beo restricter is termes of ti omeryency rogudtiona.

[^8]:    g
    为家 4

[^9]:

[^10]:    品

[^11]:

[^12]:

[^13]:

