Workmen's Compensation Act: Rates of compensation increased

*12. Dr. A. L. BORAINÉ asked the Minister of Labour:

- (1) (a) What is the latest date on which the rates of compensation in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act were increased and (b) what was the extent of the increase;
- (2) whether consideration has been given to adjusting the rates annually in accordance with fluctuations in the cost-of-living index; if so, with what result; if not, why not.

The MINISTER OF LABOUR:

- (1) (a) 1 April 1974.
(b) The maximum portion of a workman's monthly earnings on which compensation is based was increased from R200 to R247 as a result of which the maximum monthly compensation has increased from R150 to R185-25.
- (2) No. Compensation as well as assessments payable in terms of the Act are based on earnings, and the benefits are reviewed periodically in consultation with employers and the insurance carriers. I may point out that employees make no contributions to the Accident Fund but that the Fund derives its income from assessments levied on employers only. However, amendments which are designed to increase benefits further are at present under consideration and it is proposed to introduce the legislation next year.

Workmen's Compensation Act

237. Dr. G. F. JACOBS asked the Minister of Labour:

- (1) (a) How many of the awards made under the Workmen's Compensation Act were unclaimed at the latest date for which figures are available, (b) what was the total sum of money involved, (c) what percentage did this constitute of the total amount awarded and (d) what is the date in respect of which these figures are given;
- (2) what steps are being taken to trace Bantu beneficiaries who do not claim awards notified in the Government Gazette.

The MINISTER OF LABOUR:

- (1) (a) Approximately 176 000.
- (b) R3 025 725.
- (c) 1.34 per cent.
- (d) For the period 1943 to 28 February 1975.

- (2) Before an amount is transferred to the unclaimed monies account, inquiries are made at all possible addresses available to the Commissioner. If this appears to be unsuccessful, the South African Police in the area concerned is requested to render assistance with a view to tracing the workman. Furthermore, the South African Broadcasting Corporation has also been approached with a view to rendering assistance in the form of announcements over Radio Bantu. Copies of the Government Gazette, in which a list of unclaimed monies are published, are also forwarded to the Department of Information for publication in seven different Bantu magazines. Particulars are also published in local newspapers.

The regulations have also been amended and the requirements in regard to the reporting of accidents have been prescribed in detail. The surname, ethnic group and tribe of the Bantu must now also be furnished in order that the tribal heads can be approached with a view to tracing the workman.

At present it is also the practice to refer the matter to the Bantu Reference Bureau where the national identity number of the Bantu is available. This information is then stored in a computer. Should the whereabouts of the workman become known, e.g. when he applies for a duplicate reference book or registers for employment, this information is relayed to the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner and a cheque is re-issued in favour of the workman.

Amount standing to credit of accounts relating to Workmen's Compensation Act

The MINISTER OF LABOUR replied to Question *21, by Mr. H. H. Schwarz:

Question:

- (1) (a) What was the total amount standing to the credit of the various accounts relating to the Workmen's Compensation Act, as at 31 December 1974, (b) in what respect does this amount exceed or fall below actuarial valuations or other assessments of the liabilities of such funds and (c) what rates of interest are used to capitalize provisions for pensions falling under the Workmen's Compensation Act;
- (2) whether it is intended to review or alter such interest rates in the light of prevailing circumstances.

†Reply (laid upon Table with leave of House):

The financial year of the Accident Fund has been amended by section 1 of Act 11 of 1974 to the extent that its accounts may be closed off at the end of February of each year. The audited figures for 1974-'75 are not yet available. The audited figures for the previous financial year which ended on 31 December 1973 were as follows:

- (1) (a) Total assets as reflected in the various accounts: R139 849 432.
- (b) The assets exceed the liabilities by: R42 224 767.
- (c) 4.5%.
- (2) Yes. The matter was referred to the actuary and the implementation of his recommendations is at present under consideration.

No takers for R2,6-m payout

STAR

Pretoria Bureau
The Workmen's Compensation Commissioner in Pretoria is a desperate man. He has more than R2,6-million on his books for which he can find no takers.

This figure represents the total amount of unclaimed money which has accumulated in the commissioner's coffers since 1943.

Thousands of people all over South Africa have a right to a share in this bonanza — but so far all efforts to trace them have failed.

A list is prepared every three months by officials on the commissioner's staff of beneficiaries who have disappeared without trace. These are people — mainly Black — who received injuries while at work and to whom compensation had been granted.

EFFORT

It takes a while to finalise these claims and it often happens that workers disappear before their claims can be paid out.

Although considerable effort is put in to trace the people, many cannot be found. Their names appear in the Government Gazette every three months.

Some of the outstanding sums have been on the books for nearly 20 years.

Mr J L Vierdag, the Workmen's Compensation Fund chief accountant, said in an interview: "We have opened something like 3,5-million files and have paid out nearly R225 million to accident victims."

Money not claimed is paid over to the Public Debt Commissioner for safekeeping and interest is earned for beneficiaries until they show up to stake their claims.

Mr Vierdag said many of the Blacks who were owed money by the WCF had disappeared soon after being injured.

"They have a superstitious nature and often desert their work after an injury believing a toke-losh responsible. They leave no forwarding addresses and cause us infinite trouble to find them again.

"Our job would be made a lot easier if employers told their Black workers to inform us of changes of address when they leave their employ. Those of them who had sustained work injuries could very well qualify for some of the money we have in the trust."

COMPENSATION Progress and pitfalls

Top executives as well as African labourers will be affected if amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act, now under ministerial consideration, become law. The Act provides that employers pay contributions to a central fund which provides compensation for injured workers or pensions to the dependants of workers who get killed.

The first proposed change removes clauses discriminating against Africans. The second affects people in higher income brackets who may now find themselves classified as "workers", with their employers having to pay premiums for them.

The latter amendment is necessitated by wage increases (arising from inflation and the shortage of skilled workers). As the Act now stands, employers are only required to pay premiums on workers earning less than R7 260 a year. This ceiling is now too low and it is proposed that it be removed altogether. Many artisans, who clearly should fall within the provisions of the Act, are now earning more.

The Commissioner for Workmen's Compensation, Ockert Grobbelaar, is not at liberty to discuss the proposed amendments with the Press. But he told the FM that more than 3 000 employers had approached him requesting cover for employees earning more than R7 260 a year.

Both E L Klopfer, chairman of the Transvaal Chamber of Industries, and Errol Drummond of Seifsa, are strongly opposed to raising the ceiling "to infinity" on the grounds that it would be highly inflationary. Large companies would have to pay premiums on their top executives, salesmen and even directors, for Workmen's Compensation, and these costs would have to be recovered.

Drummond notes that in the case of foundry workers, who do high-risk jobs, the premium for Workmen's Compensation (which varies from sector to sector depending on risks) is R1.40 per R100 of pay. But a Stated Benefits policy for similar workers (earning in excess of R7 260) is only 52c per R100, and provides 24-hour cover; works accidents and external accidents cover; air travel cover; medical aid and two years' salary in the case of death.

For some sections of industry, insurance under Workmen's Compensation can compete. But if it is to compete for high-risk sectors, then the flat-rate premium for all workers in that sector would have to be reduced. This presumably could be done because of the large increase in contributions that would accrue by bringing in highly-paid workers. Grobbelaar in any case claims that his department is competitive by virtue of its being non-profit-making, with large reserves — earning high interest — and small administrative costs.

Klopfer grants the difficulty involved in deciding on a cut-off point. Any such point would quickly become outdated in these inflationary times. He suggests that a scheme, such as that proposed, should at least not be compulsory. Companies should have the choice of insuring higher-income employees under Workmen's Compensation.

On the other hand, spokesmen for industry, including Drummond and Klopfer, as well as spokesmen for labour, told the FM they support the amendments to remove discrimination against African workers. At present, the Act treats Whites, Indians and Coloureds more favourably than Africans. For example, in the case of 100% permanent disablement, a non-African gets a monthly pension of 75% of monthly earnings below R247. But Africans get only a lump sum equal to 48 times their monthly earnings below R40, plus 35 times monthly earnings in excess of R40 and less than R247.

Thus, if a 30-year-old White earning R200/month were permanently disabled, he would get a pension of R150/month. An African in a similar position and earning the same pay would get a lump sum of R7 520. After four years the White would be much better off, having already received R7 200 and still collecting R150/month.

Again, whereas Africans receive R75 for funeral expenses, others receive R150. The proposed amendments would provide R250, irrespective of race.

One oft-voiced complaint against the administration of the Act concerns the large sum of unclaimed and unpaid money (R2,6m at May 1975). Unless strenuous efforts are made to ensure that Africans awarded compensation are traced and paid out, one unfortunate result of the welcome removal of discrimination could well be to increase the amount of unpaid claims.

REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION AMENDMENT BILL, 1976

Subclause (b)

Section 38 (4) of the Act provides that, in determining the amount of any periodical payments, any excess of any monthly earnings of a workman above R247 is not taken into consideration. In terms of the proposed amendment which is consequential on subclause (a) of clause 5 any excess of any monthly earnings of a workman above R400 will not be taken into consideration.

Subclause (c)

This amendment is necessitated by the deletion of section 84 of the Act—vide clause 13 of the Bill.

CLAUSE SIX

Subclause (a)

Section 39 (1) (a) of the Act provides that where a workman's degree of permanent disablement is 30%, the compensation in respect thereof is calculated on the basis of a lump sum equal to twelve times the monthly earnings of the workman up to R40 of such earnings, together with ten times his monthly earnings in excess of R40 up to R247. In terms of the proposed amendment, the amount of R247 is increased to R400. The maximum lump sum will consequently increase from R2 550 to R4 080.

Section 39 (1) (c) of the Act provides, inter alia, that where the degree of disablement is 100%, a monthly pension is payable equal to 75% of the monthly earnings of the workman up to R247 of such earnings. In terms of the proposed amendment, the amount of R247 is increased to R400 as a result of which the maximum monthly pension will be R300 instead of the present R185,25.

Subclause (b)

Section 39 (2) of the Act provides that, in determining the compensation payable in terms of section 39 (1), any excess of the monthly earnings of a workman above R247 is not taken into consideration. The proposed amendment, which is consequential on subclause (a) of clause 6, increases the amount of R247 to R400.

CLAUSE SEVEN

Subclause (a)

In terms of section 40 (1) (c) (iv) of the Act the Commissioner may increase the amount payable in respect of pensions awarded to dependant children to a maximum of R1 500 or two years' earnings of the workman whichever is the less if the workman does not leave as a dependant a widow or an invalid widower and the amount payable in respect of pensions is less than R1 500 or two years' earnings of the workman. The proposed amendment increases the amount of R1 500 to R2 500.

Subclause (b)

Section 40 (1) (e) of the Act provides that if the workman does not leave a widow or invalid widower, children or other wholly dependant persons, the Commissioner may in his discretion award to dependants partly dependent upon the workman a lump sum not exceeding a sum which bears the same proportion to two years' earnings or R1 500 whichever is the less, as the degree of dependency bears to total dependency. The proposed amendment increases the amount of R1 500 to R2 500.

Subclause (c)

Section 40 (2) of the Act provides that the Commissioner may in his discretion pay out of the Accident Fund an allowance not exceeding R150

CLAUSE THIRTEEN

Section 84 of the Act, which clause 13 proposes to delete, at present reads as follows:

"84. Compensation in case of temporary disablement.—The compensation payable for temporary total disablement shall, in the case of a Bantu workman, be periodical payments during such temporary disablement at the rate of seventy-five per cent of the monthly earnings of the workman up to two hundred and forty-seven rand of such earnings for a period not exceeding twelve months: Provided that—

- (a) if such disablement continues after the expiration of the said period the Commissioner may, in his discretion, direct the continuation of such payments for such further period or periods as he may from time to time determine;
- (b) in determining the compensation under this section any excess of the monthly earnings of a workman above two hundred and forty-seven rand shall not be taken into consideration."

The effect of the proposed amendment is that Bantu will now be treated on the same basis as all the other population groups and will receive periodical payments in terms of section 38 of the Act.

CLAUSE FOURTEEN

Section 85 of the Act, which clause 14 proposes to delete, at present reads as follows:

"85. Compensation in respect of permanent disablement.—(1) The compensation payable for permanent disablement in the case of a Bantu workman is as follows—

- (a) where the degree of disablement is thirty per cent, a lump sum equal to twelve times the monthly earnings of the workman up to forty rand of such earnings, together with ten times his monthly earnings in excess of forty rand up to two hundred and forty-seven rand;
- (b) where the degree of disablement is under thirty per cent, a lump sum bearing the same proportion to a lump sum calculated in accordance with paragraph (a) as the degree of disablement bears to thirty per cent;
- (c) where the degree of disablement is one hundred per cent, a lump sum equal to forty-eight times the monthly earnings of the workman up to forty rand of such earnings together with thirty times his monthly earnings in excess of forty rand up to two hundred and forty-seven rand with a minimum compensation of four hundred and eighty rand;
- (d) where the degree of disablement is under one hundred per cent but more than thirty per cent, a lump sum bearing the same proportion to a lump sum calculated in accordance with paragraph (c) as the degree of disablement bears to one hundred per cent.

(2) From any compensation awarded under this section no deduction shall be made on account of any periodical payments in respect of temporary disablement made under section 38 or 84.

(3) In determining the compensation under this section any excess of the monthly earnings of a workman above two hundred and forty-seven rand shall not be taken into consideration."

The deletion of this section will have the effect that Bantu workmen will be compensated in respect of permanent disablement on the same basis as the other population groups and will thus, inter alia, be entitled to pensions in terms of section 39 of the Act if the degree of permanent disablement exceeds 30%.

Hierdie klousule handel oor die datum van inwerkingtreding van die maatregel asook sy kort titel. Ingevolge genoemde klousule tree al die bepalinge in werking op 'n datum wat die Staatspresident by Proklamasie in die Staatskoerant bepaal. Die wysigings wat deur klousules 1, 2, 5, 6, 7 (a), 7 (b), 7 (c), 13, 14 en 15 aangebring word, sal egter nie op ongevallende wat voor die datum van inwerkingtreding van hierdie maatregel plaasgevind het, van toepassing wees nie. Verder sal die wysigings wat deur klousules 7 (d), 7 (e), 8 en 10 aangebring word, nie van toepassing wees ten opsigte van gevalle waar die betrokke pensioene kragtens die Hooftwet, voor die wysiging daarvan, gestaak het vanaf 'n datum van inwerkingtreding van hierdie maatregel. Die wysiging wat deur klousule 4 aangebring word, sal nie van toepassing wees nie ten opsigte van enkele geldsomme wat kragtens artikel 45 of 49 van die Hooftwet toegeken is voor die inwerkingtreding van hierdie maatregel.

KLOUSULE SESTIEN

Die wysiging sal die uitwerking hê dat die bepalinge van die Wet met betrekking tot Bantoenabestaandes in ooreenstemming gebring word met die wat op die ander bevolkingsgroepe van toepassing is en wat onder andere geregting is op pensioene kragtens artikel 40 en om toewysing van sodanige pensioene na goeiddunke toe te laat waar daar in die geval van 'n Bantoe meer as een weduwee betrokke is. Toelaes ten opsigte van begrafniskoste sal vir al die bevolkingsgroepe kragtens artikel 40 (2) op dieselfde basis betaalbaar wees.

(3) In hierdie artikel beteken „nabestaandes”, wanneer daar geen nabestaandes is nie soos in artikel 4 omskryf, ook enige persoon wat, na die mening van die Kommissaris, algeheel of gedeeltelik van die werksman afhanklik was.”

(2) Wanneer 'n Bantoewerksman sterf as gevolg van 'n ongeval, kan die Kommissaris na goeiddunke, uit die Ongevallefonds betaal, of die werkgewer individueel aanspreeklik gelas om te betaal, na gelang van die geval, die redelike begrafniskoste van die werksman, tot 'n bedrag van hoogstens vyf-en-sewentig rand.

„86. Skadeloosstelling in geval van dood.—(1) Wanneer 'n Bantoe werksman as gevolg van 'n ongeval sterf en nabestaandes nalaat, dan is daardie nabestaandes geregting op sodanige enkele geldsomm as skadeloosstelling as wat die Kommissaris met die oog op die aantal nabestaandes en die mate van afhanklikheid en met behoorlike inagneming van enige skadeloosstelling wat reeds ingevolge artikel 85 ten opsigte van dieselfde ongeval aan die werksman betaal is, billik ag maar nie meer nie in die geheel as die enkele geldsomm wat aan die werksman betaalbaar sou gewees het vir blywende algehele arbeidsongeskiktheid.

Artikel 86 van die Wet wat deur klousule 15 verwang staan te word, lui tans soos volg:

begrafnisonkoste van 'n Blanke, Kleurling of Asiatiese werksman, terwyl artikel 86 (2) voorsiening maak vir die betaling van 'n bedrag van R75 ten opsigte van 'n Bantoe. Die voorgestelde wysiging saamgelees met die voorgestelde wysiging van artikel 86—vide klousule 15, verhoog die maksimum bedrag na R250 ten opsigte van alle bevolkingsgroepe.

Subklousule (d)

Artikel 40 (4) (a) van die Wet bepaal dat die pensioen betaalbaar aan 'n weduwee of sieklike wewenaar verval as sy of hy sterf, trou of weer trou. Kragtens die voorgestelde wysiging sal sodanige pensioen voortgaan indien 'n weduwee of sieklike wewenaar trou of weer trou.

Artikel 40 (4) (c) van die Wet wat deur klousule 7 (e) geskrap staan te word, lui tans soos volg:

„(c) aan 'n weduwee of sieklike wewenaar wat trou of weer trou word 'n enkele geldsom gelyk aan dertig maal haar of sy maandelikse pensioen betaal.”.

Hierdie wysiging spruit voort uit klousule 7 (d) van die Wetsontwerp.

Subklousule (a)

Artikel 49 (1) van die Wet bepaal dat 'n gedeelte van 'n pensioen of indien die pensioen 'n voorgeskrewe bedrag nie te bowe gaan nie, die volle pensioen betaalbaar aan 'n werksman ten opsigte van blywende arbeidsongeskiktheid op aansoek van die werksman in 'n enkele geldsom omgeset kan word. Die voorgestelde wysiging maak dit vir die Kommissaris moontlik om omsettings ook ten opsigte van pensioene wat aan nabestaandes toegeken is, goed te keur en om die inisiatief te neem by die bewerkstelling van omsettings.

Subklousule (b)

Kragtens artikel 49 (2) van die Wet kan die volle pensioen ook omgeset word indien die maandelikse oorskot betaalbaar na omsetting van 'n gedeelte daarvan minder is as R2. Die voorgestelde wysiging verhoog die bedrag van sodanige oorskot na R10.

KLOUSULE NEGE

Hierdie wysiging word genoodsaak deur die vervanging van artikel 86 van die Wet—vide klousule 15 van die Wetsontwerp.

KLOUSULE TIEN

Die voorgestelde wysiging sal die Kommissaris ook magtig om aan sodanige werkgewer of onderlinge vereniging goedkeuring te verleen om voorlopige skikkings te maak ten opsigte van enkele geldsomme betaalbaar kragtens artikel 45 of 49 in plaas van pensioene.

Hy kan daardie reg uitoefen of deur in 'n geding deur die werksman teen die derde party ingestel, tussenbei te tree, of deur self geregtelike stappe te doen. Die voorgestelde wysiging maak voorsiening dat die Kommissaris as alternatief met die Motorvoertuigassuransiefonds 'n ooreenkoms kan aangaan vir die betaling van 'n globale bedrag jaarliks aan die Ongevallefonds in plaas van afsonderlike bedrae van gemagtigde versekeraars ten opsigte van elke individuele geval te vorder, soos tans die geval is.

REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM ON THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION AMENDMENT BILL, 1976

CLAUSE ONE

In terms of section 3 (2) (b) of the Act, persons whose earnings exceed R7 260 per annum are excluded from the scope of the Act. The proposed amendment will bring all persons whose earnings do not exceed R9 600 per annum within the scope of the Act.

CLAUSE TWO

This amendment is partly consequential on clause 15 of the Bill and has the effect of extending the meaning of the expression "dependant" in the case of the Non-Bantu so as to include as in the case of the Bantu, also any person who in the opinion of the Commissioner was partly dependent upon the workman for the necessaries of life.

CLAUSE THREE

Subclause (a)

This amendment is necessitated by the substitution of section 86 of the Act—vide clause 15 of the Bill.

Subclause (b)

In terms of section 8 (1) (b) of the Act the Commissioner has a right to institute legal proceedings for the recovery of compensation which he is obliged to pay in terms of the Act, in the event of a third party being involved who is liable for the payment of damages in terms of the Compulsory Motor Vehicle Insurance Act or Common Law. He may exercise such right either by intervening in proceedings instituted by the workman against the third party or by instituting separate proceedings. The proposed amendment provides that the Commissioner may as an alternative enter into an agreement with the Motor Vehicle Assurance Fund for the payment of a global sum annually to the Accident Fund instead of recovering separate amounts from authorized insurers in respect of every individual case as at present.

CLAUSE FOUR

Section 31 (1) (a) (ii) provides that in the case of dependants the Commissioner may in his discretion make allowance for any benefits granted to them under any law on account of the injury, death or ill-health or any physical disablement of the workman. The proposed amendment is partly consequential on clause 8 of the Bill and empowers the Commissioner to make allowance also for lump sums awarded to workmen in terms of section 45 or 49.

CLAUSE FIVE

Subclause (a)

In terms of section 38 (1) (a) of the Act, periodical payments to a workman for temporary total disablement are calculated at a rate of 75% of the monthly earnings of the workman up to R247 of such earnings. The effect of the proposed amendment is that such payments will be calculated at a rate of 75% of the workman's monthly earnings up to R400 of such earnings and the maximum monthly periodical payments will thus increase from R185,25 to R300.

towards the necessary burial expenses of a White, Coloured or Asiatic workman, while section 86 (2) provides for the payment of an amount of R75 in respect of a Bantu. The proposed amendment read with the proposed amendment of section 86—vide clause 15, increases the maximum allowance to R250 in respect of all population groups.

Section 40 (4) (a) of the Act provides that the pension payable to a widow or invalid widower will cease if she or he dies, marries or remarries. In terms of the proposed amendment such pension will continue if a widow or invalid widower marries or remarries.

Subclause (e)

Section 40 (4) (c) of the Act, which clause 7 (e) proposes to delete, at present reads as follows:

“(c) a widow or invalid widower who marries or remarries shall be paid a lump sum equivalent to thirty times her or his monthly pension.”.

This amendment is consequential on clause 7 (d) of the Bill.

CLAUSE EIGHT

Subclause (a)

Section 49 (1) of the Act provides that a portion of a pension, or if the pension does not exceed a prescribed amount, the whole of the pension payable to a workman in respect of permanent disablement, may upon the application of the workman be commuted into a lump sum. The proposed amendment makes it possible for the Commissioner to approve commutations also in respect of pensions awarded to dependants and to take the initiative for effecting commutations.

Subclause (b)

In terms of section 49 (2) of the Act the whole of a pension may also be commuted if the monthly balance payable after commutation of a portion thereof is less than R2. The proposed amendment increases the amount of such balance to R10.

CLAUSE NINE

This amendment is necessitated by the substitution of section 86 of the Act—vide clause 15 of the Bill.

CLAUSE TEN

Section 63 (1) of the Act provides that the Commissioner may authorize an employer individually liable i.e. an employer who in terms of section 70 is exempted from paying assessments to the Accident Fund or a mutual association licensed in terms of section 95 (1) to carry on the business of insurance of employers against their liabilities to workmen under the Act, to make provisional settlements of compensation claims by workmen. The proposed amendment will also empower the Commissioner to authorize such an employer or mutual association to make provisional settlements in respect of lump sums payable under section 45 or 49 in lieu of pensions.

CLAUSES ELEVEN AND TWELVE

These amendments are necessitated by the substitution of section 86 of the Act—vide clause 15 of the Bill.

CLAUSE FIFTEEN

Section 86 of the Act, which clause 15 proposes to substitute, at present reads as follows:

“86. Compensation in case of death.—(1) Where a Bantu workman dies as the result of an accident, and leaves dependants, such dependants shall be entitled as compensation to such lump sum as the Commissioner deems equitable, according to the number of dependants and the degree of dependency, and with due regard to any compensation previously paid to the workman in terms of section 85 in respect of the same accident but not exceeding in the aggregate the lump sum that would have been payable to the workman for permanent total disablement.

(2) Where a Bantu workman dies as the result of an accident, the Commissioner may, in his discretion, pay out of the Accident Fund, or direct the employer individually liable to pay, as the case may be, the reasonable expenses of the burial of the workman, not exceeding an amount of seventy-five rand.

(3) In this section “dependants” shall, where there are no dependants as defined in section 4, include any person who, in the opinion of the Commissioner, was totally or partially dependent upon the workman.”

The amendment will have the effect of bringing the provisions of the Act in relation to Bantu dependants into line with those applicable to the other population groups who are, inter alia, entitled to pensions in terms of section 40 and to allow discretion in regard to the allocation of such pensions where in the case of the Bantu more than one widow is involved. Allowances for burial expenses will be payable in terms of section 40 (2) on the same basis for all the population groups.

CLAUSE SIXTEEN

This clause deals with the date of commencement of the measure and its short title. In terms of the said clause all the provisions come into operation on a date to be fixed by the State President by proclamation in the Gazette. The amendments effected by clauses 1, 2, 5, 6, 7 (a), 7 (b), 7 (c), 13, 14 and 15 will, however, not apply with reference to accidents which occurred prior to the date of commencement of this measure. Furthermore, the amendments effected by clauses 7 (d), 7 (e), 8 and 10 will not apply in respect of cases where the pension concerned has, in terms of the principal Act, prior to its amendment, ceased from a date prior to the date of commencement of this measure. The amendment effected by clause 4 will not apply with reference to lump sums awarded in terms of section 45 or 49 of the principal Act prior to the date of commencement of this measure.

- (a) indien sodanige arbeidsongeskiktheid na afloop van die genoemde tydperk voortduur, die Kommissaris na goeë dunde die voortsetting van sodanige uitkerings kan gelas vir sodanige verdere tydperk of tydperke as wat hy van tyd tot tyd mag bepaal;
- (b) by die bepaling van die skadeloosstelling kragtens hierdie artikel, die bedrag van die maandelikse verdienste van 'n werksman bo tweehonderd sewe-en-veertig rand buite rekening gelaat word.”.

Die uitwerking van die voorgestelde wysiging is dat Bantoes nou op dieselfde basis as al die ander bevolkingsgroepe behandel sal word en periodieke uitkerings kragtens artikel 38 van die Wet sal ontvang.

KLOUSULE VEERTIEN

Artikel 85 van die Wet wat deur klousule 14 geskrap staan te word, luitans soos volg:

„85. Skadeloosstelling in geval van blywende arbeidsongeskiktheid.— (1) Die skadeloosstelling vir blywende arbeidsongeskiktheid betaalbaar in geval van 'n Bantowerksman is as volg—

- (a) waar die graad van arbeidsongeskiktheid dertig persent is, 'n enkele geldsom gelyk aan twaalf maal die maandelikse verdienste van die werksman tot veertig rand van daardie verdienste, benewens tien maal sy maandelikse verdienste bo veertig rand tot tweehonderd sewe-en-veertig rand;
- (b) waar die graad van arbeidsongeskiktheid minder as dertig persent is, 'n enkele geldsom wat tot 'n enkele geldsom volgens paragraaf (a) bereken, in dieselfde verhouding staan as die graad van arbeidsongeskiktheid tot dertig persent;
- (c) waar die graad van arbeidsongeskiktheid honderd persent is, 'n enkele geldsom gelyk aan agt-en-veertig maal die maandelikse verdienste van die werksman tot veertig rand van daardie verdienste benewens dertig maal sy maandelikse verdienste bo veertig rand tot tweehonderd sewe-en-veertig rand, met 'n minimum skadeloosstelling van vier honderd en tagtig rand;
- (d) waar die graad van arbeidsongeskiktheid minder as honderd persent maar meer as dertig persent is, 'n enkele geldsom wat tot 'n enkele geldsom volgens paragraaf (c) bereken, in dieselfde verhouding staan as die graad van arbeidsongeskiktheid tot honderd persent.

(2) Van enige skadeloosstelling toegewys ingevolge hierdie artikel, word geen bedrag afgetrek nie weens periodieke uitkerings vir tydelike arbeidsongeskiktheid betaal ingevolge artikels 38 en 84.

(3) By die bepaling van die skadeloosstelling kragtens hierdie artikel word die bedrag van die maandelikse verdienste van 'n werksman bo tweehonderd sewe-en-veertig rand buite rekening gelaat.”.

Die skapping van hierdie artikel sal die uitwerking hê dat Bantowerksmense vir blywende arbeidsongeskiktheid op dieselfde basis as die ander bevolkingsgroepe vergoed sal word en derhalwe onder andere op pensioene kragtens artikel 39 van die Wet geregtig sal wees indien die graad van blywende arbeidsongeskiktheid hoër as 30% is.

Subklousule (b)

Artikel 38 (4) van die Wet bepaal dat die bedrag van 'n werksman se maandelikse verdienste bo R247 buite rekening gelaat moet word by die bepaling van periodieke uitkerings. Kragtens die voorgestelde wysiging wat voortspruit uit subklousule (a) van klousule 5 word die bedrag van enige maandelikse verdienste van 'n werksman bo R400 buite rekening gelaat.

Hierdie wysiging word genoodsaak deur die skraping van artikel 84 van die Wet—vide klousule 13 van die Wetsontwerp.

KLOUSULE SES

Subklousule (a)

Artikel 39 (1) (a) van die Wet bepaal dat waar 'n werksman se graad van blywende arbeidsongeskiktheid 30% is, die skadeloosstelling ten opsigte daarvan bereken word op 'n basis van 'n enkele geldsom gelyk aan twaalf maal die maandelikse verdienste van die werksman tot R40 van daardie verdienste, benewens tien maal sy maandelikse verdienste bo R40 tot R247. Kragtens die voorgestelde wysiging word die bedrag van R247 na R400 verhoog. Die maksimum enkele geldsom sal gevolglik van R2 550 tot R4 080 styg.

Artikel 39 (1) (c) van die Wet bepaal, onder andere, dat waar die graad van arbeidsongeskiktheid 100% is, 'n maandelikse pensioen betaalbaar is gelyk aan 75% van die maandelikse verdienste van die werksman tot R247 van daardie verdienste. Kragtens die voorgestelde wysiging word die bedrag van R247 na R400 verhoog as gevolg waarvan die maksimum maandelikse pensioen R300 sal wees in plaas van die huidige R185,25.

Subklousule (b)

Artikel 39 (2) van die Wet bepaal dat by die bepaling van die skadeloosstelling betaalbaar kragtens artikel 39 (1) word enige bedrag van die maandelikse verdienste van 'n werksman bo R247 buite rekening gelaat. Die voorgestelde wysiging wat voortspruit uit subklousule (a) van klousule 6, verhoog die bedrag van R247 na R400.

KLOUSULE SEWE

Subklousule (a)

Kragtens artikel 40 (1) (c) (iv) van die Wet kan die Kommissaris die bedrag betaalbaar ten opsigte van pensioene wat aan afhanklike kinders toegeken is, verhoog tot 'n maksimum van R1 500 of twee jaar van 'n werksman se verdienste na gelang watter bedrag die kleinste is indien die werksman nie 'n weduwee of sieklike wewenaar as 'n nabestaande nalaat nie en die bedrag betaalbaar ten opsigte van pensioene minder is as R1 500 of twee jaar van die werksman se verdienste. Die voorgestelde wysiging verhoog die bedrag van R1 500 na R2 500.

Subklousule (b)

Artikel 40 (1) (e) van die Wet bepaal dat indien 'n werksman nie 'n weduwee of sieklike wewenaar of kinders of ander persone wat heeltemal afhanklik was, nalaat nie, kan die Kommissaris na goeddunke aan nabestaandes wat gedeeltelik van die werksman afhanklik was, 'n enkele geldsom toeken wat nie groter is nie as 'n som wat in dieselfde verhouding staan tot twee jaar se verdienste of R1 500, watter ook die minste is, as die graad van afhanklikheid tot algehele afhanklikheid. Die voorgestelde wysiging verhoog die bedrag van R1 500 tot R2 500.

SUNDAY TRIBUNE, JANUARY 25, 1976

I'LL CLEAR

By DEREK TAYLOR

WORKMEN'S Compensation Commissioner Okkie Grobbelaar this week pledged a personal investigation of all cash claims lost or delayed in the Fund's under-staffed clerical systems.

A Sunday Tribune investigation disclosed that many workmen, employers and medical specialists faced delays of a year or more in getting their money — or even an answer — from the Fund.

Though the Fund processes more than 500 000 cash awards a year, some doctors fear that delays in assessing claims, particularly for re-opened cases, can aggravate the condition of patients who wait for months before specialist treatment is approved.

Among the cases bogged down in the Fund's paper river, the Sunday Tribune discovered:

- A chef whose doctor applied to the Fund for permission to resume treating him for a back injury last October. Doctor and patient are still waiting for a reply from the Fund's Pretoria headquarters.

- An employer who paid an injured workman 10 months wages while he was unable to work and has waited for over a year for a reply to a claim on the Fund.

- African workers who are not allowed to take their injuries compensation in a lump sum. Instead, they are forced to accept monthly payments of about R15 — which can only be collected in their tribal home area. In one case, it would cost the recipient R10 in travelling expenses to pick up his R15.

- Medical specialists who have been owed thousands of rands for as long as 15 months after treatments given on behalf of the Fund. They are forced to pay tax on the money, though they have not received it.

- Workmen whose claims for compensation drag on for months or even years, despite assistance from welfare experts in preparing their applications.

Scales of compensation are lagging badly behind the soaring cost of living, according to some trade unionists.

"For an almost totally incapacitated Black worker to be fobbed off with R1 000 or so, in a lump sum or pension supplement, was never a large gesture," one trade unionist commented.

Chronic shortage

"Today it is effectively 30 percent less than it was when the scales were last revised."

The Fund's problems include a chronic shortage of suitable clerical staff, now common to almost all government departments.

So pressing was this particular shortage that the commission introduced an incentive bonus system some years ago to speed the flood of papers and certificates.

Compensation chief pledges personal claims get bogged down in red tape

Commissioner Grobbelaar believes the advantages of speed in paying his workers piecework bonuses outweigh the risks of sloppy processing.

"This is an enormous operation — you could describe it as the very biggest insurance system of its kind in the country," he said.

"We have accomplished great improvements in productivity and we are continually re-appraising the system to look for more.

"I recognise the fact that the less experienced people — and you must remember we also share the problem of a very large staff turnover with other departments — can create more delays than they cure by pushing through hastily processed work.

"But employers and some doctors are responsible for a very high proportion of delays because they submit incomplete or improperly prepared claims."

This does not explain delays of more than a year in obtaining an answer of any kind from the Fund.

Mrs Solvig Piper of the Black Sash Advice Bureau, in Durban, finds an average of two or three Black claimants a day call on her office for help in dealing with the Fund.

"It is very hard to get these problems cleared up," she said.

"It is quite normal, in our experience, for months to go by before receiving an acknowledgement or answer to correspondence with the Fund.

"We see many cases of hardship caused by the refusal to pay out workers' compensation in lump sums. Obviously, each case must be checked carefully as some recipients need protection or help in using such sums.

"But it is unbelievably difficult to get any case at all considered with due speed and attention."

Many of such hardship cases are caused by the commission's inability to find workers who are owed compensation within a reasonable time.

More than R2 500 000 remains unclaimed by some 11 000 people — 80 percent of them African — in the Fund's trust account.

The job of tracing and paying claimants who are not easily found is passed to the Department of Bantu Affairs which, to the annoyance of many of the recipients, refuses to hand over the lump sum involved.

The 184 000 employers, whose contributions provide the Fund with about R28 000 000 a year, provide the Fund's 450 staff members with headaches beyond

Small businesses come and go and their contributions must be policed and recouped.

"But the workings of the fund penalise the humane or considerate employer," one businessman complained.

"When my staff go sick or are incapacitated I don't wait for the Fund to give me the go-ahead to get them proper medical treatment and maintain their wages.

"I pay their wages as long as they are off work, although I have no legal obligation to do so.

"The Fund, which we business people maintain, is supposed to pay me back three-quarters of the sick man's wages. But try and get it!

"I've been waiting nearly a year to get back ten months wages I paid one of our men. They don't even answer registered letters."

Many general practitioners report a significant improvement in the Fund's reactions to their claims over the past year.

R14 000 owed

But for some specialists hold-ups of a year or more are still occurring.

Two Durban specialists, chosen at random, worked out that the Fund owed them a total of R14 000 — on which they have already had to pay tax — for cases going back as far as 18 months.

Commissioner Grobbelaar accepted the complaints.

"If anyone encounters undue delays or some other intransigent problem, I invite them to write to me personally," he said this week.

"I don't want people to send me routine requests. If they do, they will be inviting a slight delay because I will re-route them.

"But I guarantee that any real problem sent to me will be personally and thoroughly investigated."

Senator Eric Winchester, an insurance specialist, said that while the Fund was doing an excellent job in successfully processing such a large volume of work, its problems reinforced the need for an ombudsman.

"Systems reduce the humanity required for the non-routine case even as they improve overall efficiency," he said.

"We need the independent authority of the ombudsman to help such state services to preserve

199. Dr. A. L. BORAINÉ asked the Minister of Labour:

- (1) What was the balance in the Accident Fund at the close of the 1974-75 financial year;
- (2) (a) what was the total (i) income from assessments and (ii) amount paid out in compensation and medical aid expenses during that year and (b) to how many claimants were benefits paid;
- (3) (a) what was the total amount of unclaimed moneys as at 28 February 1975 and (b) how many awards were unclaimed at that date.

The MINISTER OF LABOUR:

- (1) Statutory reserve fund plus cash in hand (excluding unclaimed moneys) R44 613 331.
- (2) (a) (i) R35 767 051.
(ii) R26 687 828.
(b) 242 000.

Claims under Workmen's Compensation Act

196. Mr. P. A. PYPER asked the Minister of Labour:

- (1) (a) How many persons in 1975 submitted claims under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1941, in respect of moneys unclaimed, after publication of the list of unclaimed amounts in the Government Gazette in 1974, (b) what was the total amount claimed and (c) how many amounts remained unclaimed;
- (2) whether any additional notification of unclaimed moneys is being considered; if not, why not.

The MINISTER OF LABOUR:

- (1) (a) and (b) Several lists of unclaimed moneys are published annually. In response to the 1974 publications 764 claims amounting to R25 858 were received and paid during 1974 and 300 claims amounting to R19 481 were received and paid during 1975.
- (c) A total amount of R207 212 in respect of 10 480 cases remained unclaimed.
- (2) Before an amount is transferred to the unclaimed moneys account, enquiries are made at all possible addresses available to the Commissioner. Residential addresses and addresses of dependants or next-of-kin are furnished to the Commissioner on the employers' reports of accidents and also on claims for compensation which are completed by workmen or on their behalf. In many instances the workmen, however, fail to return to their employers after the accident and also leave their last known address before the awards and cheques reach them.

In so far as Bantu are concerned, the South African Broadcasting Corporation has also been approached with a view to rendering assistance in the form of announcements over Radio Bantu. Copies of the Government Gazette, in which a list of unclaimed moneys are published, are also forwarded to the Department of Information for publication in seven different Bantu magazines. Particulars are also published in local newspapers. The regulations have also been amended and the requirements in regard to the reporting of accidents have been prescribed in detail. The surname, ethnic group and tribe of the Bantu must now also be furnished in order that the tribal heads can be approached with a view to tracing the workman. At present it is also the practice to refer the matter to the Bantu Reference Bureau where the national identity number of the Bantu is available. This information is then stored in a computer. Should the whereabouts of the workman become known, e.g. when he applies for a duplicate reference book or registers for employment, this information is relayed to the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner and a cheque is reissued in favour of the workman.

As all practicable steps are already being taken to trace the beneficiaries, it is not clear what additional notification the honourable member has in mind.

Compensation of R65 for boy who lost arms

Staff Reporter

AN African boy aged 10 who lost both his arms in a machine accident owes the Boksburg-Benoni Hospital R1,500 for treatment, but has so far received only R65 compensation.

Ben Senkha was admitted to hospital on November 13, 1973, as a Workman's Compensation Act case, although he was then a minor.

His grandparents, Mr John Senkha, 69, and his wife, Paulina, 62, are trying to find out who will pay his medical fees.

They are working as farm labourers in Grasmere.

According to a medical report, Ben was admitted to the Boksburg-Benoni Hospital after an electric sharpening machine cut both hands while he was at work on the morning of November 13. Both arms were amputated above the elbow.

He was in hospital for 141 days at R8 a day during his first admission and for 55 days, also at R8 a day, during a second admission.

According to forms completed by his former employer, Mr F. J. Geldenhuys, a farmer at Witpoortjie in Brakpan where the accident took place, Ben's occupation was given as "an employee". How the accident happened is briefly stated in the form.

A worried Mrs Senkha told the Rand Daily Mail yesterday she went to the Witpoortjie farm with Ben to collect R65 as part of compensation for his injury.

The money, she said, was given her last month by another farmer, Mr J. H. P. du Plessis. He handed over the cash on behalf of Mr Geldenhuys, whom, she said, had since left Witpoortjie.

"Mr Du Plessis said I should call again for more cash. We don't know how much it is. But what we are worried about is the huge fee owed to the hospital. Who will pay it?" she asked.

Ben had left school at the time of the accident. He worked at the farm for R1,20 a week and his job, among other things, was pulling up weeds in the fields.

After his treatment at Boksburg-Benoni Hospital, he was transferred to Natspruit Hospital where he was fitted with artificial arms.

That a great many employers are still grossly negligent when it comes to reporting industrial accidents?

According to his latest report (for the year ended February 1975) the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner discovered 25 816 cases where employers had failed to report accidents, or alleged accidents, to him. Nearly 7 000 employers were summoned by the Department of Labour to supply information.

Social Security, Workmen's Compensation

ablement caused by an industrial accident. Hitherto, compensation payable to Africans has been predominantly in the form of lump sums rather than pensions, and the net effect has usually been that disabled Africans have been much worse off financially than other disabled workers.

The Bill puts the compensation payable to disabled Africans or dependents of Africans killed at work on the same basis as Whites, Coloureds and Asians.

It also increases (from R75 for Africans and R150 for others) the maximum amount which the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner is entitled to contribute towards funeral expenses, and makes it the same for all races: R250.

Not only Africans, but workers of all races disabled on the job will benefit from the Bill, since compensation is increased. The Bill increases the maximum lump sum payable from R2 550 to R4 080, and the maximum pension from R185,25 to R300.

Certain of the benefits payable to dependents of a worker killed on the job are also increased. The Bill further provides that pensions payable to widows or invalid widowers can continue on remarriage. In the case of Africans, compensation can now be allocated between two or more widows.

The Bill also raises the earnings ceiling up to which employees fall within the scope of the Act, from R7 260 to R9 600.

Regretably, however, the enormous problem of unclaimed awards under the Act remains unsolved. According to figures given to Parliament earlier this year, a whopping 176 000 awards from the Accident Fund (totalling over R3m) were unclaimed as at February 28 last year.

Pretoria Bureau
Unclaimed compensation to injured workers has accumulated over the past 33 years to total R3-million.

Most is owed to black workers who have not given changes of address.

The workmen's compensation commissioner in Pretoria, Mr O Grobbelaar, said some were successfully traced through Bantu Affairs commissioners. In other cases, where the commissioner was alerted, employers were asked to keep records of the injured employees' addresses.

Mr Grobbelaar said the right of injured workers to compensation never lapsed.

He said the money could be used for no other purpose.

Lists of beneficiaries were published at regular intervals in the Government Gazette and in Department of Information publications.

Politics

All workers to get equal benefits

By CHRIS FREIMOND

THE Workmen's Compensation Act is to be amended to apply to all workers on an equal basis.

This was announced by the Minister of Labour, Mr Fanie Botha, during an address to a conference of the South African Association of Municipal Employees in Germiston yesterday.

He said that during this year's legislative programme the Act would be amended to raise maximum salary level at which a worker was entitled to benefits.

Monthly compensation and pensions for disability would also be increased, he said.

Mr Botha also claimed workers of all races should have jobs which ensured maximum productivity and harmonious labour relations.

Mr Botha said experience had shown that the way a worker was treated was closely related to his productivity — all-important at the present time.

Harmonious cooperation between various groups of workers was in the interests of the workers, their employers and South Africa's future, he said.

The country could not afford unrest among its diverse labour force. Industrial strife could result in irreparable damage to the economy. He urged workers to exercise self-restraint in demands for higher wages and salaries when the short-term measures of the anti-inflation manifesto ended later this month.

A uniform increase in productivity in all sections of commerce and industry was one of the strongest measures with which to combat inflation, Mr Botha said.

Harder work and higher productivity should be kept in mind when pay demands were made.

South Africa could ensure the security of her people only if the economy was healthy. Unless everybody helped to fight inflation, the country could lose its competitive position in a hostile world, he added.

Legless on R15 a month

16/7/76 AM

Mercury Reporter

LABOURER Mr. William Kotsedi faced great pain a year ago when he lost a leg at work. But that was little to the pain he is now feeling because he cannot find work to keep his wife and three children.

Officials consider him capable of working, as before, in spite of his amputation. The Workmen's Compensation Commissioner says he has only a 45 percent disability.

Mr. Kotsedi now depends on his disability grant of R15 a month, R1 less than the hire purchase instalment on his furniture and considerably less than the cost of feeding and educating three children.

His wife has managed to find part-time work bringing in about R15 a week. Mr. Kotsedi stays at home to do the chores—arduous for a limbless man, especially in a township.

He lost his left leg, and his right heel was crushed, in a building site accident a year ago. He has an artificial leg but needs a crutch.

Since the accident, he had been receiving total disability pay of R84 a month from his employers, Grinaker Construction.

This was being paid until the extent of his disability could be assessed. Grinakers will be repaid out of Workmen's Compensation.

MR. WILLIAM Kotsedi, with the form announcing his monthly compensation of R15 for the loss of a leg. He is seen at home in Impumalanga Township.

Civil Defence Act is 'unfair'

Mercury Reporter

PIETERMARITZBURG — Under existing legislation there is apparently no provision to compensate a volunteer or his dependants if he is killed or injured in civil defence activities.

And, a draft ordinance prepared in terms of new legislation, which indemnifies volunteers against medical expenses through injury, has been labelled as "unfair" because it could hamper recruiting.

This emerged here yesterday at the Natal Municipal Association civil defence planning seminar, attended by delegates from more than 60 local authorities and organisations.

Dealing with the insurance aspects of civil defence, Mr. D. M. Johnston, Durban municipal financial officer (insurance), said that the position of the volunteer under existing legislation was regrettably not clear.

But, said Mr. Johnston, the position would be clarified when the recently promulgated Civil Defence Act, 1977, came into effect and the Provinces enacted the appropriate ordinances.

Supply of fingerlings is a great problem because of distances, and the fact that the Transkei Hatchery does not seem to have come into operation yet. Dr Kanis has offered to give his excess fingerlings away at the end of the year, provided they are fetched from Madwelani.

The EDA fieldworker spoke at a recent Conference of the Transkei/Ciskei Research Organisation in Umtata, and discovered that there was a keen interest in fish farming among those conducting development work. It seems likely therefore that there will be more fishing activity in that area in the future.

 Roll up, roll up (302)

To the Workmen's Compensation Commission, R170 000 is little more than a drop in the ocean. But it could mean a great deal to the 4 000 or so injured workmen who are missing out on that money.

Every six months, the commission prints, in the Government Gazette, a list of workers who are entitled to claim benefits but have not done so. The 4 000 and R170 000 figures are the totals from the latest list, published this week.

A spokesman for the commission points out that that is not an awful lot when compared with the total claims paid out in any one year — the total paid out in compensation for 1976 (the last year for which figures are available) was around R15m. The unclaimed monies do not leave the fund — they go into a reserve where they wait to be collected (there is no time limit on when the injured workman can collect his money) or are handed over to the Department of Plural Relations for its own assistance programmes for injured workmen.

Can't more be done to trace the missing beneficiaries? After all, some are owed more than R1 000. "We'd be grateful for any ideas, we've run out of them," says the spokesman. The commission, he says, is sticking to its traditional method of tracing beneficiaries (Current Affairs November 25 1977).

One option may be for employers to make an extra effort to explain to their workers what benefits they are entitled to and when they can claim them.

Wellington slogs it out... all 1 200 km

Own Correspondent

Mr Wellington Nobebe (60) walked 1 200 km. from Port Elizabeth to Pretoria, to seek redress from the Workmen's Compensation Fund.

And although he didn't get much satisfaction, by one of those happy coincidences and the generosity of a Pretoria veterinary surgeon, he returned home in comfort. The vet, who cannot be named for ethical reasons, met Wellington for the first time in the city on Tuesday when he asked the way to the Workmen's Compensation Fund office.

"Somehow I knew I would not make myself clear trying to direct him, so I took him to the fund's offices and left him there," the vet said.

On Wednesday the vet was driving along the Krugersdorp-Pretoria highway. "For some reason I found myself scanning the side of the road and when I saw someone awkwardly trying to drink water from a puddle I knew it was the same man."

The vet stopped and took his chance acquaintances home where he cleaned up, ate and spent the night. Along the way Mr Nobebe, told his story.

Nine years ago he was injured in a rockfall in the Welkom Gold mine where he worked. For more than two years he was bed-ridden and eventually went to stay with his brother, Mr Nimrod Nobebe, and his family in Port Elizabeth.

According to a medical report from the hospital Mr Nobebe is 50 percent disabled.

Since 1973, in spite of help from doctors at the various hospitals where he has been treated, Mr Nobebe has failed to get any compensation. Four days before Christmas he made up his mind to go to Pretoria. "I had no money, so I walked," he added.

Only one motorist, a black, gave Mr Nobebe a short lift on his long slog. He begged for food along the way and slept by the roadside, reaching Pretoria on Monday.

After listening to Mr Nobebe's story, the vet bought him a train ticket to Port Elizabeth.

Mr Wellington Nobebe trudges along the roadside with all his worldly possessions in a sack over his shoulder.

beth and yesterday saw him off at the Pretoria station. "I think what this good man has done for me is a sign that my luck is turning," were Mr Nobebe's last words. "I don't know how to thank him."

The marathon walker has a bad living and it is doubtful whether he would have made it back home on his feet.

Mr Nobebe did not have a reference book, passport or unemployment fund card with him when he called on the Compensation Fund authorities who were unable to take up his case as a result. He was told to report his case to the Plural Relations commissioner in Port Elizabeth.

He had a temporary identification document issued by the aid centre at New Brighton before he left.

A spokesman for the Chamber of Mines commented: "The mining industry has its own insurance company, the Rand Mutual Limited, which provides compensation for injury at work on at least the scale laid down in the Workmen's Compensation Act.

"It is inconceivable that a man with 50 percent disability should not have been compensated long ago for injuries received." The spokesman said the Chamber would investigate.

Diagnosis in dispute

Years of dispute between miners and compensation authorities have led to the appointment of a commission of inquiry into compensation for occupational diseases. The commission, headed by RAU economics professor Piet Nieuwenhuizen, met for the first time on February 2.

The diagnosis of the diseases for which compensation is available (certifiable diseases) is the focus of hot dispute. The Mine Workers' Union claims that the medical bureau for occupational diseases often fails to diagnose such diseases. Says MWU general secretary Arrie Paulus: "Often a man who dies from other causes is found after death to have had a compensable disease."

The bureau explains that minor scars caused by dust in the lungs are usually too small to be seen on X-rays, although they can be detected by post-mortem examination. Such scars are regarded as grounds for compensation despite the fact that they are not in any way disabling.

Paulus also quotes Department of Mines figures which show that 71 out of every 100 miners with 25 years of service are certified, either while alive or after death. He thus wants all miners to receive compensation after 25 years irrespective of whether they have been found to have contracted a certifiable disease. The bureau, on the other hand, maintains that many men work longer than 25 years without contracting any occupational disease.

All lesions, whether or not they impair the cardio-respiratory functions, count as certifiable. So 54% of white miners who were certified in 1976 were nevertheless fit to carry on working. But at the same time, many miners who suffer from disabling diseases unrelated to their work go without compensation.

Compensation at present does not amount to much. White miners get a lump sum of R19 800 for a disease causing more than 40% disablement. Tuberculosis sufferers get only R5 500. Black miners get a mere R1 100 for dust diseases — regardless of the extent of disablement.

Compensation records 'poor'

NEARLY all firms employing Black workers kept poor records of workmen's compensation claims, seldom had forwarding addresses and often did not inform employees when money was due to them, the Natal Coastal Region reported.

Up to 10 000 names of persons who were owed compensation appeared in Government Gazettes annually. A Black Sash check with employers found that few had proper home ad-resses for their workers and the general attitude of the compensation clerks in the firms' offices was "poor".

"Efficiency was lacking, the clerks often appeared happy enough to say that the cheque had been returned to Pretoria and the workers had left their employ."

There seemed to be little liaison between the personnel department and the compensation clerk, the report said.

Crossroads: some won't be housed

A NUMBER of Crossroads residents will not be re-housed in the new township being built for them and most of those that are re-housed will not have permanent residents' rights in the Western Cape.

This was revealed by the Director of Labour at the Western Cape Administration Board, Mr S P Pieterse. He said there would be "some people who will not be eligible to move to the new township."

In April the Minister of Co-operation and Development, Dr P Koozmoos announced "a new dispensation" for the thousands of people living in Crossroads.

He said that although the present camp would have to be demolished, a new township would be built near-by, to re-house Crossroads residents.

Three categories of people would be entitled to a house:

⊗ Black people who qualify to live and work in white urban areas, in terms of Section 10 (1) A and Section 10 (1) B of the Areas Urban Consolidation Act.

⊗ Contract workers and their families who live legally at Crossroads to be with the breadwinner.

⊗ Families where the breadwinner is not on contract but "is earning a living for them in some other legitimate way".

Mr Pieterse said no more than two families would be allowed to live in each of the houses.

Unclaimed millions

In an article "Millions to give — no takers" (The Star August 11) we were informed that R3,5-million is owing to 200 000 South Africans of all races by the Workmen's Compensation Fund. Unclaimed amounts are published periodically in the Government Gazette but how many people ever see or read them?

Every accident claim has the claimants' identity number on it and it should be possible to trace at least some of the unfortunate victims white, black, Indian or coloured through their respective departments or registration. Some of these people may be suffering great hardship and are unaware that compensation is due to them.

In The Star August 24 there was a full page of the numbers of unclaimed Defence Bonus Bonds — couldn't something similar be done for unclaimed monies with the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner?

He won't see a cent...

By Chris Shipley

Five years ago Mr Joseph Mnqayi was shot by his employer and left crippled and unable to work for his living. But the real tragedy of his plight is that although Mr Mnqayi was awarded substantial damages in court, he is unlikely to see a cent.

In 1974 Mr Mnqayi was working as a cleaner in a block of flats in Berea, Johannesburg, when he was shot by the woman caretaker. The bullet lodged near his spine and, after three months, Mr Mnqayi emerged from hospital partly paralysed.

Today, at the age of 37, he is unable to lift heavy objects, walks with the aid of a stick and still suffers occasional pain. In a court action Mr Mnqayi, who is married and a father of three, described his sex life as "a pale shadow of what I enjoyed before."

The Legal Aid Board took up the case on his behalf, but as the caretaker had disappeared, they could only sue the company that employed her and Mr Mnqayi — Renlaw Property Agents (Pty), Ltd.

MODERATE COMFORT

Last year Mr Mnqayi was eventually awarded damages of R9 260. Enough, he says, to have kept him and his family in moderate comfort on their small plot in Upper Tongaat in Natal.

But the award was made only against Renlaw Property Agents, which was part of the property empire of fugitive landlord Chaim Wainer which had been liquidated.

A writ of execution was issued but the deputy-sheriff could find no goods to attach at Renlaw's registered place of business.

One of the joint liquidators of the Wainer organisation, Mr Albert Ruskin, told The Star that Renlaw had merely been an agency for collecting rents and had never had any assets anyway.

When The Star approached the Department of Labour it found that as Mr Mnqayi was shot while off-duty, he was not eligible for workman's compensation.

The Star then approached the Department of Co-operation and Development. According to medical evidence presented in the court case Mr Mnqayi was suitable for "light or sheltered employment." A spokesman for the department said that the chances of finding such employment for a black in Johannesburg were negligible.

However, after being examined by a district surgeon, Mr Mnqayi was found to be entitled to a disability pension—of R27,50 a month.

Drink, drug accidents alert for industry

ACCIDENTS caused by drug and alcohol abuse are creeping into industrial casualty statistics. Safety and welfare organisation spokesmen say the new trend is increasing just as deaths and injuries from historical working hazards are being contained.

"A few years ago shopfloor accidents caused by drug-taking were unknown. Now they are becoming part of official figures," says National Occupational Safety Association (Nosa) general manager Bunny Matthyssen.

SA National Council for Alcoholism (Sanca) information director Viv Houreld adds: "Employers are already paying out more than R200-million a year in lost time and sickness benefits for problem drinkers on their payrolls. This is apart from medical bills and damage to vehicles through drunken driving."

Preliminary figures show an estimated 2 500 people were killed and another 74 000 permanently disabled while at work. The number of reported accidents is 350 000.

"This is 2.2% of the workforce. We hope to get the accident rate down to 2% this year," says Mr Matthyssen.

In 1951, when Nosa started, the death and serious injury rate was 4%.

"The Compensation Commission pays out R44 million annually. If that high rate had continued the bill would now be R77 million," says Mr Matthyssen.

Growing employer and worker awareness of on-the-job dangers has already reduced State compensation commission premiums from companies in 88 of the 111 categories.

The five most hazardous industries - fishing, transport, glass/brick/tile, building/construction and iron/steel - all show improved accident rates.

Mr Matthyssen says the successful educational safety programmes - already being copied in the US and Canada - will be intensified.

Mainspring of the campaign to cut casualties will be the 16 000 Nosa-trained men now being instructed in how to train work colleagues in eliminating shopfloor hazards.

Sanca's Mr Houreld says a growing danger from now will be the factory or office drunk. He warns that there are now as many women with drinking problems as men and that exposure of blacks to hard liquor for almost 20 years is now beginning taking its toll on a vast section of the national workforce.

"In 1970 men with drinking problems outnumbered women sufferers by seven to one. Now it is one to one with the overall figure rising every year," he says.

Mr Houreld adds that US statistics show 8%-10% of American adults have liquor problems with "the white South African population not far behind these figures." In the Cape an estimated 22% of adult coloured males are alcoholics.

He warns: "Alcoholism knows no race, sex or age barriers. It reaches every nook and cranny of our economic and social systems. We know of alcoholic executives, clergymen, doctors, stockbrokers, artisans, judges and politicians. You name them and there they are."

Mr Houreld says employers will have to learn to live with alcoholic workers making up a bigger portion of their payrolls than in the past and urges them to regard alcoholism as a treatable disease.

After 20 years the boss might notice that the performance of one of his best men is suffering because of drink. He can ignore it, tolerate it or help him. It is cheaper in the long run to treat alcoholism than lose a valuable employee," he adds.

Autopsies on UK alcoholics show that for every 2 200 company directors who die of liver cirrhosis only 200 barmen died of the same disease.

Near the top of the list were hoteliers (773), entertainers and musicians (550) and merchant navy officers (467). Bottom of the list with barmen were lawyers, brewers and civil engineers.

rural areas or cause of deaths' according to the Bantu Reference Bureau (Personal Communication). At least 50 000 deaths among Africans were not

DISCUSSION

The crude death rates and the standardised mortality rates for whites, Asians and 'coloureds' and urban Africans are presented in Fig. 1. The interpretation of these figures is confounded by the differences in the underlying structure of the population. The population pyramids of the various groups were pictured in Part I with the exception of the urban Africans, which appears in Fig. 2. This population shows an excess of healthy working males and lack of elderly persons as a result of the migratory labour situation.

The standardised mortality rate provides a single figure for the mortality experience of a population which can only be fully expressed in terms of a series of age specific death rates. The SMR is calculated by multiplying all the age specific mortality rates in the observed population by the corresponding numbers in the standard population, adding the number of deaths so obtained and dividing the total standard population. While this figure is independent of the age structure of the observed population, the choice of the standard population will affect the weighting given to the deaths in the various age groups. The choice of an underdeveloped population as a standard will give great weight to infant deaths and little weight to deaths among the elderly, while a developed standard population will reverse the position. The choice of standard population affects the ranking of the mortality between the observed groups. There is no 'true' answer. As the Duke of Wellington said: "There are lies, damned lies, and statistics!"

Infant mortality rates are summarised in Fig. 3. Once again, difficulty is experienced in obtaining data for Africans. Birth statistics for Africans are not published by the central government. The various medical officers of health⁹ have estimated the infant mortality rates for their urban areas. These show considerable variation. (See also ref.15). A mean figure and the range are given in Fig. 2. These de facto figures should be interpreted with caution as sick infants are often brought to the cities from rural areas. An indication of the situation in the rural areas is given by a sample survey carried out in Cape Town and Transkei among Xhosa-speaking Africans.¹² An increase in infant mortality was observed with decreasing urbanisation, the figure for the completely rural areas being of the same magnitude as those parts of the world devoid of medical services. Fig. 4 summarises the age specific mortality rates of

Woman must repay compensation

MRS G BRICKLES at the machine where she lost two of her fingers.

A RETREAT woman, who received R1 175 in compensation when she lost the use of two fingers of her left hand in an industrial accident, was told, two years later, that she had been overpaid by R624.

Mrs G Brickles of Lavender Hill, Retreat, had in the meantime spent all the money on the 'necessities of life.'

Now, four years after the accident, Mrs Brickles is still being 'advised' by the Workmen's Compensation Commission (WCC) to repay the money as 'soon as possible' from her wages of R30,50 a week.

PROBLEMS

And she says, the WCC has threatened her with legal action.

Mrs Brickles's problems started in 1976 when, after an accident at work, she had to have two fingers amputated.

When part of her first finger was amputated she received R551,40 in compensation from the WCC. Later when the second finger was removed she received R624,84.

'Because the second payment arrived 10 months after the first, I genuinely believed the first to be for the first finger and the second for the other.'

'I had no reason to believe this was not the normal working of the WCC.'

APPEALED

'I have repeatedly appealed to the commissioner to review my case and reduce the claim to an amount which is within my means.'

'So far, after numerous letters to the Workmen's Compensation Commission, I have not had the slightest show of sympathy from them.'

'All I received was a reminder from them that if the money was not paid before Friday, March 7, legal proceedings would be instituted against me.'

The commissioner, Mr J M van der Merwe, said it was regrettable he could not reduce the amount.

'We are, however, prepared to accept a reasonable monthly or weekly refund.'

channels between his employer, the Department of Labour, the Department of Social Welfare and Pensions and the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner.

By the middle of last year both Commandant Crouse and Mr Geoff Oldfield, NRP MP for Umbilo — veterans of many struggles on behalf of military and civil pensioners — were working on Sergeant X's case.

Mr Oldfield was notified that Sergeant X was still in the service of his department and no decision about his discharge had been taken. Until then he would receive his full salary.

However, if he was discharged with effect from September 1, 1979, as a result of injuries suffered in the course of military service, and if the disability was 100 per cent, he would be entitled to a gratuity of R15 452, and a monthly pension of R374,41.

"Then on June 14, Sergeant X called me, saying he was to be discharged by his employer," Commandant Crouse said. "I told him of the letter Mr Oldfield had received and heard nothing more from him."

Late in February Commandant Crouse was astounded to hear that Sergeant X had not yet received the gratuity and pension promised him. Since being retired at the end of October last year he had been living on a monthly pension of R104,34 and a service gratuity which had been spent on living expenses.

Sergeant X wrote to Commandant Crouse on March 3, outlining his difficulties. Worried and bitter, he pointed out that the accident which had lamed him had not been due to negligence on his part. He said he felt he deserved a better treatment.

"I called Mr Oldfield at once and sent him a copy of the letter," Commandant Crouse said. "He immediately contacted the Departments of Labour and of Social Welfare and Pensions."

The first fruits of Mr Oldfield's efforts came in the middle of March in the form of a letter to Sergeant X from the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, saying he had been awarded a 100 per cent disability pension of R300 a month, plus R40 attendance allowance.

This was followed soon after by a letter to Mr Oldfield from the Department of Social Welfare and Pensions, stating that Sergeant X was to receive an immediate gratuity of R15 424,72, consisting of R12 343,22 in terms of the General Pensions Act, 1979; workmen's compensation arrears between November 1, 1979, and March 31, 1980; and R2 390,50 for arrears in pension in terms of the General Pensions Act, up to March 31, 1980.

From today he is to receive a total monthly pension of R722,44 a month, consisting of R340 from workmen's compensation, R278,10 in terms of the General Pensions Act, and R104,34 from the Government Service Fund (his departmental pension).

Sergeant X had only one comment to make about his long wait for help: "If this has happened to me, it must be happening to some other blokes too." — DDC.

'n Ondersoek deur die Departement Landbou-ekonomie van die Universiteit van Stellenbosch na die leerstylprofiel van eerstejaar-studente wat in 1977 ingeskryf was vir die graadkursus B. in Landboubestuur het aan die lig gebring dat die meerderheid as divergeerders geklassifiseer kan word. Hierdie studente verkies dus 'n leerstyl wat onder andere gegrond is op konkrete ervaring. 'n Waarskynlike verklaring hiervoor is dat die meeste van hierdie studente hulle kinderjare op plase deurgebring het waar hulle van kleins af aangeleer het om nuwe begrippe te assosieer met konkrete onderwerpe. Dit moet egter in gedagte gehou word dat die leerstyl nie noodwendig staties is nie, maar waarskynlik kan ontwikkel vanaf konkrete ervaring in 'n regsom rigting na aktiewe eksperimentering.

Die implikasies van die feit dat die leerstyl van die meerderheid van studente (en dit geld ook waarskynlik vir boerderybestuurstudente aan ander universiteite in Suid-Afrika) verkieslik op konkrete ervaring gebaseer is, is die

For most Capetonians April fool's day is a time for pranks and jokes. But for a young ex-soldier who was paralysed from the waist down in the operational area in 1978, today will mark the end of long months of despair and near-poverty.

Sergeant X (his name has been withheld for personal reasons) has been told officially that from today his monthly pension will go up from R104 to over R722, and that he is eligible for an immediate gratuity of more than R15 000.

When he was given the news he could not believe his good fortune till he had telephoned Commandant J. J. Crouse, of the South African Legion, who has been involved in his case since mid-1979. Then he said wonderingly: "After all these months it's incredible."

Sergeant X, who is in his late 20s, had been working for a government department for almost 10 years when he was called up in November, 1978. The next month he was crushed under a lorry in the operational area and permanently paralysed from the waist down.

For Sergeant X — incapable of working at his former job and suffering constant pain — it meant the start of nearly 18 months of uncertainty, anxiety and gradually evaporating hope as his case worked its way through the official

Miners' families get compensation

THE payouts for the 28 black mineworkers who died at the Vaal Reef gold mine last week will be made according to the size of the victims' families.

The 28 miners, most of whom were from Transkei, were buried on the mine's premises this week and were not taken home for burial because of the state of their bodies.

A spokesman for the mine said the dead miners would be paid in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act and widows of the men would be paid a certain amount until they died.

"The widows will be paid an amount for as long as they live and their children will also draw a monthly amount until they reach 18 years," the spokesman said.

The dependants of miners who were not married would be paid a lump sum. The amounts would be paid out as soon as the dependants had made their claims, the spokesman said.

The families will get 75 percent of the victims' annual earnings and benefits. Of this amount, 30 percent will go to the widow, and three children will draw 15 percent each until they turn 18 years.

"In cases where the family has more than three children the percentage to be drawn will increase but will not exceed the miners' annual earnings," said the spokesman.

In instances where the miner was not married but had dependants, a payout of two thirds of four years' earnings will be made to the family.

Black mineworkers do not have a life insurance cover — they are covered only under the Act.

On April 10 a memorial service for the dead miners will be held at the mine. Families of the miners will be transported to attend the service. The future looks bleak for the dependants of the blast victims at the Industria metal firm.

The families of the 12 dead people will be paid only twice their annual pay. This means if a person earned R100 a month, his family will get R2 400.

Mr S F Malan, managing director of the company, said this was the normal compensation for families of people who died at work.

He said the money was from the pension fund which also covered death. Asked if there was no insurance for the men despite the type of work they did, he replied that a person who was not well informed should not ask such questions.

While the company spent R10 000 for funeral expenses of all the dead, the news that the dependants will receive only a meagre payout will certainly come as a shock.

Many of the dead men were the breadwinners of their families.

Mr Malan said some money from the work-

Blacks	8 796	7 659	7 444
(2) Whites, Coloureds and Asians	R 83 901,97	R 57 883,39	R 42 379,79
Blacks	623 886,88	648 123,42	507 995,19

Note: Separate figures for Whites, Coloureds and Asians are not kept.

Receipt of accident reports from employers is acknowledged immediately by means of cards reflecting the claim number allocated to each accident and requesting employers to keep a record of the address of a workman who leaves his employment. In the resumption report furnished by the employer when the injured workman resumes his work, provision has also been made for the workman's present address to be furnished. Apart from this, pamphlets are issued to all employers on the handling of claims under the Act and where necessary, groups of employers and organisations representing employers and workman are informed verbally at meetings of the Commissioner's requirements.

All local offices of the Department of Manpower Utilization are open to all injured workmen for assistance in claiming and collecting their compensation. In fact, regulation 9 provides that employers who do business in the magisterial districts of The Cape, Wynberg, Bellville and Simonstown, Port Elizabeth and Uitenhage, Durban and Pinetown and in the Territory of SWA, must report their accidents to the local office of the Department of Manpower Utilization who not only renders assistance to employers in the areas referred to but also assists injured workmen and their dependants in claiming and collecting their compensation from the Accident Fund in Pretoria.

In terms of section 83 of the Act, Magistrates and Commissioners of the Department of Co-operation and Development must give such reasonable assistance to Black workmen and their dependants as may at any time be necessary in connection with the settlement of claims for compensation. These officials give such assistance especially in fatal cases where they not only assist in the completion of claim forms but also go to much trouble in tracing beneficiaries to whom compensation must be paid.

In view of amendments to the Act to provide for compensation to be paid to Black workmen and their dependants on an equal basis with the other population groups with effect from 1 July 1979, large amounts of compensation are deposited in Post Office savings accounts by an arrangement between the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner and the Post Office. This system allows beneficiaries to withdraw fixed monthly amounts from their savings accounts at any Post Office in the Republic of South Africa in those cases where workmen have no fixed abode.

Compensation cheques are despatched to employers and injured workmen by ordinary post to their last known addresses and where cheques are returned to the Commissioner as undelivered, enquiries are immediately made through Magistrates, Commissioners and even tribal heads who are furnished with all available information to assist in tracing beneficiaries.

It has been the Commissioner's experience that many injured workmen, especially Blacks, do not return to the service of their employers after leaving as the result of an accident. Where the workman fails to leave an address to which correspondence and cheques can be forwarded, the Commissioner is not in a position to make payments of compensation and the amounts concerned must be transferred to the unclaimed moneys account of the Accident Fund. A list of unclaimed moneys is then published in the Government Gazette in order to assist beneficiaries to claim their compensation. As only limited success has been achieved in this manner the Reference Bureau and Administration Boards also lend a hand in tracing beneficiaries. Lists of unclaimed moneys are also published in publications catering for Blacks.

No time limit has been laid down for beneficiaries to apply for their unclaimed compensation. Beneficiaries may at any time in future apply for the payment of unclaimed benefits. Upon proper identification of the beneficiary the original amount plus interest is paid.

Miners warned on death compensation

THE Medical Bureau for Occupational Diseases has warned miners that compensation for death during service was not automatic, and has urged them to take out life assurance to provide for their widows. According to the bureau's annual report, tabled in Parliament this week, some miners regarded it as certain that compensation would be awarded to their widows. In fact about 25% of miners with long underground service do not show any sign of compensable disease at postmortem examinations and in these cases no compensation is payable.

Families of explosion victims get compensation

A SUM of R40 000 is to be paid out by Supreme Metals as an "extra compensation" to families of 12 workers killed in an explosion which wrecked an aluminium processing plant in Industria in March.

Mr S F Malan, managing director of the company said yesterday families of the dead men were receiving benefits at twice the man's annual pensionable salary.

Each would receive workmen's compensation — calculated on the number of dependents and years service.

Study and loan facilities would be provided for pre and post-matric dependents of the dead men, he said.

He added that if families were seen to be experiencing difficulties further payments could be made by the company according to its discretion.

Of the nine men injured in the blast, eight are back at work.

Mr Enos Morokane, who was seriously burned, was discharged from Coronation hospital last week.

An inquest, which heard two days' evidence, has been postponed to August 6.

Unemployment Fund rise?

Argus Correspondent

DURBAN. — A raising of the ceiling of the Unemployment Insurance Fund — to cover incomes of up to R12 000 a year or R1 000 a month — has been recommended by the Unemployment Insurance Board.

This was announced here yesterday by Miss Christine du Preez, who represents the Trade Union Council of South Africa on the Unemployment Insurance Board.

She told Tuca's annual conference that the proposed change would come into effect next January.

Those above the ceiling could still apply for unemployment benefits, but not for maternity or death benefits.

But a further amendment, due to be put before Parliament, would ensure that those above the income limit could enjoy the other benefits as well.

 Minister spells out

THE ASSEMBLY — Compensation for workmen who are injured on duty will be increased by up to 50 percent in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Amendment Bill which was read a third time yesterday.

The Minister of Manpower Utilisation, Mr Fanie Botha, said the main purpose of the amendments contained in the Bill was to provide improved benefits. The Bill was supported by both Opposition parties.

Mr Botha said the benefits payable to workmen who were injured on duty were reviewed in the light of changing economic conditions in the country.

PROPOSED BENEFITS

To illustrate the proposed benefits, the Minister said in terms of present legislation a workman earning R700 a month who was injured and could not work for a month, would be paid 75 percent of his monthly income up to R400. He would therefore receive a maximum of R300.

In terms of the proposed amendments, he would receive 75 percent of R400 plus 50 percent of his earnings above R400, making a total of R450.

FUNERAL ALLOWANCE

Funeral allowances would also be increased from the existing R250 to R400.

But this did not mean that this amount would be payable in all cases, as only reasonable funeral costs would be met.

Dr Alex Boraine (PFP Pinelands) and Mr Ron Miller (NRP Durban North) asked that something be done about the large number of workers who qualified for compensation, but who could not be traced.

Mr Miller appealed to the Minister to appoint specific teams to try to trace these people.

Mr Botha replied that his department made use of all the bodies which could help to trace the workers concerned and he would inquire whether it was considered necessary to appoint a committee for this specific purpose.

COMPENSATION Defective laws?

Every year 32 000 South Africans are permanently disabled or killed at work. Some R43m is spent annually on compensation and rehabilitation payments as a result of occupational injuries. This means the Workmen's Compensation Act and the Factories Act are of tremendous importance in the protection of workers and their families, both financially and physically.

According to a report in the latest issue of Pulse, official organ of UCT's Medical Students Council, there are a number of shortcomings in these measures. For example, there is no way in which an individual employer can be penalised for accidents caused by negligence other than by being compelled to pay a higher levy to the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner. Nor are domestic workers and prison labourers protected.

The report states that the legislation appears designed to protect employers rather than workers. "A worker injured at work, even if he or she can prove that the employer was negligent, or expected dangerous work to be done, may not sue the employer."

On the other hand, Section 27 of the Act states that: "... if the accident is attributed to the serious and wilful misconduct of the workman, no compensation shall be payable unless the accident results in serious disablement or the workman dies ... leaving a dependant wholly dependent on him." Which means that workers are penalised for misconduct but employers seemingly are not.

Pulse also says that safety precautions in the workplace are often neglected.

Delays are a heavy burden

The Workmen's Compensation machinery is plagued by a number of bugs: unclaimed payments, unreported accidents, and long delays before awards arrive. CRAIG CHARNEY looks at the problems.

Somewhere in South Africa, the family of Simon Gxumisa is trying to make do without their breadwinner — while R1 150 in help for them sits in Pretoria.

Mr Gxumisa, a migrant labourer, died after a long illness caused by an on-the-job accident at a Cape Town marine supplies firm. The Workmen's Compensation Commissioner has been ready to pay out a death benefit to the family for more than a year, but the employer couldn't say where it was.

The Gxumisa family is not alone. Official reports show that last year, Workmen's Compensation awards failed to reach more than 11 500 workers, almost all of them black.

In many other cases, accidents were not even reported for compensation, or lengthy delays in payment occurred.

Over the past five years, some R1.7-million in workmen's compensation payments have gone unclaimed, according to the Workmen's Compensation Commission.

Sometimes, as in Mr Gxumisa's case, the claims run to hundreds of rands. More often, they are for under R100.

Quit

But the failure to receive even a payment of that order can hurt a poor worker's family a good deal, says an Industrial Aid Society official familiar with such cases. Their budgets are so tight, she says, an uncompensated loss of income can mean no food on the table.

The major reason why so many injured workers fail to get their payments is that they get the sack or quit after their injuries.

"In a large number of cases, if a worker is sick or injured, the firm will discharge him," says Dr Bernard Fanaroff of the Metal and Allied Workers' Union. "Because people are unskilled and totally dispensable, the attitude is, 'Get him out of here,'" adds the Industrial Aid official.

All too often, she adds, workers are then endorsed out of the cities altogether. After they leave the company accommodation or townships where they were staying, their employers find they have no forwarding address.

In scores of cases, recorded in the Government Gazette listing the unclaimed money, they don't even have the worker's full name. Time and again, the recipients were listed only as "Marcus" or "Philemon."

Traceable

Companies are required to record workers' full names and addresses under the Unemployment Insurance Act, according to an industrial relations expert, but she says the requirement is not enforced.

In theory, migrant workers should also be traceable through another route, as their contracts give their address at recruitment. Officials of the mine workers' recruitment agency, TEBA, say that by using their agents to trace people through these addresses, they usually pay injury claims within eight weeks, even in remote rural areas.

But a Workmen's Compensation official says his office can not follow TEBA's example, because it has no investigators to follow up claims. It must rely on district magistrates in outlying areas, despite their numerous other duties.

The same official says the Commission also has a serious problem with accidents which are not even reported. While they are unable to estimate exactly how often this occurs, trade unionists agree with him on this score.

According to the Industrial Aid spokesman, employers have a strong profit motive not to report accidents, because their Workmen's Compensation Insurance premiums are reduced if their claims record is low. This can mean substantial savings: in the metal-working industry, for instance, the full premium can run to R1.50 for every R100 in wages.

Even when accidents are reported and compensated, delays in payment can place a severe burden on poor families.

According to Industrial Aid, there is a "gentleman's understanding" that employers should pay out to a worker after injury and wait to be paid back by the Commission. If they do not, as happens in some cases, the final awards may not be made until the worker's condition stabilises. That can take years.

Witnesses before the Wiehahn Commission on Labour Legislation urged the enactment of a ban on the discharge of workers because they had been involved in industrial accidents, and a system to provide advance payments from Workmen's Compensation within the first month after an accident.

However, the Commission rejected these calls. It said delays in payment were largely the fault of employers and employees, and said workers should notify the Commissioner of changes of address to prevent money going unclaimed.

But whatever the legal provisions, both the academics and the trade unionists stress, the most important change needed would be change of heart at the Department of Manpower Utilisation.

Injured workmen still cannot take action against bosses

On March 3 last year, 37-year-old metal worker and father of three Mr Mandla Dlamini died a peculiarly horrible death at his place of work.

As he leant over to service a giant Diesmatic press at a light engineering plant in Boksburg, the machine was set in motion. There was no microswitch cut-out or safety-gate, and Mr Dlamini slumped back to the factory floor, his head crushed. The circumstances of Mr Dlamini's death, which prompted a Factories Act inspection some weeks later, brought to light a disturbing feature of South African industrial law.

Although his trade union felt there were sufficient grounds to take the company to court, it seemed no action could be taken. For, under section 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, workers hit by industrial accidents are debarred from suing their employers for damages. The Act is a centrepiece of labour law and no-one would dispute its right to a place on the Statute Book. By providing automatic compensation for work-related death or injury, it gives workers a form of insurance against the daily hazards of the shop-floor.

But this cannot justify the deprivation of the right to sue, trade unionists insist.

Describing section 7 as "paternalistic," they point out that injured workmen must accept State largesse even in clear cases of employer negligence, and where the means and inclination to take private legal action exist.

Nor can they accept the argument of Workmen's Compensation Commission officials that employers deserve immunity from negligence-based suits, since they alone contribute to the "Accident Fund."

This makes the dangerous assumption that common law rights can be used by the State as a sort of bargaining counter," commented one unionist.

In hard cash terms, section 7 imposes a severe disability on workers. This emerges with stark clarity from cases of drivers injured on the job. They can sue third parties as well as claiming under the WC Act.

The point is that although the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner has the discretionary right to "top up" awards if employer negligence can be shown, he cannot take account of the so-called "general damages" — for shock, pain and "loss of amenities of life" — routinely granted in civil suits.

Since awards are earnings-related, it is the lower-paid black worker who has most to lose because of the loss of the right to sue.

A study of the most recent WC Commission statistics reveals

- That the average payout for temporarily disabled white, coloured and Asian workers was R117,59, while for blacks it was R84.84.

- That the average payout for permanently disabled white, coloured and Asian workers was R1 324,78, while for blacks it was R700.64.

- That the payouts for all forms of disablement were 45 percent lower for blacks than for the other group.

According to the Fosatu-linked Industrial Aid Society, many black workers are sacked after a disabling accident and never again find employment. In this context, the combination of section 7 and meagre WC awards takes on special significance.

The unionists are adamant — as in Britain, injured workers should have the rights to choose between Workmen's Compensation and the courts.

The Workmen's Compensation Act Amendment Bill, which passed through Parliament last week, has been generally viewed as something of a damp squib. Little in the way of fundamental change is proposed, labour experts say.

A cardinal objection is that the draft passes over a controversial section of the existing Act, which strips injured workers of their common law right to sue bosses for damages. DREW FORREST examines the controversy.

Many small companies would lack the means to meet claims for large-scale damages, they concede, but here again South Africa could take a leaf from the British statute book. Under the Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act of 1969, British employers must insure themselves against this contingency.

Two further advantages would flow from the scrapping of section 7, the unionists say.

It would lend strength to the arm of a hard-pressed Department of Manpower inspectorate in the enforcement of safety regulations.

"Surely one of the most effective deterrents against unsafe practices is the Damoclean award for damages based on negligence or breach of statutory duty," writes labour lawyer Halton Cheadle.

And it would give some control over shopfloor conditions to the person most directly in the firing line — the workman himself.

Sick pensions up 12 pc (302)

CAPE TOWN — Occupational disease beneficiaries would receive a 12 per cent general increase from April 1, the Minister of Mineral and Energy Affairs, Mr F. W. de Klerk, announced here yesterday.

Mr De Klerk said the increase would apply to sufferers who were receiving compensation in terms of the provisions of the Occupational Diseases in Mines and Works Act.

It would benefit all those receiving monthly pensions, as well as the widows and dependent children of deceased sufferers from pneumoconiosis and other compensatable diseases.

At present, the whole matter of compensation to sufferers of occupational diseases was being investigated in depth by the Nieuwenhuizen Commission of Inquiry.

Mr De Klerk said: "Since the commission has not yet completed its work and a lot still has to be done before any change in the existing compensation structures can be considered, it has become necessary to alleviate the pecuniary position of occupational disease beneficiaries in the meantime.

"This is an interim arrangement along the lines followed by the Minister of Finance, Mr Owen Horwood, in connection with the adjustment of social benefits.

"I sincerely hope that this interim arrangement will satisfy the needs of occupational disease beneficiaries to some extent." — SAPA.

When does determine wages? Tests done for Once again, inspection of the table suggest that these two variables are not associated to any significant extent. This is not surprising, in view of farmers' replies to questions about the schooling of workers. Of 31 farmers questioned, only two said, without qualification, that they preferred to employ workers who had been to school. Four farmers preferred not to answer, seven were in favour of limited schooling for farm workers and 11 farmers were indifferent. Seven farmers actually preferred workers not to have been to school, claiming that only one person - the farmer - needed to do any thinking, that when workers tried to make decisions on their own (a practice which they might have learned at school) they made mistakes, that workers who had been to school 'thought they knew everything' and tried to teach the farmer what to do.

Pecuniary loss criterion for workmen's compensation

With reference to your recent articles on the workmen still cannot take Act, namely: "Injured workmen still cannot take action against bosses" and "Delays are a heavy burden" (The Star, February 19), I wish to comment as follows:

Sections 7 and 48 of the present Act which regulate a workman's rights if he meets with an accident which is due to the negligence of his employer are in substance the same as sections 4 and 5 of the 1984 Act which was introduced after a committee had been appointed to consider a new Workmen's Compensation Bill.

The committee was required to report, inter alia, on proposals whereby the rights of injured workmen under common law would be abolished under the insurance scheme contained in the Bill.

Both employers' and workers' organisations were duly represented and were invited to comment on all amendments.

Additional background to the legislation is provided in "Compensation for industrial accidents" issued by the International Labour Office. This publication states that the main feature of existing legislation is a compromise by which the worker relinquishes his right to some portion of the total compensation which he can claim in the event of the demonstrable fault of the employer in order to obtain compensation in cases where accidents are due to his own unintentional fault, chance, force majeure or unknown causes.

These principles are also set out in Bhoer v Union Government and another where the judge remarked that the principle that pecuniary loss is the criterion, has always characterised workmen's compensation legislation.

The Act in effect protects the employer from civil actions for damages and at the same time allows the workman compensation even where he unintentionally caused the accident.

Additional compensation for pecuniary loss is provided for where the accident was due to the employer's negligence. This remedy is normally available without the burden of heavy legal costs and the risk of losing compensation in a lawsuit for damages.

The 1981 Amendment Act provides for compensation on a generous scale and was well supported by workers' organisations.

The Act in its present form does not discriminate between population groups in regard to the amount of compensation payable, which is related to earnings in accordance with the generally accepted principles of workmen's compensation insurance.

In regard to accidents that are not reported, about 18 000 employers have been subpoenaed since 1975 in order to obtain reports and 2 200 penalties have been imposed.

Claims are normally recorded, considered and finalised within three weeks of receipt of the prescribed documents, but no payment can be made unless all the relative details of the accident substantiated by medical evidence are available.

Employers are urged to make cash advances to injured workmen who leave their employ.

Every effort is made to trace blacks for the payment of unclaimed moneys with assistance of commissioners / magistrates, reference bureau, administration boards and various publications.

Pensions awarded can now be drawn at any post office in South Africa and certain neighbouring states.

Ockert Grobbelaar

The Star prefers, wherever possible, to publish a reader's letter under the writer's name rather than a nom de plume. No letter, even if it is intended for publication under a nom de plume, will be considered unless it bears the writer's name, home address and signature.

No real wage for duty

Sowetan 16/7/81 302

A YOUNG Bophuthatswana citizen who has been in a wheelchair since a mine accident is bitter because he has not received any compensation since he was injured two years ago.

Mr George Dince (31) of Ga-Mamutla, a village near Kimberley was injured last year in a mine shaft accident. He worked for Dancarl Diamonds in Barkley West.

Mr Dince's story was told to SOWETAN by his younger brother, Reginald, who has been looking after him since the accident.

"My brother met with the accident after he had worked three months with the mine. He spent a month in hospital. He was also treated in Cape Town's Grootte Schuur.

"He was discharged from hospital sometime in May last year. He was brought home in an ambulance because he could not walk, in fact the left side of his body is useless. he can speak only with great difficulty. After some days I informed his employer about the accident and I was told to go home because a cheque was already on its way to my brother. "We expected an amount which would clothe and feed him permanently as he cannot do anything for himself, but I was shocked when we received a R68 cheque and later a cheque with an even more embarrassing amount of R8. We had expected more money to follow, but that was the last time we heard from the employer."

Mr Dince (senior) is a married man and since he was injured, his younger brother has been looking after his and his wife's needs. Now the younger brother is married and says the cost of running two families is overwhelming him. "I cannot cope for longer than this," he said.

SOWETAN spoke to a Mrs Cala Engelbrecht of the Workman's Compensation Office in Pretoria and was told that Mr Dince's case will only be considered in November this year.

"He should go to Dr J J Geldenhuis for the final assessment in November this year," she said. She said for now he may apply for temporary disablement benefit every month.

It would, for obvious reasons, be impracticable to extend the scope of the Act so as to include the vast number of private households in the Republic. Domestic servants in private households, however, retain their common law rights against employers who in turn may insure privately if they so wish.

As a matter of interest it can be mentioned that the Commission of Inquiry into Labour Legislation considered to Workmen's Compensation Act in Part 3 of its report but did not deem it necessary to make any recommendation to include domestic servants within the scope of this Act.

Communication gap

The problem of explaining the complexities of fringe-benefits to unskilled black workers was dramatically illustrated by worker unrest on two gold mines in the last fortnight.

Rioting at Anglo's President Steyn resulted in the death of one employee and R1m damage to hostel buildings, kitchens and a liquor outlet, and there was a work stoppage last week at Rand Mines' Blyvooruitzicht mine.

At issue was the introduction by the Chamber of Mines of a compulsory contributory death-benefit scheme for all new black employees. A Rand Mines spokesman concedes that discontent at Blyvooruitzicht was a result of poor communication by management in explaining the benefits of the scheme. However, an Anglo spokesman says communication channels were adequate at President Steyn and workers were fully informed about the scheme.

The scheme was introduced by the Chamber on July 1 as part of a move to equalise fringe benefits for mine employees of all races. Pension funds have a built in death benefit clause, but the mines run pension schemes for their monthly paid staff only. The new scheme would extend benefits to unskilled workers.

The scheme is voluntary for those already employed, but compulsory for all "new" employees. As all migrant labourers are on contract and effectively become new employees after the expiry of each contract, it is estimated that all will be covered within two years.

The new package replaces a non-contributory scheme which ensured ex-gratia lump sum death payments of R400. The new contributory scheme ensures that for monthly contributions of 27c (plus 45c for every R100 earned) death benefits equal to two years basic earnings and the value of two years food and accommodation will be paid.

Painful transition

Clearly this has advantages for the workers — yet they are unhappy with the Chamber's package, which suggests there may indeed have been a communications breakdown.

Says Anglo's Bobby Godsell: "The move to equalise fringe-benefits has moved from non-contributory low benefit schemes to contributory high benefit schemes and that transition is painful. In addition, it is difficult to communicate abstract future benefits that require present sacrifices."

Exclusion of domestics from Compensation Act under fire

By SANDRA SMITH

DOMESTIC workers' organisations have strongly criticised a statement by the Minister of Manpower, Mr S P Botha, that it would be impracticable to extend the scope of the Workmen's Compensation Act to include domestic workers.

Mr Botha said in Parliament that the Wiehahn Commission had considered the Workmen's Compensation Act "but did not deem it necessary to make any recommendations to include domestic servants within the scope of this Act."

He said domestic servants were not workmen in terms of the Act and "are therefore not insured against accidents arising out of their employment which result in a personal injury."

The director of the Domestic Workers and Employers Project (Dwep), Mrs J. Tutu, said: "This is not correct, as domestic workers can be injured just as well as anyone else. There are so many ways that they can be injured in a household working as they do with, for example, electrical appliances.

"They are workers in every sense, and their exclusion from the Act is discriminatory.

"Employers have the vote and they can lobby their people on this issue — the domestics themselves have not got the power."

The organiser of the Port Elizabeth-based Domestic Workers' Association of South Africa (Dwasas), Mrs M Baliwe, said one of the aims of the association was to make domestic workers eligible for Workmen's Compensation.

"Apparently they have forgotten the domestic workers," she said.

"It is absolutely essential for these workers to have the same security as other workers if they are injured."

The chairwoman of the Cape Town-based Domestic Workers Association, Miss Maggie Oewies, said: "Domestic work is a professional job, and it is vitally important that they have this protection in their work."

The managing director of a company which is launching the first group pension scheme for domestic workers in the country, Mrs Donna Wurzel, said: "In view of the Minister's statement it is all the more timely that we have established a domestic pension fund on a national scale.

"These are essential workers in the whole structure of South African society — we're talking about more than a million people — and there is a tremendous need for them to be protected."

Research had shown that domestics were "very anxious" to have future security in their old age as, with the breaking down of traditional patterns, they could no longer depend on their families to provide for them.

STATE MUST ACT

THE absence of any coherent plan to compensate victims of terror bomb attacks reflects very badly on a Government which has long been warning of the advent of urban terrorism. No State fund exists for the purpose, and it seems that only whites stand any chance of being assisted by the Department of Health, Welfare and Pensions.

For blacks such as Mrs Isobel Mchunu, who is now bedridden after being injured in the bomb explosion in Durban's Field Street last February, it seems that the only hope of obtaining financial assistance is by application for a disability pension, and this involves a long rigmarafe of investigation with no guarantee of satisfaction.

In the words of Mr Ray Swart, leader of the Progressive Federal Party in Natal, 'there appears to be total confusion as to what happens to bomb victims' as far as State assistance is concerned. There are not even any clear guidelines to assist people.

Why this should be so is hard to understand. The Government has known for years that urban terrorism was on the way. Why has it not prepared for the obvious human suffering that must flow from it?

While some life insurance policies have built-in benefits which might cover injury caused by bomb blasts, it would be unrealistic to assume that this cover affects more than a small fraction of the population. What is needed, surely, is automatic State assistance for the injured.

Since we now have to face the likelihood of urban terrorism becoming an integral part of life in South Africa, the most logical step would be for the Government to establish a special fund to assist victims. And since blacks can be expected to bear much of the brunt of terrorist bomb attacks, it would be unpardonable to discriminate against them.

The Government should not waste more time about coming to grips with a problem that it should have tackled long ago.

Chance to learn all about workmen's compensation

15-Post 22/10/82

PORT ELIZABETH personnel managers experiencing problems with workmen's compensation have an ideal opportunity to consult the oracle on the Workmen's Compensation Act next week.

The occasion is a visit to Port Elizabeth by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, Mr H C du Toit.

Mr Du Toit is visiting Port Elizabeth at the invitation of the local branch of the National Occupational Safety Association (Nosa), and will address a general meeting of the association in the auditorium of the PE Technikon on Wednesday, October 27 at 3pm.

Nosa has extended an open invitation to businessmen to attend the talk, which, it says, is aimed at improving relations between the administrators of the Accident Fund and employers.

The fund is generated via compulsory contributions from registered employers and employed to meet claims arising from accidents in the workplace. As a general rule, for temporary disablement a worker is entitled to receive 75% of his monthly earnings in respect of the first R400, and 50% of all earnings above R400, with a ceiling of R1 000 a month.

Compensation for permanent disability is calculated on a percentage scale. Where disability is measured as 100%, the life-time payment will correspond with that made to workers who are temporarily disabled.

Where disability is measured as 30% or less a once-

Background to the news

off lump-sum payment is made, and a spokesman for the local office of the Workmen's Compensation Fund this week gave Business Post several examples of how this percentage is calculated.

"The loss of a little finger, for instance, is regarded as a 2% disablement; a ring finger 6% and a middle finger 8%. The loss of a first phalanx of a thumb is regarded as a 15% disablement and if a worker were to lose both phalanxes of his thumb in an accident in his workplace, he would be entitled to a lump-sum payment based upon a 25% disablement."

Payments in such cases are calculated according to monthly earnings and in the case of a worker who earns R500 a month becoming 30% disabled in an accident, a lump-sum payment of R6 000 would be made.

● A temporary cover had been placed over a small furrow used for electrical wiring on a factory floor. A workman was lifting heavy spools of material with a fork-lift truck and one of the wheels of the fork-lift ran into the furrow causing the vehicle to tilt over on to another workman who was walking in the vicinity.

The second workman was crushed to death and his dependants succeeded in recovering additional compensation on the grounds that the accident had been caused by a patent defect in the plant which the employer had negligently failed to rectify.

● In another case fork-lift trucks were used by the employer to transport heavy steel pipes over a distance of more than one kilometre.

The vision of the driver was to some extent obscured by the pipes loaded in front of him but he could nevertheless see over the top of them. He took his eyes off the road to greet a colleague and the slope of a platform he was approaching caused the fork-lift to tilt and crush him.

In this case the victim's dependants failed to recover additional compensation as the proximate and effective cause of the accident was the failure of the driver to keep his eyes on the road.

(Loads have now been reduced as a result of the accident.)

● In yet another loading case a portable crane was used to load logs in the vicinity of high-power overhead cables.

It was alleged that current jumped from the cable on to the crane, causing severe burns to the workman and that the employer had been negligent in failing to warn the workman of this danger.

However, it was proved by the respondent (a senior official on the Commissioner's staff) that the current could not have jumped over such a distance and that the crane had actually touched the cable. The court found that the workman had been negligent in allowing the crane to touch the cable and his claim for additional compensation was rejected.

● During deep-sea diving operations divers were permitted to surface more rapidly than the time laid down in tables used by the British and American authorities. Surface decompression was also inadequate, with the result that one of the divers suffered permanent disablement from "bends".

He succeeded in recovering additional compensation amounting to R140 000 as he was unable to continue working as a diver.

● A workman succeeded in recovering additional compensation after he had lost an eye as a result of rough plans that had been allowed by his employer in the factory. Other workmen in the plant had been shooting objects from metal pipes and the workman was an innocent victim of the dangerous prank.

Another interesting case is Mey versus South African Railways and Harbours. In this case a worker was granted extra compensation because he injured his hand because a circular saw was not guarded under the table of the saw.

All similar saw benches in the workshop had been correctly guarded, but the one which had been installed some 10 days prior to the accident was not correctly guarded. It was held that the employer was negligent.

Work linked diseases to rise?

CAPE TOWN — The incidence of occupational disease in South Africa was expected to rise, the Nieuwenhuizen Commission has found.

In its report, which was tabled in Parliament yesterday, the commission said the expectation of the rise of occupational disease "is founded particularly on the increasing importance of chemical substances in the manufacturing industry and the fact that minerals are now being more fully processed domestically."

"There is also evidence, however, that there is no cause for concern, particularly in the bigger industries, where most of the country's workers are concentrated."

"The favourable remarks on the general health of the country's labour force as regards occupational diseases do not mean that the preventive measures being taken are sufficient or can be relaxed in any way."

The commission said although occupational diseases were connected mainly with the mining industry, "medical practitioners are agreed that conditions in industry

From BARRY STREEK

CAPE TOWN — A call for a single law to cover the payment of compensation to workers for occupational diseases was made yesterday by the Nieuwenhuizen Commission.

The commission, whose report was tabled in Parliament yesterday, also called for the abolition of lump sum payments to workers as compensation for occupationally-caused disease.

A large number of the commission's recommendations were opposed by the Secretary-General of the Mineworkers Union, Mr Arrie Paulus, who was a member.

In a minority report,

Call to stop lump sum compensation

Mr Paulus said it had been found every year that more than 50 per cent of workmen "examined post-mortem were suffering from an occupational disease."

However, with all the equipment at the disposal of the medical bureau which inquires into occupational disease "it is not possible to establish beyond doubt during a workman's life whether he is suffering from a compensatable disease."

"The mineworker would be done a great injustice if workmen were to be certified only if the occupation disease had been a factor contributing to their death," Mr Paulus said.

In the majority report, the commission said it "was of the opinion that South Africa could no longer afford a dualistic system of compensation for occupational diseases "based on population, group and colour".

It said that uniform compensation could be achieved in South Africa if the title and provisions of the Compensation Act were extended.

The commission, which was chaired by Professor P. J. Nieuwenhuizen, proposed that the Workmen's Compensation Act should be extended to incorporate the provisions of occupational diseases in the Mines and Works Act.

The new consolidated law should be called the Accidents and Occupational Diseases Act and should be administered by the Department of Manpower.

The commission felt the payment of pensions, instead of lump sum payments in compensation for occupational diseases offered the workman and his dependants advantages.

Mr Paulus, however, disagreed with the commission on this point.

The commission said the present state of affairs regarding the payment of compensation under the Occupational Diseases Act was not satisfactory and the present payments made to underground miners were not sufficient.

industry, "medical practitioners are agreed that conditions in industry are becoming increasingly conducive to creasingly conducive to pneumoconiosis, tuberculosis and the various forms of obstructive airways disease."

The commission was told in evidence that 90 per cent of all occupational diseases were mineral-related conditions. — PC.

KAUNDA TO MEET P W

360 Sowetan 29/4/82

SOUTH AFRICAN Prime Minister P W Botha and President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia meet in a secret venue tomorrow just north of Mafikeng.

Mr P W Botha and Dr Kenneth Kaunda are to discuss "delicate matters" affecting both countries.

This is the first time in nearly seven years that the two governments will meet at such high level.

The previous occasion was the Bridge Summit in August 1975 when former Prime Minister, Mr John Vorster, and Dr Kaunda had talks at Victoria Falls during the Rhodesian settlement negotiations.

First indications of a possible meeting between Mr Vorster's successor and the Zambian President came from Dr Kaunda when, at a Press conference in Lusaka, he said he believed he and Mr Botha ought to discuss the "explosive situation" in southern Africa.

Mr Visser told The SOWETAN yesterday that Mr Elias Sebellela, sole breadwinner for a family of 10 at number 494A Naledi, should get in touch with their office as his money is waiting for him. Mr Visser said Mr Sebellela was put on an early pension because of ill-health and that he was for his own good to submit his proof for birth as early as possible. He denied the fact that Mr Sebellela was dismissed after he had lost sight while on duty.

EVERY year the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner (WCC) pays out R47-million — that's R38 a minute, day and night.

All this is compensation for industrial injuries sustained in accidents, 98% of which need never have happened, according to a spokesman for the National Occupational Safety Association (Nosa).

Of the 98% of industrial accidents which are preventable, 88% are caused by the "unsafe acts of people" as Mr Saklie Burger puts it, and 10% by the conditions in which people work.

According to the industrial safety watchdog spokesman the estimated potential and actual loss in manpower is 32-million man-hours a year. Or looked at another way, 100 000 workers might just as well be lying idle every working day.

The loss in working hours exceeds the effective growth in economically active people — despite immigration. The national injury rate is 9.5 a million man-hours and 1.92% of South Africa's work force have injuries serious enough to keep them away from work for a full day.

But to put these figures into perspective Mr B Matthysen, general manager of Nosa, said that when Nosa was founded in the 1950s, the injury rate was 4%.

Today South Africa is the only country in the world which has shown a constant downward trend in industrial injuries. The equivalent figure in the Unit^{ed} States is 2.79%.

Mr Matthysen said that workers today get more compensation for a lower premium.

In the past 10 years the premium has dropped from 114c to 80c for each R100 in wages.

"It's got to be the only type of insurance where the premium has gone down and the actual protection gone up, despite increases in compensation levels and rising medical and rehabilitation costs," said Mr Matthysen.

Nosa, which gives guidance, education and training to various echelons of management in accident prevention techniques, attributes this "good news" to management's improved accident-prevention skills.

Government inspectors have also helped in this sphere and Nosa has provided incentives, as well as guidance, to managements by recognising effort and giving star gradings and awards.

Internationally, the injuries frequency rate (IFR) is worked out per million man hours, which is what 500 men would work in one year.

According to this system, fishing is the most hazardous industry in South Africa with an IFR of 39, or 8%, followed way down the scale by woodworking, transport, mining and building and construction.

The safest industry to work in is banking — it has an IFR of 1.3.

Industrial injuries are costly in terms of compensation paid to victims and of loss of production and damaged machinery.

Nosa is adamant that the cost of injuries far exceeds the cost of making machinery and work conditions safer.

Mr Kevin Wiggel, manager of the Johannesburg branch of Nosa, said the total number of disabling injuries in his area from July 1980 to June 1981 was 1 182.

Compensation fund call to employers

ZWELITSHA — After independence Ciskei had established its own workmen's compensation fund, the Minister of Manpower Utilisation, Chief Lent Maqoma, said in his policy speech in the Assembly yesterday.

He was confident that employers and employees alike would now find the service much more efficient compared to when Pretoria handled accident claims.

He called upon all employers to register with the Workmen's Compensation Commission if they had not already done so, as it was in the interest of all parties to build a substantial fund.

Chief Maqoma warned that there were severe penalties for those who failed to register. The penalties would be included in the Worker's Compensation Bill to be tabled in the house during the course of this session.

He also announced that Ciskei would be establishing its own unemployment insurance fund shortly.

"In terms of an agreement entered into with the Republic of South Africa before independence, coverage was only afforded to those employees who were contributors before independence and only for three years.

"This in effect means that all new workers residing in Ciskei and working in South Africa after independence have no coverage at all.

"Apart from the fact that their enemies endeavoured to stir up trouble through these groups of employees, the government found the agreement to be lacking at an early stage and set the wheels in motion to remedy the situation," Chief Maqoma said.

He said that an amending agreement would accordingly be concluded between Ciskei and South Africa whereby employees living in the Ciskei but working in South Africa would be obliged to contribute to the unemployment fund.

"Such contributions will flow eventually into our coffers and the unemployed worker, upon his return to Ciskei, will be looked after by our own fund," Chief Maqoma said. — DDR.

Worker compensation amendment welcomed

O. Disputu

ZWELITSHA — The introduction of the Workmen's Compensation Amendment Bill was welcomed by speakers in the National Assembly yesterday.

During the second reading of the bill, members of the House said workers used to have difficulty getting compensation for injuries sustained at work.

Mr B. D. R. Myataza asked if compensation covered passengers of a vehicle involved in an accident or a person knocked down by a car while walking across the street.

Chief A. M. Mqalo said that now and again one saw lists of unclaimed compensation in publications. He asked why this was so as these people had addresses. He also wanted to know what happened to the money when they could not be traced.

Chief Mqalo asked who would benefit if a man who had two wives, one according to custom and the other according to civil rights, died. In cases where a man had married according to customary rights the next of kin of the deceased usually benefited more than the children did, he said.

Mr W. F. Ximiya said that in terms of the bill, children of the deceased, up to the age of 18, were entitled to claim.

"A majority of black children are still at school at 18 for reasons beyond their control, because black children start school at seven," he said. — DDR.

Appeal to register workers

ZWELITSHA — The Minister of Manpower Utilisation, Chief Lent Magoma, appealed to employers to register their employees under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

All workers, whether they were caretakers or tribal authority policemen, were entitled for a claim under the act if they were registered, he said in reply to questions in the Assembly yesterday.

He called on chiefs and headmen to stress to their subjects that they should be registered under the act.

On the question of customary and civil marriages, he said if a man had married according to customary rights, the benefits on his death would go to his wife and children. This also applied if he was married civilly.

If at first he was married by customary rights and then to another wife later by civil rights, there was a problem.

In law a woman married by civil rights had the upper hand. Benefits would go to the wife married by civil rights and to her children as well as to the children of the woman married according to custom. However, nothing would go to the wife married by customary union. — DDR.

Mute breadwinner loses hope of compensation

Ten live off one pension

BY ALINAH DUBE

A SOWETO deaf and dumb man has lost hope of ever being compensated by a company he served for more than 10 years.

Mr Elias Sebetela (38) of Naledi, sole breadwinner for a family of 10, was allegedly fired from Ozalid Pty Ltd after getting injured at work.

According to his family, he was not paid workmanship's compensation after his eyes were severely injured.

The Sebetelas now depend on a meagre pension of an old woman.

The group personnel manager for Ozalid, a Mr Visser, earlier told The SOWETAN that Mr Sebetela's money was waiting for him and that he only had to submit proof of his birth as soon as possible.

Mr Visser had said Mr Sebetela was put on early pension because of ill-health. He had earlier mentioned it was not the policy of his company to dismiss people after having sustained injuries while on duty.

"The thought of having to repeatedly go to this company only to be dismissed without getting the money, leaves me hopeless," said Mrs Violet Sebetela senior.

Mrs Sebetela said she had on two occasions accompanied her son to his former work-place and was told it was not a birth certificate they wanted but a medical certificate.

"This really confused me as I had read in The SOWETAN that all my son had to submit was his birth certificate," she said.

Mrs Sebetela said she was told to send her son for a medical check-up.

"After I had taken the trouble of having Elias checked at the Baragwanath Hospital, I was told the medical certificate we had was invalid. This gives me a feeling I am going to spend all my pension money on transport to these people," Mrs Sebetela said.

This time Mr Visser said a birth certificate was just one of the things needed before Mr Sebetela could be compensated.

"We told those people to wait until we got a doctor of our own to check on Elias — and that I think has been organised by now. Anyway, we will get in touch with them very soon," Mr Visser promised.

After having asked if I personally knew Mr Sebetela, Mr Visser commented, "as you've seen he is a danger to any industrial situation."

HOPELESS: Deaf and dumb Mr Elias Sebetela.

Joshua Nkomo - the end of the road?

FOR a man who was being vilified daily by Zimbabwe's leaders a few months ago and faced imprisonment for allegedly plotting a coup, Joshua Nkomo is in a pretty buoyant mood these days.

"Are you an assassin?" he asked jocularly of a correspondent who had come to his modest home in the black residential area of Petlandaba. "My spies tell me that a man who poses as a journalist is com-the Matabeleland province, and more than 25 killings. Much of this activity is banditry but a political motive is becoming increasingly evident as the dissidents start turning their guns on government targets.

For the time being, it is being reasoned in government circles, it would be unwise to provoke further unrest by bringing charges against Nkomo over the arms caches.

injuries cost money time and money

ACCIDENTS cost the SA economy R400-million a year — well over R1-million is wasted every working day according to Bunny Matthyssen, general manager of the National Occupational Safety Association (NOSA).

Matthyssen says: "By the end of this year 0,25 million workers will have been so seriously injured that they will lose at least one shift from work."

Hennie du Toit, Workmen's Compensation Commissioner is of the opinion that all employers are not taking advantage of the perks offered by the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Du Toit says: "What I find disturbing is that there are still large established employers, who seldom if ever qualify for rebates."

Du Toit highlights the fact that for the first time in the history of the Accident Fund a rebate, which exceeded R1-million for the cycle was paid to a single employer.

He says that during the past few months a total of R23-million was paid in merit rebates for the 1977/79 cycle to employers who qualify.

Matthyssen points out that it is possible to receive as much as 50% of the three yearly assessments in the form of a rebate, where claims amount to 24% or less of the assessment.

If the claims regularly exceed the assessment or are worse than the average for their class, the Workmen's Compensation may increase the assessment rate. This loading is 50% to 100% of the normal assessment rate.

Matthyssen questions why an industrialist should be faced with an unnecessary loading of R10 000, which a certain municipality recently had to accept.

By using the NOSA five star grading system, management can reap the maximum rebates available in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

AN elderly Dobsonville man yesterday alleged he was fired from work after he was injured and not given any compensation for seven years of service.

Mr Bernard Mohai of Dobsonville hostel also told The SOWETAN that on his discharge from Leuf Lumenite (Pty) Limited, Roodepoort, he was given his weekly wages, R49.32, his leave pay, R116.59 and a bonus of R56.26. The total amount he received was R205.34 after R16.83 had been deducted for pension and pay as you earn (Paye).

He said: "On April 24, 1980, I was injured while on duty. An iron container had fallen on my leg and I spent eight months in hospital. On my discharge from hospital I went back to

"In May this year I was transferred to the grinding department and when I said I would not be able to do the job, I was told I had only that last chance otherwise I would be fired. I had to consult a doctor who confirmed that I could not do the job. I am very bitter at this because I was dissatisfied when they paid me out and I was also not paid any compensation for my injury."

The company's personnel manager, Mr W Rupieper, said he remembered Mr Mohai's case and that a doctor had certified him unfit to work on his feet as he would not be able to carry excessive weights. So Mr Mohai was given various jobs in the foundry. When he seemed to be having problems he was asked if he still wished to work for the company but he

He said: "When he decided to resign he was paid everything due to him. He was also paid his workman's compensation. I have the record with me."

UK army boss in Harare

Mali Africa Bureau

HARARE. — The British Army Chief of Staff Sir John Stanier arrives in Harare today for a week-long assessment of the work and future of the British military advisory team in Zimbabwe.

The 80-man team of military advisers and instructors is Britain's biggest military team in Africa.

The British team has completed the first phase of its work — the integration of the Zanla and Zipra guerrilla armies and the former Rhodesian Army — and discussions have started on the form of the second phase.

The British Defence Secretary Mr John Nott paid a 24-hour visit to Harare at the weekend. He had talks with the Prime Minister Mr Robert Mugabe.

Observers believe there was a degree of discomfort in the military talks, which centred around the arrest of top air force officers and allegations that soldiers hunting dissidents are being heavy-handed towards villagers.

But informed sources say there is no question of Britain withdrawing its team.

Appeal Court rules against city council

BLOEMFONTEIN — The Bloemfontein Appeal Court yesterday upheld an appeal by the Commercial Union Assurance Co of SA and dismissed an application by the Johannesburg City Council to proceed in a matter where the council held the insurance company liable for payments made to an employee under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Mr R C Schaper was seriously injured in a collision on August 28, 1978. The council was entitled under the Act to a right of action against the insurance company for recovery of compensation which it was obliged to pay as a result of the collision. However, the council failed to institute its action before prescription supervened.

When Mr Justice Steyn granted the application in the Witwatersrand Local Supreme Court on May 20, 1981, he ordered the insurance company to pay the council's costs in the defended application.

Yesterday Mr Justice Joubert said that the failure to take the necessary steps to protect the council's claim from becoming prescribed was caused by the neglect of Mr Atkinson, the council's claims-manager, who candidly admitted in his affidavit that it was only early in November 1980 when he directed his attention for the first time to the question of prescription.

The right of action under the Workmen's Compensation Act had become prescribed on August 27, 1980, before compliance by the council with the provisions of Section 25 (1) of the compulsory Motor Vehicle Insurance Act — that is before timeous delivery by the council of its claim on prescribed form MVA13.

There was a clear and direct causal connection between the negligence of Mr Atkinson and the failure on the part of the council to comply with the provisions of Section 25 (1) or to serve summons timeously on the insurance company to interrupt prescription or to obtain timeously an extension of the prescriptive period from the company.

Such negligence on the part of Mr Atkinson was in conflict with the Motor Vehicle Insurance Act.

The judge said the lower court should not have granted the application. — Sapa.

JOHANNESBURG old age pensioners who own homes are upset by a ruling from the Administrator of the Transvaal Mr W A Cruywagen that they cannot get a full rebate on their rates. The ruling was announced by the Johannesburg City Council, which recently decided pensioner-homeowners whose incomes were below R350 a month should get a 50% rebate. The Administrator has let it be known that in terms of a Local Government Ordinance pensioners who own properties can only qualify for a maximum rebate of 40%.

Insurance won't pay up

A SOWETO man injured at work two years ago is now being refused treatment at Crown Mines Hospital — because an insurance company has not paid his medical bills dating back to 1980.

Out-of-job Mr Isaac Mabela, of Orlando West, is unable to pay the outstanding money — about R300. He injured his hand while working as a store clerk for an electrical company.

All this fuss is causing sleepless nights for Mr Mabela, whose treatment is now overdue by a month. The company, Federated Insurance, has told him that his medical file has gone missing.

"I was due to have undergone an operation some time last month, but the doctors at Crown Mines told me that they would only operate after I paid my medical bill. I went to the insurance company to find out why they had not paid the bill but was referred to the commissioner's office, where I was told to go back to the company," Mr Mabela said.

To add to his sorrows, Mr Mabela lost his job months ago after a quarrel with his employer, and his chances of getting another job appear very slim as his hand has not been functioning properly since the accident.

What worries Mr Mabela more than anything is that the doctors have told him that he should settle his debt "as soon as possible because the delay of treatment may affect the use of my hand for the rest of my life."

The SOWETAN spoke to Mrs A Wiese, of the insurance company, who promised to investigate the matter. She admitted that the claim should have long been paid to the hospital.

Crippled man claims compensation

By SELLO RABOTHATA

A 62-YEAR-OLD Soweto man yesterday claimed he worked for a Denver company for 24 years and was injured while on duty but has never been compensated.

Mr Cornelius Lefifi of Molapo, who is crippled from the waist down, told THE SOWETAN that he and his wife, Flo, rely on R14,42 pension, paid out by the Metal Industries Group Pension Fund.

"I worked for H W Gordon in Denver for 24 years as a 'baas-boy' until I was injured in a van while doing deliveries. The steel we had in the back of the van slid and injured my waist.

My feet were also affected by the impact.

Mr Lefifi had problems in recalling dates, but said the incident occurred in Hertzog's time, possibly 1949. A quick check in his reference book showed that he was discharged in 1972. This gave him a 23-year service with the company. In 1949 he started working for H W Gordon and Sons.

He said, after his accident he was told to go to Albert Street where he was given some money. He could not remember how much it was but said he was promised more at a later date. He still has not received any more to date. His pension fund declares "entitlement — R5,97 and ex gratia payment R8,44" which comes to R14,41 per month.

Mr Lefifi and his wife said they were unable to live on the little money they received. They said after paying rent they could not afford to eat.

The SOWETAN yesterday tried to contact H W Gordon and Sons, but all attempts proved futile. The only company by that name in the telephone directory is in Rosebank and the telephone at this company was not answered.

All claims must be lodged with the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, P O Box 955, Pretoria, or with the nearest office of the Department of Manpower or a magistrate.

Worker fails to collect money owing to him

Claimant vanishes

A YOUNG Soweto man is entitled to hundreds of rand from an insurance company which he has not yet claimed.

According to a Johannesburg lawyer Mr Mzwakhe Zondi (25) who gave his address as 506 Zola Three, Soweto, cannot be traced to receive his claim despite various calls by messengers at this address.

This claim comes in the wake of an announcement in the Government Gazette that more than 1 000 employees entitled to thousands of rand for workmen's compensation, have not yet claimed the money owing to them.

According to the notice some of the amounts owing are as high as R4 000 and the workers' names, mostly blacks, cannot be traced to their last address.

Lawyer Ms M Woods told The SOWETAN yesterday that on March 18, 1981, Mr Zondi came to her offices after sustaining injuries.

The lawyer said Mr Zondi submitted an accident claim and was treated at the Natal-spruit hospital.

Later, on checking with the hospital, the lawyer was told that Mr Zondi had been discharged and all attempts to trace him have been fruitless.

"I am appealing to this man to come and get his money, which is quite substantial. I cannot disclose how much it is," she said. Ms Woods can be contacted at telephone (011)29-8341.

According to the Government Gazette, all workmen's compensation claims must be lodged with the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, P O Box 955, Pretoria, or with the nearest office of the Department of Manpower or a magistrate.

Claims must be in the form of an affidavit giving the claimant's full name and address, the grounds on which the claim is based and full particulars of the accident concerned.

Thousands of rands lie idle

THOUSANDS of people are owed hundred of thousands of rands by the State, but can't be paid out because they can't be traced.

And each month a Government Gazette is published listing the names, last known addresses, and amounts which have been unclaimed for 12 months in terms of the Workers Compensation Act of 1941. It has been happening since 1961 when it became law that the names had to be published and probably always will.

PROCEDURE

A Department of Manpower spokesman said from Pretoria that no figures were available, but a large percentage of this money was never claimed. When one considers the procedure to claim R1,71, the lowest amount listed in this month's Gazette, it's not really surprising.

The procedure, and the amount is not always as lowly as R1,71, is lengthy. Not always though. The highest amount this month is R4 097.

Claims have to be lodged with the Workers Compensation Commissioner in Pretoria or the nearest Manpower office or with a magistrate. It has to be in the form of an affidavit reflecting the claimant's full name and address, the grounds for the claim and listing full particulars of the accident. Certainly not the most desirable procedure one would wish to follow if the amount is R1,71. Some vault somewhere in Pretoria must be overflowing.

IN TRUST

What happens to the unclaimed money? The Manpower spokesman in Pretoria said it was kept in trust.

Although most of the names on this month's list are those of Transvaal people, a percentage of local people are also listed.

People like Ms Magdalena M Ruiters of Gemsbokwoonstelle, New Orleans, Paarl-East, who is owed R1 267 and Mr Tarra Mkuta, last known address listed as Commissioner, Private Bag X3, Observatory, who is owed R1 091.

The Commissioner, Mr L J van Heerden, explained why Mr Mkuta and another person had their address listed as their last known address.

He said he checked his records as far back as 1979 and could find no file on Mr Mkuta. What could have happened, he said, was that Mr Mkuta came into his office to have a prescribed affidavit verified. Then a department official could have put an official stamp on the document which had his address.

"What could have happened then is that the Workers Compensation people sent it to us."

CHANGE JOBS

Whatever happened or wherever Tarra Mkuta may be today (and nobody seems to know), his name appears on the list today. The State owes him R1 091.

Another reason why people's names appear on the list is, that they often change their jobs, or leave hastily, never really bothering to claim. This is a reasonable explanation considering that most of the claims are in the region of R10, often less. There are however, several people listed who are owed more than R100.

CHEQUE EXPIRED

One explained case is that of Mr Zolile Somdaka of Atlantic Fishing Enterprises. He had an accident in August 1980 and the reason why he never collected his money is that the cheque expired on the secretary's desk.

Mr Somdaka is a fisherman who goes out to sea for long periods of time and he did not check to find out whether the cheque arrived. The claim has been re-submitted and Mr Somdaka checks regularly now. He is owed R96,43. His name is unlikely to appear on another list.

Another person whose name won't appear on the list again is Mr Kuluka Mhlola of the construction company Murray and Roberts. A personnel spokesman for the company, Mr H Rorich, said he wasn't aware of the exact details why the money was not claimed, but whatever they are, Mr Mhlola, who still works for the company, will be happy to hear that he's owed R173,24.

Mr Rorich said he would inform Mr Mhlola where he is working on the construction of a school in Mitchell's Plain.

About the other 32 Cape Town names on the list, nobody's sure. Whatever the reasons why thousands of people do not claim, and the reasons are varied, will anyone ever really know?

There's a vault of unclaimed money overflowing somewhere in Pretoria.

Occupational disease grants increased by Govt

(302) Mercury

Parliamentary Correspondent

THE Government has announced a 16 per cent increase in the monthly pensions of widows and dependent children of victims of occupational diseases.

The increase, which comes into effect on October 1, would also apply to workers whose cardio-respiratory systems had been damaged a maximum of 50 percent by such diseases, the Minister of Mineral and Energy Affairs, Mr du Plessis told Parliament yesterday.

Speaking during the debate on his vote, Mr du Plessis also announced a 12 percent increase in special monthly grants to sufferers of occupational diseases.

He said the increases were an interim measure to bring relief while the Cabinet was considering the recommendations of the Niewenhuizen Commission on a uniform system for occupational disease compensation. A wide range of Government departments and public institutions had to be consulted before the Cabinet could complete its decision on the matter.

Value decreased

The announcement by Mr du Plessis followed appeals by other speakers in the debate that urgent attention be given to increasing compensation payable to beneficiaries of the Occupational Diseases Act.

Mr Ron Miller (NRP Durban North) said these pensions had remained stagnant for two years and, considering the inflation rate, their purchasing power had decreased by some R80 a month.

Mr du Plessis said legislation to implement the increases would be introduced during the current session of Parliament.

Mr Peter Gastrow (PFP Durban Central), a spokesman on pensions, welcomed the 16 percent increase, but said sufferers of occupational diseases had waited for two years for an increase.

"The present increase does not nearly keep pace with the inflation rate over the last two years," said Mr Gastrow. "This is the first increase since 1981. Surely these people are entitled to a better deal. The increase should have been at least 30 percent."

Inflation had been about 14 percent a year and social pensioners had had two increases in the past two years.

COMPENSATION

Blacks lose out

The latest report of the Compensation Commissioner for Occupational Diseases (CCOD) highlights racial inequalities in the compensation system on the mines. For example, a black miner who contracts tuberculosis while working on the mines, receives a lump sum benefit of R895, while his white counterpart gets R7 454.

Workers who contract diseases such as pneumoconiosis and occupational tuberculosis (TB) caused by dust, gas and vapours are compensated in terms of the Occupational Diseases in Mines and Works Act of 1973. They are entitled to specified lump sum benefits.

The degree of impairment must be assessed before compensation is paid. Whites are classified in terms of first degree impairment (less than 40%) or second degree impairment (more than 40%). Compensation Commissioner Julius Brauckman says that "blacks are classified differently. Blacks receive R895 for TB and R1 491 for pneumoconiosis, irrespective of the degree. For a combination of both diseases they receive R1 790."

However, whites suffering from first degree compensatory disease other than TB will receive R17 889. Coloureds receive R8 945 and blacks R1 491.

According to the CCOD report,

R17 488 988 was paid out to all races in lump sum benefits as compensation for occupational diseases on the mines in 1981/82.

Payouts for black miners are generally regarded as inadequate, particularly as the lowest paid unskilled blacks are most dependent on physical fitness for their livelihood. The report states that blacks worked 149 920 195 risk shifts while whites worked 11 453 048. However, total lump sum payouts for white employees totalled R12 633 076. Blacks received R5 025 049.

Mineworkers' Union general secretary Arrie Paulus is adamant that "the lump-sum payout system is not discriminatory because payouts are based on different salary structures. Whether they should be based on a percentage of salary is debatable and we're prepared to look at this. But you can't expect a man earning R2 000 a month to receive the same compensation as someone earning R500 a month."

The black National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) disagrees. "It is clear that compensation payments are based on race," says NUM general secretary Cyril Ramaphosa. "The entire mining industry is based on discrimination. This is reflected in areas like wages, benefits and pensions.

"How can a white get R7 454 as TB compensation and all that black workers receive is a fixed amount of R895 — regardless of the responsibility they carry?"

Medical adviser to The Employment Bureau of Africa (TEBA), Dr Oluf Martiny, says: "The mining industry submitted a report to the Niewenhuisen Commission recommending that arbitrary amounts should not be paid out but compensation should rather be based on a percentage disability — in the same way as Workmen's Compensation. I think payouts should ideally be based on skills, responsibility and productivity and compensation should be paid as a percentage of salary."

When a black miner is certified compensatable, the Compensation Commissioner pays the money to the Black Compensation Fund, which is run by the Director General of the Department of Co-Operation and Development. White and coloured miners are compensated directly.

Until recently, more than half of black miners entitled to payments received nothing because the onus was on them to claim the money from the local commissioners. In addition, the amounts paid in small bi-monthly instalments were too small to allow many migrants to remain unemployed in their home areas.

Some progress has been made. Martiny says that "since February compensation for occupational chest diseases has been paid in full to beneficiaries at the mines, who now receive active assistance with deposits, remittances and investments.

"Government regulations have also been amended, enabling mines to re-employ workers in their previous occupations after TB treatment."

Safety ... new negotiating issue

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY
Worker participation

The recently promulgated Machinery and Occupational Safety Act may result in a new item being placed on agendas for negotiations between employers and trade unions.

Unions — especially some in the emerging groupings — are having a close look at sections 9 to 12 of the Act, which provide for the appointment of safety representatives and safety committees.

In very broad terms, the Act compels an employer, who employs more than 20 people, to appoint one safety representative for every 50 employees. A safety committee must be created in companies where two or more safety representatives have been appointed. Excluded from this provision are the mining and farming industries.

The Act stipulates that a safety representative must conduct monthly workplace safety inspections. The representative must be appointed from the ranks of the company's full-time employees, and must be allowed to perform his safety duties during normal working hours. He must report any threat or potential threat to the safety of any employee to his employer or the safety committee, if one has been created. He may also make reports to a government inspector about serious accidents at the workplace, or injuries or deaths resulting from exposure to hazardous working conditions.

Safety committees must hold meetings at least once every three months and may co-opt people who have a particular knowledge of health matters, as advisory members. Committees can make recommendations to an employer or an inspector about safety, and report serious accidents to an inspector.

Unions whose members work in potentially dangerous environments are naturally taking a great interest in the new Act because it provides for a significant degree of employee involvement in safety. Not surprisingly, they would like their shop stewards to become safety representatives. The FM is told by some sources that a few government men had once toyed with the concept of elected safety representatives, but that it was eventually decided that the Act should allow employers to designate the representatives.

However, this does not prevent unions from attempting to persuade employers to accept elected representatives. And it seems likely that some managements may soon face demands for this.

Manpower Director-General Piet van der Merwe certainly believes that employers would be wise to consult employees about the appointments. He says that such consultation could make the representatives more credible and help them to carry out their duties more effectively.

By Alec Hogg

FROM the beginning of next month, individuals will be restricted in their ability to take out disability insurance.

A decision was reached at an until-now secret meeting of the Life Offices Association (LOA) in November last year to restrict the benefits available to anyone who is disabled to the lesser of a lump sum of R300 000 or 75% of the monthly income earned at the time of disablement.

Several independent insurance brokers have approached Business Times with the complaint that this is an unwarranted restriction which will inhibit their ability to do the best for their clients.

The brokers also believe that this is a distinct interference in the free market by the monopolistic life-offices body. Every life-assurance company is a member of the LOA.

Because of the possibility of being adversely affected, the brokers have all preferred to remain anonymous.

Their major beef is that the individual can now no longer plan adequately for the contingency of being disabled.

One broker pointed out that someone earning R2 000 a month would in future be able to receive only R1 500 if disabled.

He added that "the staff in the respective institutions have no knowledge or profess to have no knowledge of this 'new product' or the destructive effect it will have on John Citizen, despite my strong probing".

"Is this because they are scared of what they are going to spring on the individual?"

The life offices maintain, however, that what they are doing is in the best interests of the individual.

Old Mutual Theo Hartwig explained that one must not allow it to be more profitable for the individual to be unemployed, as this gives him little incentive to return to work.

Mr Hartwig likened the position to one's motor vehicle:

"If you were allowed to insure your car for double its market value, the incentive to write it off and then claim the inflated insurance would be great.

"Similarly, if someone is earning the same as, or more than, when disabled than when he is working, most individuals will prefer not to go back to work," he added.

To complicate the matter, many disablements are subjective. It is impossible to prove that someone's backache is not bad enough to stop him working, while the temptation for a heart-attack victim to take more time away from work than is really necessary is great when his income is hardly affected.

Senior general manager of Anglo American Life Bill Haslam pointed out that the experience from other countries where no limit on disability insurance was applicable was that the level of claims rose sharply in times of economic recession.

He said: "The experience in Australia, after the introduction of a State scheme caused the majority of the population to become over-insured, was that the incidence of claims rose sharply.

"In South Africa, we are ensuring that an individual does not profit out of being disabled."

Mr Hartwig stated: "If a person can profit out of an insurance company, he will. This is not a malevolent effort to impose the insurance companies' will on the individual, but rather to keep a more equitable system."

Although independent brokers reckon that this is a cover-up of the real situation, it is difficult to argue with the point expressed by life offices that if the free-market position ran its full course it would adversely affect the individual.

As Mr Haslam said: "If there were no limit on the amount of disability insurance, the incidence of claims would probably increase sharply, and this would eventually have to be passed on to consumers through higher premiums."

Better deal for injured workers

Pretoria Bureau 8/7/83

The Draft Workmen's Compensation Amendment Bill, which will affect the benefits of injured workmen and raise some existing pensions by 15 percent, was published for the first time today.

The Minister of Manpower, Mr S P Botha, said in a statement the new Bill would provide for:

- Increased benefits payable to injured workmen.
- A revision board to hear and decide on objections against decisions by the workmen's compensation commissioner.
- Uniform procedures for all population groups regarding the lodging of compensation claims.
- Extension of cover for workmen under the Workmen's Compensation Act (1941) by increasing the compulsory earnings limit from R12 000 a year to R18 000.
- An increase of certain existing pensions by 15 percent.

The Bill was published in the Government Gazette today.

INJURIES sustained by your maid or gardener — which are proved to be the result of your negligence — could result in criminal prosecution when the new Machinery and Occupational Safety Act is enforced later this year.

In practical terms, it means employers of domestic help will, for example, have to provide protective footwear for a gardener using an electric lawn mower, ensure the maid has an adequate step ladder when cleaning those high windows and is completely familiar with the use of potentially dangerous devices like washing machines and dishwashers.

Employers will also be legally bound to ensure that such machinery is safe to use and in good working order.

A gardener, for example, could lay a charge under the Act if his employer refuses to provide adequate footwear when he uses the electric lawnmower.

A spokesman for the regional office of the Department of Manpower said the new Act made provision for a range of penalties from a fine not exceeding R1 000 or six months, or both, to a R4 000 fine, or four years imprisonment, or both.

The spokesman said the Act would be put into effect towards the end of the year.

Professor Roux van der Merwe, head of the University of Port Elizabeth's Industrial Relations Department, said this week the Act was designed to protect all employees.

In addition, the Act made provision for the protection of pupils, prisoners and even hospital patients.

A school, for example, could be prosecuted under the Act if a pupil was injured in the science laboratory while experimenting with faulty equipment.

Prof Van der Merwe said yesterday the Act would be difficult to police in the domestic workplace, but he believed organisations such as Dwasa (Domestic Workers Association of South Africa) and the media would spread word of the new Act and encourage domestics to be their own factory inspectors.

"Obviously you'll only get a 'domestic household' prosecution if a charge is laid," he said.

Prof Van der Merwe added that once an employer was successfully prosecuted under the Act and a servant had been, for example, permanently disabled, he or she would be free to institute a civil case against the employer claiming compensation.

"Compensation for the injured party will then be virtually automatic," he said.

Prof Van der Merwe said he considered the new legislation "a very necessary improvement" to existing legislation.

a cultural agreement which would allow all aspects of the Afrikaner culture to come to its full rights - including the Afrikaans language.

THE "bad" Afrikaans used in the Government's constitutional proposals came under fire at the annual meeting of the Federasie van Afrikaanse Kultuurvereniginge in Pretoria yesterday.

A delegate, Mr Nic van Rensburg, said that the way Afrikaans was used in the constitutional proposals was "bad" and "worrying".

"Irrespective of whether the constitutional proposals are accepted or not, it is difficult for me to see how some of our foremost legal advisers could have worked on the proposals," Mr Van Rensburg said.

Professor J H Senekal, chairman of the language committee of the FAK, declined to comment on Mr Van Rensburg's speech.

Mines Benefit Society to employ full-time doctors

By JOHAN BUYS 14/7/83

THE Mines Benefit Society is to appoint two full-time doctors for its 1 750 members in Boksburg to replace 11 panel doctors who resigned because of the "capitation fee system".

The panel doctors were leaving because they claimed the scheme did not cover overhead costs and was "no longer an economical proposition".

The mass resignations left the MBS with only three panel doctors.

The doctors had given their patients three months notice of their intention to contract out of the scheme by the end of July.

A doctor said yesterday: "The capitation fee does not cover our costs and we still have to pay for increased rents, nurses salaries and other essentials."

The general manager of the Mines Benefit Society, Mr C Cook, said: "We intend to appoint two full-time doctors to attend to our members from the beginning of August."

"They will be able to look after their needs adequately."

According to Mr Cook, a panel doctor was paid a monthly "capitation fee" for each MBS member regardless of whether the member visited him once, or 10 times a month.

'325 000 workers hurt every year'

Labour Reporter
ABOUT 325 000 workers are injured in industrial accidents in South Africa each year.

This was said by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, Mr H du Toit, at the annual meeting and awards presentation of the National Occupational Safety Association (Nosa) in Parow last night.

He said 162 workers were injured every hour in a working day of eight hours. Of the daily accidents, 10 were fatal and 125 resulted in permanent disablement.

Seven women lost a husband every working day.

Money troubles

"Having regard for the fact that the Act provides for the payment of a maximum compensation of R600 per month, these injured workmen, apart from pain and discomfort, suffer serious financial hardships."

If the figures quoted took into account workers not covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act, "they would have painted a much darker picture", Mr du Toit said.

"The real tragedy of work accidents is the hardship, the pain and the suffering being experienced by the injured and their families."

Appeal

Mr du Toit appealed to employers to report accidents at work promptly.

He said it was imperative that all levels of management became fully involved in the well-being of their workmen as individuals and breadwinners.

Some employers did not realise the plight of injured workers laid off for long periods without their usual income because of delays by employers in submitting regular medical reports to the Workmen's Compensation office.

Union wins three year battle for compensation

Sowetan 29/11/78

THE Textile Workers Union has won a three year battle to get compensation for a worker who was fired for being "useless" after his hand was amputated by a machine at work.

Mr Jonas Makhoba (32), of Evaton, was given a R2 000 cheque and guaranteed R67 a month until his death, by the Workmen's Compensation.

In an interview with The SO-WETAN, Mr Makhoba said his hand was amputated by the machine he was operating at William Hunt Non-Woven in Vereeniging in 1979.

He stayed in hospital for two months. On his discharge, he began to drive a forklift for the same firm.

He said that after about a year, he was told that because he did not have a hand, he was useless, and he was signed off.

The company had applied for compensation on his behalf and he was given R120 in cash and told that about R300 of the compensation had been used to buy him an artificial hand which he said he could not use.

Mrs Evelyn Selore, general secretary of the Textile Workers Union said her union started recruiting workers from Mr Makhoba's firm about two weeks before he was fired.

"I took the matter up and at the end of the long battle, Mr Makhoba received R1 830 and has been guaranteed R67 a month, which will be paid to him until he dies."

Neglect delays injury claims

By Amrit Manga

A NUMBER of employers are neglecting prescribed procedures in reporting job-related injuries. This results in lengthy delays in compensating injured workers.

The Workmen's Compensation Act (WCA) Commissioner, Hennie du Toit, says his office receives an average of 250 000 claims every year.

According to the National Occupational Safety Association, 200 000 of these claims have to be followed up because of employers' negligence in following procedures laid down by the WCA.

This figure does not include the thousands of subpoenas issued to employers for failure to respond to the Commissioner's inquiries.

The result is the generation of unnecessary correspondence between the Commissioner and the employer, which in turn delays the settlement of claims.

But delays in compensation are also to a large extent blamed on the fact that workers are not aware of their right to compensation in terms of the WCA.

"Thousands of workers also fail to claim compensation because they are fired soon after they are injured," says Mr du Toit.

The most recent figures indicate that up to 1 000 workers entitled to thousands of rands in compensation have not claimed their money.

In some cases the maximum not claimed is in the region of R4 000.

Ellison Mohlabi, chairman of the Industrial Aid Society (IAS), which deals with worker problems, says it is becoming an increasingly common practice by employers to dismiss employees who are injured at work.

He tells Business Times: "The IAS attends to an average of 20 WCA cases every week, the majority of which are related to employees being dismissed before resuming work."

"The WCA Commissioner will not settle claims unless the resumption report, normally completed after a worker resumes employment, is submitted."

"In our previous experience with death benefit claims in terms of the WCA, we have found that employers are ignorant of the claims procedure prescribed according to the WCA," says Mr Mohlabi.

9 dead firefighters: delay in benefits?

THE families of the nine firefighters killed in the blaze at Franschoek will have a long wait before receiving compensation, say advisers at the Athlone Advice Office.

But the only compensation that most of them will receive is that which falls under the Workmen's Compensation Act. This is paid out only after the Department of Forestry, which employed the firefighters, submits a report to the Department of Manpower. Once this report has been studied, the Department of Manpower will consider compensation.

According to Mr J A Fenn, regional director of the Department of Environmental Affairs (Forestry), the fires in the Bolland area are now under control.

Mr Fenn has released the name of one of the men who died. He was Mr Tsokotsile Toli of Langa, who had worked at the Tokai forestry station for 21 years. He is survived by his wife and five children.

Disabled to get 15 percent increase

VILLIERS
Labour Reporter

STATE pensions for the disabled are to be increased by 15 percent in terms of legislation tabled in Parliament yesterday.

These are among drastically increased benefits contained in the Workmen's Compensation Amendment Bill.

In terms of the bill, the earnings ceiling under which salary or wage earners will be eligible for compensation will be increased from R12 000 to R18 000 a year.

Compensation for temporary total disablement will be increased to 75 percent of monthly earnings up to R600 and 50 percent of monthly earnings up to R1 300. Previous ceilings were R400 and R1 000 respectively.

Lump sum

Lump-sum compensation for 30 percent disablement will be increased from 12 times to 15 times monthly earnings up to R600 instead of R500 of such earnings.

Pensions for the totally disabled will be 75 percent of monthly earnings up to R600 instead of R400, plus 50 percent of earnings up to R1 300 instead of R1 000.

Lump-sum payments to dependent widows or invalid widowers with no children will be twice the workman's monthly earnings or R600, instead of R300, whichever is the lesser.

Allowances for burial expenses will increase from R400 to R650.

Objections

The bill also provides for a reconstituted objection committee to which individuals, trade unions or employers may direct objections to any decision by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner.

The three-man committee will consist of a member appointed by the Minister of Manpower and two more to represent workers and employers respectively.

The bill further provides for a revision board to consider objections against decisions by the objection committee.

This will consist of a presiding officer, who must be a member of the Industrial Court and will be designated by the president of the court, two assessors representing employers and workers and one or more medical assessors.

Ntombi's problem corner

I go crippled at work

DEAR NTOMBI — Please solve my problem as soon as you possibly can. I am a 24-year-old lad from Germiston.

I worked for a factory in Wadeville for a year, and got injured while on duty. I suffered multiple fractures and lay in Natspruit Hospital for 18 months, and was discharged from hospital on January 1981.

The Workman's Compensation office used to send me a cheque every three months. The cheques amounted to R1 349 during the 18 months. I feel the office still owes me more. Can you help me solve this matter, Sister Ntombi? I have to get my accident fund from Pretoria, and it is a very long time now.

CRIPPLED SOMEONE

DEAR CRIPPLED

SOMEONE — I would advise you to contact the local labour office and make enquiries about the Compensation Act and how it would be applicable to you.

According to a handbook published by the Trade Union Council of South Africa (Tucsa), the benefits should be calculated according to the degree of your disablement. In your case, you have not stated the assessment of your disablement, hence I may not be able to give you the exact calculation.

For example, a worker who has suffered 30 percent disablement will receive a lump sum equal to 12 times his monthly income (the income should not exceed R500 a month). Where a worker's disablement is less than 30 percent, he will receive a proportion of the lump sum payable according to his earnings. A worker with 10 percent disablement would receive a third of the lump sum payable for 30 percent disablement.

In your case, you have to get an assessment report from medical authorities in order to calculate the benefits due to you.

Widow wins battle for WCA cash

A TRANSKEI widow and mother of five says she saw red when she was told she wouldn't receive compensation for her husband's death because the homeland's coffers were empty.

But this week Mrs Salome Dlaza's never-say-die spirit paid off when, after months of heartbreak and grinding poverty, her representatives learned that R14 000 was waiting for her at her Mount Fletcher home.

"I still don't believe it, after all the trouble and heartache it has caused me.

Only when I go back to Mount Fletcher and see the money will I believe it," Mrs Dlaza told City Press from her sister's Natalspruit home.

Her problems with red tape and heartbreak started in 1982 after her security guard husband, Wilson, was murdered on duty in Alberton.

The Workman's Compensation Commission subsequently awarded her and her children more than R17 000.

Last August she received

R3 300 as first payment for her children's education.

According to the ruling, she was then to have received monthly payments until March, 1996, at her Mount Fletcher home. These payments would be spread over ten years, starting with R118,25 a month for the first seven years.

"I was then sent from pillar to post. Finally, one clerk told me there was no money for me because the Transkei Treasury had used the money Transkeians were awarded from South Africa as loans," said Mrs Dlaza.

"The whole thing was sickening.

"I contacted my sister, who put me through the Industrial Aid Society. Now, it seems, I'll be paid out."

Workers get raw deal

"In this way, all unskilled workers were discriminated against, to lesser or greater extent," he says.

Poverty and Development in southern Africa, Mr Ighsan Schroeder says the compensation is calculated on the basis of a percentage of an individual employee's wages.

Employers are discouraged from reporting accidents to the commissioner who administers the Workmen's Compensation fund by the present system of granting reduced premiums and rebates to factories with lowered accidents rates.

The accident fund from which compensation is paid is drawn from a levy on individual employers. This is calculated on the basis of annual wages rates, and the nature of a particular industry and employer's record.

He points out that some factors of the Act are not incentives to prevent accidents in the workplace, but rather incentives to simply not report accidents at all.

In 1982, out of 491 198 workers who were awarded benefits under the Act, 388 148 were for medical aid and 103 for compensation.

The workmen's compensation system, which is meant to provide for employees who suffer illness or injury as a result of work, has also been criticised by the National Union of Mineworkers (Num).

Num's assistant general secretary, Mr Mokheseng Maloka, said most unskilled workers were in the mines. They work under "dangerous conditions" and hundreds have either been injured or killed underground.

As a result, he added, the union has demanded approximately R7-million from the authorities following the death of 67 miners and injuring of others during the Hlobane mine explosion last year.

In his paper, Mr Schroeder, who is Cape Town University's researcher, says no fixed amount is paid to workers losing a limb, for example. Instead, compensation would be determined by how much a particular worker earned.

'Compensation not fair to unskilled'

Mail Reporter

A SCATHING critique of the Workmen's Compensation Act is contained in a recently published report prepared for the Carnegie Inquiry into Poverty and Development by Mr Ighasan Schroeder, a University of Cape Town researcher.

The report says that workmen's compensation — which is supposed to provide for workers who suffer illness or injury as a result of their work — discriminates against unskilled workers.

Mr Schroeder points out that compensation is calculated on the basis of an individual employees' wages.

"Thus, no fixed amount would be paid to a worker losing an arm, for example. Instead, compensation would be determined by how much a particular worker earned.

"In this way, all unskilled workers are discriminated against to a lesser or greater extent."

UNSKILLED workers, who are the most likely to be injured or maimed at work, are severely discriminated against in the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, according to a University of Cape Town researcher.

Mr Ighsan Schroeder, of the Southern Africa Labour and Development Research Unit (Saldru), said in a statement reported in the latest working paper of the Second Carnegie Inquiry into Poverty and Development in Southern Africa that unskilled workers could not benefit from the provisions of the Act.

"Compensation is calculated on the basis of a percentage of an employees' wage," said Mr Schroeder.

"Thus no fixed amount would be paid to workers losing an arm, for example. Instead, compensation would be determined by a worker's earnings."

Employers were discouraged from reporting accidents because of the present system of granting reduced premiums and rebates to factories with low reported accident rates.

Mr Schroeder said many other problems arose:

- Injured workers away from work for less than two weeks were not paid for the first three days.

- Workers often had to wait a long time before they received any money.

- The schedule contained only 16 accepted occupational diseases, as opposed to 49 in Britain.

- Categories of workers, including domestic workers, were excluded from the Act.

- While free medical aid was provided for by the Act, most workers were not aware they had been awarded compensation. Contract workers were often "relocated" once injured and never received their compensation.

- Cheques were sent to employers and not to injured workers.

- Workers did not have recourse to common law, where they could sue employers for damages.

Unskilled workers getting poor deal says Carnegie report

Labour Reporter

ALL unskilled workers are severely discriminated against by the workmen's compensation system, according to a report in the second Carnegie inquiry into poverty.

The paper, by Mr I Schroeder of the SA Labour and Development Research Unit (Saldru), says compensation is calculated as a percentage of a worker's earnings.

"Thus no fixed amount would be paid to a worker losing an arm, for example. In this way, all unskilled workers — who constitute the bulk of those likely to be injured or maimed at work — are discriminated against to a greater or lesser extent," Mr Schroeder said.

There was also "a clear incentive" for employers to report "as few accidents as possible" to the workmen's compensation commissioner, he said.

"The accident fund from which compensation is paid is drawn from a levy imposed on employers. The levy can be decreased or increased at the discretion of the commissioner, depending on whether a particular employer contributes more to the fund than his workers claim for compensation, and vice versa," Mr Schroeder said.

Employers whose accident rate fell below a certain percentage of the levy were also entitled to triennial rebates from the Department of Manpower.

"This acts not as an incentive to employers to prevent accidents in the workplace, but rather as an incentive to simply not report accidents at all, resulting in injured workers not receiving compensation for the loss of earnings they may have suffered."

Other problems with the system were that there were only 16 occupational diseases covered by Workmen's Compensation, compared to 49 in Britain, and that most workers, particularly contract workers, were not aware that they had been awarded compensation.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY. — A total of 2 186 workmen died and 27 074 were disabled during 1983, Dr Alex Boraine (PFP Pinelands), said yesterday.

This, he said, was "totally unacceptable" both in terms of economic wastage and "the deplorable loss of human resource and the desperate impact it must have on family life" and called on the government to institute a commission of inquiry.

Speaking during third reading debate on the Budget, the PFP spokesman on manpower said a total of 311 648 industrial accidents occurred during 1983 and the amount paid out by the Workmen's Compensation Fund was "a massive R52 298 451".

He said a further indication of the wastage was that 3 688 711 man days were lost as a result of absenteeism following industrial accidents.

"This in itself is very worrying and there must be something very seriously wrong that so many industrial accidents occur in a single year, at such a cost," he said.

Dr Boraine said of those who died, 1 816 were African, 160 coloured, 19 Asian and 191 white. Some 23 305 of those permanently disabled were African, 1 602 coloured, 218 Asian and 1 949 white.

Factory-floor politics

Dr Boraine said that stability in the labour field was essential for growth and development in South Africa.

While politics and labour "don't mix" he said, judging by the statements of many black leaders and labour leaders of all races "politics on the factory floor is inevitable so long as blacks are excluded from the constitution of South Africa".

And, he warned, as the downturn in the economy continued, "the dreaded spectre of unemployment would continue to haunt more and more workers."

"This in itself can cause instability, but as the economy improves so will workers have greater security to pursue political ends.

"Whether we are in recession or whether we are in an upturn, political rights for blacks remain a fundamental problem crying out loud for resolution."

Turning to the dispute in the mining industry, Dr Boraine said the dispute had brought about a situation which could bring about the first legal strike by black mine-workers.

He warned that unless the impasse between the Chamber of Mines and the union was resolved, "widespread unrest in South Africa's key economic sector cannot be ruled out".

Asbestos disease hits hard

By PHILLIP VAN NIEKERK
IN a 10 month period to June this year, up to 134 workers at the Penge asbestos mine were paid workmen's compensation after being found to be suffering from asbestosis, a lung disease caused by asbestos dust.
And workers found to be suffering from the disease were regularly paid off by the mine, according to a medical consultant to Gencor and officials of the Black Allied Mining and Construction Workers Union (Bamcwu).
The mine — which employs about 1 700 black workers — has been in the news recently because of a strike over wages and the refusal of dismissed workers to leave the mine hostel.
Files at the magistrate's office in Praktiseer, near Penge in Lebowa, show that between August 3 last year and June 11 this year there were 134 workmen's compensation payouts for "occupational disease". The vast majority of these were for asbestosis, a scarring of the lung tissue.
A physician who acts as a consultant to Gencor told the Mail yesterday that the high incidence of lung disease at the mine was restricted to older, long-serving workers. He said stricter control in the industry in the past five years had made the risk of asbestosis damage remote.

POLICE have released the first sequence of photographs — taken by a secret surveillance camera — during a R10 600 bank holdup in Johannesburg this week.
These pictures may provide a vital clue to the identity of the robbers and detectives have made an urgent appeal to the public to be on the lookout for anyone who is snapped by the camera. The series of "camera" shots were taken of three robbers who held up a cashier at Bank in Grant Avenue in Johannesburg on Tuesday.

The three men, masked and one wearing a balaclava, ordered the cashier to hand over R10 600. They then fled with the money in a plastic bag. They had filled it with R100 notes.

But the "secret surveillance camera" was clicking away and every move on film was being recorded. Late yesterday the police released the pictures of the robbers.

The young man who was wanted to identify the robbers with their robbery.

He is about 32 years old, has a light complexion, is 1,65m tall. He was wearing a dark suit, a gold rimmed tinted white shirt and a white tie.

Police said the man who was wearing the balaclava during the holdup was about 1,65m tall and had a dark beard, had a dark complexion and was well dressed.

The robbers are believed to have escaped with a yellowish lime green car.

A reward of R10 000 has been offered by the Bankers' Association for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the robbers.

PERHAPS the most important development in the continuing dispute at Gencor's Penge mine is the revelation that 134 workers received Government compensation over the past 10 months after contracting asbestosis.

Admittedly, Penge employs about 1 700 workers, but a nearly 10% incidence of a debilitating disease over 10 months is pretty high.

Gencor notes that asbestosis takes years to manifest itself and says the victims are all long-serving workers. Tougher controls in the mine over the past few years mean the incidence of asbestosis will drop, it adds.

But there is no way of verifying this — new workers would not exhibit asbestosis symptoms yet and continuing questions are likely to be asked about the safety of asbestos.

No immediate action is to be taken against 1379 dismissed workers who have refused to leave Penge asbestos mine in the Eastern Transvaal, although an eviction order was granted this week to Egnep, owners of the mine, by the Pretoria Supreme Court.

This was said today by Mr Pat Hart, managing director of Egnep's parent company, Griqualand Exploration and Finance Company.

He said the firm would consider re-employing the miners, but would not say how many of them.

The workers, represented by the Black Allied Mining and Construction Workers' Union, struck in support of wage demands on July 2 and were fired on July 10 for not returning to work.

The eviction order was granted by Mr Justice JD Curlewis, who turned aside argument by counsel for the miners that they could not be discharged before having a medical examination - according to provisions of the Occupational Diseases in Mines and Works Act.

By Carolyn Dempster, Labour Reporter

Compensation for occupational disease or injury has been condemned as racist, discriminatory and a bureaucratic nightmare.

The criticisms have been levelled by a member of the 1982 Nieuwenhuizen Commission of Inquiry into Compensation for Occupational Diseases and labour researchers studying workers' compensation.

Among the glaring inequities highlighted by Mr J A Hurter, chairman of the Controlled Mines and Works Association and a member of the Nieuwenhuizen Commission, are:

- White miners who contract a compensatable occupational disease receive almost 15 times more than black miners.
- Millions of rands are paid out after death in compensation for occupational diseases although the disease did not cause or contribute to the death.

It has become the practice that if an autopsy finds so much as a diseased nodule in the lungs the dependants of the dead man are compensated.

But for most black mineworkers who return to the homelands there is scant medical service, not more than 5 percent are examined after death and there is minimal hope of compensation for their families.

● Tuberculosis is treated as a permanent irreversible disease and no provision is made for financial assistance for medical treatment.

In an interview with The Star Mr Hurter also criticised the disparities between the Occupational Diseases in Mines and Works Act and the Workers' Compensation Act (WCA).

"A worker in a factory is actually better off than a chap on the mines. The WCA is non-racial, colourblind, and claims are paid out on a pension basis calculated according to earnings. As a result the factory worker is likely to get more than his mining counterpart, even though they may be suffering from the same disease in the maximum degree," he said.

"It is time the whole mess was sorted out and depoliticised," he added.

But even the Workers' Compensation Act, which is less blatantly discriminatory, has come under heavy fire from labour researchers.

In a recently released paper Mr Ighsan Schroeder of the Southern African Labour and Development Research Unit says most WCA claimants - unskilled workers - are severely discriminated against because:

- Awards are calculated as a percentage of earnings and unskilled workers are in the main paid a pittance.
- Red tape and staff shortages result in seemingly interminable delays.
- Thousands never receive their compensation because they do not know about the award, have returned to a homeland or rural area and cannot be traced. There is R5 121 916 unclaimed.
- Workers are prevented from suing employers for damages.
- A rebate system favouring employers with a low accident rate discourages them from reporting injuries.

The new

Uniform legislation needed for worker compensation

The problems associated with compensation for occupational injury or industrial disease have been the subject of 13 select committees, 12 commissions of inquiry and five interdepartmental committees in South Africa since 1902.

Yet to date, the Government has still not legislated for a system which provides uniform protection to the majority of the country's workers.

Although compensation for illness and injury on the mines received attention as early as 1902, the legislation has been bedevilled by politics and the pressures applied by white mining unions to safeguard the interests of white miners.

DISCRIMINATORY

As a result, the current Occupational Diseases in Mines and Works Act discriminates against the majority of the mining labour force, is racially biased in favour of whites, and places the onus on the mineworker to provide proof of the occupational cause of the disease.

The Workmen's Compensation Act (WCA), more enlightened than the mines legislation, has also come under fire.

Some of the major criticisms of the WCA have been:

- Thousands of injured or ill workers never receive their compensation. More than R5 million in unclaimed money is being held by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner (WCC).

Payout for disability often too little too late

● Section 43 of the Act prevents workers from suing their employers for damages. They have no recourse to common law and can only apply to the WCC for additional compensation.

● Domestic workers and those earning in excess of R18 000 a year are excluded from the Act.

● More than R23 million was paid back to employers in 1983 as part of scheme to encourage companies to improve injury rates and safety standards. The critics argue this is an incentive not to report accidents.

A Deputy Workmen's Compensation Commissioner and member of the working committee drafting the new legislation, Mr L van Assen, admits there are problems.

"As regards unclaimed compensation, the problem is really that employers give the address of the workman at the time of the incident. When the employee is injured, he invariably goes home and it is virtually impossible to trace him," said Mr van Assen.

Every worker has the right to be compensated for occupational injury or illness — yet in South Africa the system of workers' compensation has been shown to be manifestly unfair, inadequate and discriminatory. In spite of this, Government has done little to find a remedy. Labour Reporter CAROLYN DEMPSTER, in the fourth and last article in the series on occupational health and safety, reviews the situation.

"Black workers in the past were not aware of the Act, or of their rights. However, if a black person is injured at work today, even if he is illiterate, he is aware that he is going to get some compensation."

Mr van Assen also denies there are "interminable delays."

"We can start paying as soon as we have the first medical report. We are not protecting the employer. We are here to help the employee."

However, this is not borne out by the experience of staffers at the Industrial Aid Society (IAS) who deal with WCA cases daily.

Mr Hazy Sibanyoni, general secretary of the IAS, said the society had difficulty extracting completed forms from Baragwanath Hospital.

"They refuse to complete the forms until the employer has filled in the WCA forms. And employers frequently wait for the doctor or hospital to do their bit."

"We have also found that until the resumption of duty report has been forwarded to the commissioner, there is not much chance of a payout."

The procedure for claiming compensation for occupational diseases is more complex.

"In a country where workers are exposed to many uncontrolled health hazards, only a handful of industrial diseases are compensatable (16) compared to other countries (such as Britain which has a schedule of 49 diseases)," stated Ms Dawn Garisch, a researcher with the Industrial Health Research Group of the University of Cape Town in a recent article in 'Labour Bulletin'.

DISEASE

Ms Garisch cites the case of a 42-year-old man diagnosed as suffering from mesothelioma — a fatal lung disease caused by the inhalation of asbestos fibre.

The man had worked for three years in an asbestos mill. The disease manifested itself 25 years later.

The Compensation Commissioner with the Medical Bureau for Occupational Diseases, requested detailed written information about the worker's exposure outside the work situation to asbestos fibre and affidavits from fellow mineworkers proving that he had been employed at the mill.

Brown lung: textile workers claim relief

8/8/84 D. Dispatch

DURBAN — Workmen's compensation claims have been made for 30 employees of a New Germany factory who are believed to have the potentially fatal brown lung disease.

These claims follow a health and safety campaign by Dr Neil White, medical officer of the National Union of Textile Workers, who screened 2 000 workers of the Frametex mill in May.

Brown lung, or byssinosis, is an insidious lung disease contracted by workers inhaling cotton dust. It blocks lung passages and is incurable if not detected in the early stages.

Dr White said his survey showed 30 people "who can safely be said to have brown lung."

They were screened by a radiologist to exclude diseases such as tuberculosis, which could show the same symptoms. They were then referred to another doctor for more examinations.

Dr White said he expected the claims to take about a year. He had written to the joint managing director of the Frame Group, Mr Selwyn Lurie, asking him to transfer the workers to a dust-free area.

Dr White, an authority on brown lung disease, said he was concerned at the lack of protection for the country's 42 000 cotton workers.

"At the most conservative estimate, quoted by employers, the incidence of the disease is four people in 1 000."

Mr Lurie said the group had only had one case of a worker with brown lung disease and he had been transferred to a dust-free section.

"Our policy is not to retrench any workers found to have symptoms of byssinosis. Workers who show any symptoms of lung disorders are transferred to where there is less risk of cotton dust contamination."

The textile federation was asked to research the problem internationally 18 months ago, Mr Lurie said, and overseas diagnostic equipment (the same used by the union) was being bought for the industry. — SAPA.

What about the workers?

People who work in mines or in plants that process ore are covered by the Occupational Diseases in Mines and Works Act.

Whites are entitled to a benefit examination which may be conducted at the Medical Bureau for Occupational Diseases in Braamfontein. Blacks have to have an examination at the mines where they work or they may be referred to the Employment Bureau of Africa (TEBA) by their own doctor.

If the worker has a disease which qualifies him for compensation (under the Act, these are asbestosis, pleural fibrosis, mesothelioma and lung cancer attributable to asbestos) the case is referred to the medical committee of the Medical Bureau for Occupational Disease for certification.

Diseases are classified according to their seriousness by the terms first and second degree.

If a white person is found, after initial examination, to be suffering from such a disease he is paid out a lump sum of R17 889 for a first degree disease. If, after a subsequent examination, the disease is found to have progressed to a second degree he is paid out a further R8 945. If, however, after an initial examination he is found to have a second degree disease, he is paid out R26 833.

A coloured person is paid about half of the R26 833. In regard to blacks, if after an initial examination, the victim is found to be suffering from a first degree disease, he is paid out R1 491. He is not paid out a second degree sum.

As for factory workers, there is no obligation in law for them to be examined, although a number of factories have medical teams on their premises.

A worker may go to his own doctor for evaluation (who may diagnose an asbestos-related disease if he is familiar with the conditions — and a lot of doctors aren't) or he may be referred to the National Centre for Occupational Health in Braamfontein.

If a positive diagnosis is made, the doctor must refer the worker's case to the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner in Pretoria. The Commissioner then uses the Bureau as his medical panel. If the patient is certified (asbestosis and mesothelioma are the only two diseases which qualify for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act) he is then paid out. Compensation is based not on race but on earnings at the last date of exposure and on the percentage of disability as assessed by the medical committee.

Pleural diseases and lung cancer in the presence of asbestosis may be considered for compensation but are not listed in the Act.

Bid for improved disaster payouts

By PHILLIP VAN NIEKERK

NATIONAL Union of Mineworkers lawyers have applied for increased compensation for dependants of the victims of the Hlobane coalmine disaster which killed 68 people.

The application — to the owners of the mine, Iscor — is believed to be the first of its kind in the mining industry for 20 years.

It follows the widely-publicised inquest-inquiry into the disaster in February and the subsequent court case in which the mine was fined R400 for irregularities arising out of the blast.

In terms of the Workman's Compensation Act accident victims can claim for increased compensation if it can be proved that the accident was due to negligence on the employer's part.

The NUM application has been made on behalf of various families, but they have demanded that any award be made to apply to dependants of all the workers, a spokesman for the legal representatives said.

The company has another two months to reply to the application, failing which the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner will have to rule if there was negligence.

If awarded, the additional claims could run into millions of rands.

More than R2-million compensation — which includes pensions — is already being paid out to dependants of miners killed in the disaster, a spokesman for the Chamber of Mines said.

He said all injuries had been settled and payment to beneficiaries of 59 of the 65 black miners killed had been settled.

Another five have been almost settled while the beneficiaries of one had not yet been traced, he said.

If the commissioner finds that additional compensation should be paid the actual amounts of compensation will have to be assessed on the basis of loss of earnings and support for people who had a legal right of support by any of the dead miners.

The claims would then be calculated on the difference between the full financial loss and the amount of compensation they are already receiving.

There have been no such claims in the mining industry for 20 years even though there have been 23 successful claims in the nine years from 1974 to 1983 for all industry.

Union wants pay for 'repetition' injuries

Mail Reporter

THE National Union of Distributive and Allied Workers Union (Nudaw) has asked the Department of Manpower to rule that injuries caused by rapid, repetitive work be compensated for under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

The latest issue of the union's newsletter, New Era, says:

"Increasingly, members are becoming aware that the ache or pain in their wrist, joints, shoulders, etc, is not just a strain or arthritis, but rather one of the forms of repetition injury.

"Failing to have the problem treated could lead to a partial or permanent disability, resulting in the loss of employment and difficulties in coping with everyday tasks."

● The Mail's Durban correspondent reports that Nudaw has asked for a 100% wage increase for workers in major chain stores and shops.

The union's Natal branch organiser, Mr Vincent Naidoo, said the purchasing power of the rand had shrunk so much in one year that most workers were finding it extremely difficult to survive.

Mr Naidoo said the union's recommendations had been forwarded to the Wage Board, which will sit early next year.

Mercury Reporter

EMPLOYERS were called on last night not to discharge workers who were seriously injured or disabled in occupational accidents, but to do everything in their power to retain their skills and services.

Those skills, acquired over a number of years, would otherwise be lost to the labour market, said Workman's Compensation Commissioner Mr H C du Toit at the National Occupational Safety Association's prize-giving.

'If they are given the necessary support by their employers through offers of alternative work to suit their handicap or through re-training or vocational guidance they can once more become fully productive,' he said.

The Natal coastal branch of Nosa held its banquet at the Elangeni Hotel last night in which the top prize in the A section of the safety effort and experience competition was awarded to National Chemical Products (Natal) Ltd.

The safety man of the year went to Mr Mike Germishuys of Sappi Mandini, and manager of the year was Dr Jack Goedhals of Richards Bay Minerals.

Richards Bay Minerals

also took the best improvement award in the A section.

The Durban City Engineer's Department claimed the Toyota Millionaires Shield for three million manhours without a single disabling injury.

In his address, Mr du Toit said the most recent injury frequency rate for firms in the Natal Coastal region stood at 8,05 compared with the national average of 8,56 firms reporting to Nosa.

He said there were now more than 500 firms in the region with safety programmes and the 3 800 people trained by Nosa staff were the highest number of any region in the country.

Mr du Toit also spoke of the national television coverage for black and white audiences next year which will bring about an awareness of safety.

All these costs should therefore be considered as indirect expenditures on the exercise.

A YOUNG Mamelodi man — now paralysed and bedridden — claims he was paid R100 compensation by a major company after an accident at his place of employment that allegedly led to his disablement.

The company, Sun International, owned by magnate and impresario Sol Kerzner, has denied the claims and a spokesman said the man was definitely not injured while on duty.

Attorneys acting for Mr Sonnyboy Tshevuła, of 16860, Mamelodi East, Pretoria told The SOWETAN that Tshevuła broke his neck while on duty on August 5 last year. He was rushed to the George Stegman Hospital and later to the Kalafong Hospital near Atteridgeville where it was established that he was paralysed.

He was discharged from hospital on August 11 and has, ever since, been cared for by his aged mother.

Neck broken

Mr Tshevuła, was the breadwinner and stayed with his parents before the incident that broke his neck. He was a stage setter at Sun International in Bophuthatswana. He earned R515 a month.

His family was embittered when his father went to "Sun City" on January 30 this year to see his employers and to claim compensation for his disabled son. He was handed over a cheque of R100, The SOWETAN was told yesterday.

Mr Allen Lam, personnel manager at Sun City International in Bophuthatswana, said: "That man did not fall here. He has been suffering from cancer for the past 10 or 12 months and we were paying him the full salary every month". Asked where Mr Tshevuła broke his neck, he replied: "Where did you get this information? Where the hell do you think I know where he got injured."

He also declined to say how much Mr Tshevuła was paid for the 10 months while employed at Sun International and if he was insured against injury. "Don't waste my time", he said.

Damages

Mr Willie Seriti, spokesman for a Pretoria firm of attorneys confirmed that the damages claim against the company was on the cards. The company, he added would be sued for negligence.

Work accidents inquiry call

Political Correspondent

THE Official Opposition yesterday demanded that the government immediately appoint a commission of inquiry into the high rate of permanent disablement and death through injury among South African workers.

The Progressive Federal Party's spokesman on manpower, Dr Alex Boraine, said in a statement that South Africa could no longer afford the human or economic costs stemming from work-related accidents.

According to the latest available figures (1981), 68 workers suffered permanent disablement every day. Of the 24 820 people affected in this way during the year, 21 408 were black.

In addition, six workers died every day as a result of injuries received at work during 1981. Of the total of 2 334 for the year, 1 916 were black.

"This cost more than R62-million, which was paid out by the Workmen's Compensation Fund, and no less than 3,63 million man-days were lost. These figures are totally unacceptable."

Dr Boraine said he had highlighted "the sheer economic wastage and also the deplorable loss of human resources and the desperate impact on family life" during the Budget debate in Parliament in June last year.

At the time he had called on the Minister of Manpower, Mr Pietie du Plessis, to institute a commission of inquiry but nothing had happened since then.

PFP call for inquiry into high death rate at work

Mercury Reporter

AN AVERAGE of six people were killed and 68 permanently disabled every day during the normal course of their work in South Africa, and the PFP's spokesman on manpower, Dr Alex Boraine, has called for an immediate inquiry to seek ways of preventing 'this ghastly loss to the country'.

The 1981 figures — the latest available — were quoted by the Minister of Manpower, Mr PTC du Plessis, in response to questions by Dr Boraine in the House of Assembly last week.

He revealed that more than R62 million had been paid out by the Workmen's Compensation Fund in 1981 and 3 630 329 man-days had been lost.

The overwhelming majority of those killed or injured was black.

Dr Boraine said nothing had been done since he had called for an inquiry more than a year ago into the causes of the problem and ways of preventing it, and he had renewed the call last week.

'The tragic story of accident, injury, death and wastage just goes on,' he said.

The spokesman for the National Occupational Safety Association, Mr

Ron McKenna, said while the organisation could not support a call for an inquiry by any particular party, it was in favour of any move which would reduce injuries.

The incidence of injuries was steadily declining, he said.

The new Machinery and Occupational Safety Act passed last year was also expected to make a big difference.

Various training programmes had also reduced injuries he said.

'Workmen do need training to eliminate unsafe acts, which cause 88 percent of all accidents.

The highest disablement frequency rate was found in the fishing industry followed by wood-working, transport and mining, he said.

Mr W P McKenna, general manager of Irving and Johnson's deep sea trawling division, which runs the country's biggest trawling fleet, said work in the industry was inherently hazardous.

'Fishermen work in very difficult situations and circumstances.'

Injuries ranged from 'a fish bone in the finger which turned septic' to crewmen being washed overboard, he said.

The tragic case of blind Julius

By JOHN MOJAPelo
Pretoria Bureau

A GA-RANKUWA man who was awarded R1 000 damages in 1971 for the loss of the sight in the left eye, after an assault by a black Pretoria City Council policeman, has now gone completely blind and is destitute.

Mr Julius Mogwatle, 42, of 7263 Zone Six, Ga-Rankuwa, near Pretoria, lives on an R80 pension which he receives every two months.

His wife is sickly and does not work.

The couple have a six-year-old son.

"It is better to be dead than become blind late in life," Mr Mogwatle said.

Mr Mogwatle was assaulted with a sjambok by a policeman in Mamelodi in 1968.

He instituted a civil action against the city council and won in 1971.

"I was semi-blind in the left eye when the action was brought to court. I was awarded R1 000 and I paid R400 legal fees," Mr Mogwatle said.

He received no pension from the University of South Africa where he was employed for about a year in the printing section.

Mr Mogwatle pays R56 house rent every two months and is left with R24 for two months for food and clothing.

Q. 289 Transportation of employees
762. Mr P R C ROGERS asked the Minister of Transport Affairs:

- (1) Whether employers in certain areas are required to obtain special permits issued by road transportation boards in order to transport their employees to and from their places of employment; if so, (a) why, (b) in which areas and (c)(i) what is the cost of a (aa) special permit and (bb) tempoary permit of this nature and (ii) how long does the process of issuing such permits take in each case;

- (2) whether the relevant regulations administered by the said boards made provision for certain categories of employees; if so,

(3) whether these regulations include provision for domestic servants; if so, (a) what are the provisions relating to such servants and (b) what other categories of employees are covered by these regulations;

(4) (a) what are the penalties for contravention of these regulations, (b) how many cases of contravention were there in the area of each such board during the latest specified 12-month period for which figures are available and (c) what were the penalties imposed in each case?

THE MINISTER OF TRANSPORT AFFAIRS:

(1) Yes. Attention is drawn to the fact that no reference, by name, is made to special permits in the Road Transportation Act, 1977 (Act 74 of 1977). What is, however, provided for, and is a legal requirement for the transportation of employees, is—temporary permits which are valid for a maximum period of 14 days; and/or public permits which are valid for a determined or an undetermined period at the discretion of the board.

(a) To comply with the provisions of section 12 of Act 74 of 1977.

(b) The provisions of Act 74 of 1977 are applicable throughout the Republic of South Africa.

(c) (i) (aa) Falls away.

A non-refundable fee of R10,00 is payable on application per motor vehicle in respect of which a permit is required. In addition the holder of a temporary permit must pay an additional fee of R5,00 per day per motor vehicle during the validity period of the permit.

Public permits

A non-refundable fee of R10,00 is payable on application per motor vehicle in respect of which a public permit is required. In addition the following fees are payable—

(a) R100 per motor vehicle for the first issue of a permit for an indefinite period;

(b) R10 per motor vehicle for each transport year or part thereof if the Commission or a Board should decide to issue or renew a permit for a specified period.

(ii) Temporary permits

Applications are considered on the day of receipt and if successful are granted without delay.

Public permits

The processing of applications takes between 6 and 8 weeks.

(2) No.

(3) Falls away.

(4) (a) This matter resorts under the jurisdiction of the courts when adjudicating offences enunciated in section 31(1)(a) of Act 74 of 1977 will take into account the provisions of section 35 of the Act and, with cognizance of the seriousness of the offence, will impose such penalties as it may deem necessary and reasonable.

(b) Durban 37, Potchefstroom 2, Johannesburg 50, Bloemfontein 10, Port Elizabeth 24 and Cape Town 210, Pretoria 0, Kimberley 0, East London 0 and Pietermaritzburg 0.

(c) Durban R5 050, Potchefstroom —judgement must yet be delivered, Johannesburg R20 000, Bloemfontein R1 000, Port Elizabeth R3 870 and Cape Town R10 390. The aforementioned amounts are indicative of the total fines imposed by the respective courts in respect of all offences delivered during the 12-month period.

For the sake of completeness it is mentioned that a public road carrier permit is required for the conveyance of employees between their place of residence and their place of work. No permits are, however, required for the conveyance of employees between one place of work and another place of work.

- (1) Whether workmen's compensation is administered by a body falling under his Department, if not, (a) why not, and (b) by whom or what body are such matters administered; if so, what is the name of this body;

- (2) whether there are any representatives of the (a) Black and (b) independent trade unions on this body; if not, why not; if so, (i) how many, and (ii) which trade unions do they represent, in each case?

The MINISTER OF MANPOWER:

- (1) No.

(a) The Government's view is that an administering body is not desirable in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1941, as there is not only one insurance risk carrier that is liable for the payment of benefits. In addition to the Workmen's Compensation Fund there are also, inter alia, the Government departments, the South African Transport Services, the Government of the national states, the provincial authorities, a group of the larger local authorities, and the mutual associations licensed to undertake insurance in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Each of these categories of risk carriers would be justified in calling for representation on a Workmen's Compensation Board. In addition, the employer and employee organisations would have to be represented and possibly also the various industries; employers do not contribute at the same rate but each according to the accident risk of his class of business, as reflected by the claims cost of the class concerned. There is also the question of the inclusion of various specialists, and it is therefore difficult to see how a fully representative board could be constituted without its being cumbersome. In practice such a body which does not act in an advisory capacity only would make the administration of the Act difficult without making any worthwhile contribution to the speedier and more efficient disposal of the work. It is also difficult to see how a board outside the compensation organisation would be able to ensure uniform and consistent action, which is absolutely essential especially when it comes to handling a wide variety of claims and applying a wide range of rates of assessment.

(b) The Accident Fund is administered by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner by virtue of a power vested in him in terms of section 65 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1941.

Protecting against disablement

ONE of the risks most frequently overlooked when drawing up a financial plan is that of disablement, either temporary or permanent.

Temporary disablement is the one ignored most frequently. This is because most people don't think that they will be prevented from working by sickness or injury for more than a week or two at most.

Most employers are happy, either as a condition of service, or ex gratia, to pay an employee for up to two weeks' absence for sickness (or injury) each year. Most employers are markedly unhappy about having to pay more, although there are special circumstances which could persuade them to do so.

Consider, therefore, that an employer is not obliged to do more than required by the agreed conditions of service. Consider further that many fairly common illnesses may have a duration of several weeks, that major surgery may require recuperation period of a month or more and that a major illness, such as a heart attack, could well mean not working for several months.

Apart from Workman's Compensation Insurance, for injuries sustained in the course of employment, and unemployment insurance benefits, there is no statutory assistance for people who find themselves unable to work while temporarily disabled.

Some, but very few, pension funds have a built-in temporary disablement benefit which provides for payment of, say, 75% of the member's pay while disabled. If your pension fund provides this benefit, then your consultant should not duplicate the protection.

It won't do you any good in any case as there is an agreement between the life insurance companies which limits the payment of disablement benefits — you cannot in total receive benefits in the form of income of more than 75% of your income at the time you became ill or disabled.

If, however, you do not belong to a pension fund which provides this benefit, then apart from lobbying the trustees to improve the fund in this respect, you will have to consider insurance to protect your income. This insurance is variously known as permanent health insurance, non-cancellable sickness and accident insurance, income replacement insurance, income security insurance or income protection insurance. It is simply an insurance up to age 60 or 65 which, in return for a monthly premium, will pay you a monthly income while you are unable to work through illness or injury.

Typically, a policy to age 60 to provide R1 000 of income a month would cost a woman in her mid-30s about R30 a month, or R24 with a three-month waiting period.

Permanent disablement protection is easily provided by paying an additional premium on a life insurance policy. This can provide for the payment of the proceeds as a capital sum (again there are limitations on the amount that can be paid in this way) or a waiver of premium benefit may be bought.

Temporary disablement is common; its duration for a month or more is far from unusual. Permanent disablement is as great a risk as death. The main point in this discussion is, therefore, that disablement protection must form part of the overall financial plan. In Part 7 tomorrow, the discussion will be on insurance against loss or damage to possessions.

Court slams door on liquidation as escape hatch for leaky businesses

Sheryl Raine

The Industrial Court has ordered the reinstatement of 39 dismissed employees even though the company they worked for is under provisional liquidation.

The order made clear the court's attitude towards employers who may try to use liquidation to either escape the ramifications of proper staff retrenchment procedures and compensation, or who may avoid implementing reinstatement orders following an unfair labour practice.

In his ruling in the matter between the South African Boilermakers Society and South African Cutlery Industries (Pty) Ltd, the deputy president of the court, Mr P E Roux (SC) ordered the reinstatement of 39 employees at the West Rand company.

Even if the company is finally wound up, the ruling gives these employees the right to become preferential creditors.

According to court documents, problems began when a Mr Courten, in charge of staff at SA Cutlery, refused to, delayed or avoided the implementation of stop-order facilities for union dues, leading to a confrontation between management and the workforce at the factory on January 30.

Workers sought an explanation for this but instead of getting one, they were fired a few days later.

BAD TRACK RECORD

"Whether in fact this was a disguised retrenchment exercise is not known," said Mr Roux.

"It is clear however, that the company was probably in financial difficulties and that Mr Courten probably used the opportunity to reduce his workforce.

"Whatever the case, his handling of the situation since August 1985 until January 30 was appalling, as far as maintaining good labour relations with his workforce is concerned and the final termination of employees services was, in the circumstances, also unfair."

After ordering the reinstatement of the 39 workers, the company's provisional liquidators challenged the ruling on the grounds that the Industrial Court was not competent to entertain the application for reinstatement because employees had had their employment effectively terminated in terms of the Insolvency Act. Furthermore, the provisional liquidators argued, the Companies Act stipulated that all civil proceedings against the company should be suspended until the appointment of a liquidator.

The Industrial Court noted that in terms of a past ruling by the Appellate Division, the court was regarded as an administrative tribunal and not a court of law. Furthermore, applications for reinstatement in terms of the Labour Relations Act were not regarded as civil proceedings.

Injured worker fired 'as useless'

Mr Jackson Khonjwayo (58) limps slowly through the streets of Johannesburg in search of work. He has been unemployed since October 1984.

Mr Khonjwayo, of kwaThema, was dismissed from his last job "as useless" after permanently injuring his right leg while working on a construction site.

He has still not received compensation for his injury and has spent more than R200 on transport trying to negotiate with the company through the Industrial Aid Society.

After his injury, he was dropped at the hospital entrance and has not seen his employers since. He has not received an income for 15 months, apart from selling a few tomatoes on the pavement.

"I am useless as a labourer because of my injury and don't know if I will ever find a job. I am still seeing a doctor regularly for treatment," he said.

Mr Khonjwayo is desperate for money to help feed his wife and six children who live in Transkei. He has been unable to visit them since 1984.

2% of workers will be disabled

EVERY worker has a one in 50 chance of suffering a disabling injury this year.

Latest statistics show the average rate for all industries at just below 2% of the 4-million covered by the Workman's Compensation Commissioner last year.

This involved state accident fund claims totalling R97m, but, says National Occupational Safety Association (Nosa) general manager Bunny Matthysen, hidden costs inflate that figure to R400m.

Hidden costs include damage to equipment, loss of production, and re-training.

Injury risk is far higher for new employees: half of all industrial accidents involve workers who have been with a company for less than two years.

It implies that many of those involved in disabling injuries are young people at the beginning of their careers.

Matthysen confirms that young employees involve a risk, and says early safety training is essential as a preventive measure.

Unfortunately none of the schools or technikons approached by Nosa showed interest in their safety course, claiming full curriculums prevent further involvement.

"We set aside 25 000 free books, but no-one took up our offer," says Matthysen.

General awareness of work safety, however, was boosted by the Machinery and Occupational Safety Act, in operation since October last year.

According to the act, companies employing 20 or more people must appoint a safety representative, and management is obliged to fully investigate all accidents.

SA's fishing industry has the highest frequency of disabling injury, with 8% of all employees injured over the last year.

A disabling injury is defined as where a worker is unable to return to work the following day, or the following shift.

Rating second is the wood industry, with a little over 4%, followed by transport (3,4%), general mining (3,4%), building and construction (3,2%), glass, brick and tile (2,8%), food, drink, and tobacco (2,8%), iron and steel (2,8%), local authorities (2,2%), and printing and paper, on the industries average of 2%.

SA's average industrial accident rate compares well with other countries, the US has an average of 2,2%, Canada 6%, and Australia 10%.

Of the 16 000 accidental deaths in SA every year, road deaths are responsible for 9 000, while deaths at work account for 2 000.

The rest occur domestically and during sport and recreation.

Matthysen remarks that companies' profit/loss statements normally reflect their accident rate.

"When a company has poor profit performance," he says, "their accident rate is usually high, and as profit improves, so their accident rate drops."

unclaimed

BEULAH BROWN

COMPENSATION of more than R71 000 for people injured while working has not been claimed from the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner.

A general notice in a Government Gazette lists unclaimed amounts ranging between R1 and R4 500.

Most claims were put forward by black industrial workers who, according to senior deputy Compensation Commissioner Jan Uys, could not be traced. Some claims date back 10 years.

People who have not yet claimed compensation should lodge claims with the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner in Pretoria or at the nearest office of the Department of Manpower or magistrate's office.

NEVILLE CLARENCE, blind and no compensation

Bomb blast victim: too late for tears — and a compensation!

By Nicky Taylor

Three-and-a-half years have passed since the devastating Pretoria bomb blast — a long time for those maimed in the explosion, but even longer for one who is still waiting for compensation for his injuries.

Neville Clarence, a Air Force captain and an instructor of air traffic control theory, was waiting in his car, when the bomb exploded in the car in front of him. The injuries he sustained to his eyes were so severe that he is now permanently blind.

It was with bitterness that he spoke of his three-year battle to obtain compensation — which the authorities have ruled he "missed" by just a few minutes because he was in the wrong place at the wrong time. His initial claim was repudiated on the grounds that he was not injured "in an accident arising out of, and in the course of, his employment".

"The Workmen's Compensation Board ruled that as the bomb went off a few minutes after half past four, I was officially off duty, and therefore not entitled to compensation," claimed Captain Clarence, who has been retained by the Air Force as a computer operator.

Captain Clarence then lodged an appeal against the decision, and for a while his hopes were raised.

"I received a letter from the Department of Workmen's Compensation informing me that I had been awarded full compensation. A few days later they phoned to tell me to disregard previous correspondence, as they had reviewed my case and again refused my claim on the same grounds. Their lack of fact is unbelievable." 302 STAR 11287

Even the Air Force's Welfare Office was unable to offer much assistance or even advice on legal procedure.

"People criticise neighbouring African countries, but in Zimbabwe, the disability pension is R200 a month more than here."

Captain Clarence feels that the Workmen's Compensation Act is at fault because it does not sufficiently cater for the military situation.

"As military personnel, we become targets of terrorist groups because of our uniforms — irrespective of whether we are on duty or not. The Act should make allowances for this."

Job injuries: call for care

Dispatch Reporter

EAST LONDON — The out-going Ciskei Commissioner of Workmen's Compensation, Mr Wimpy Grobler, has appealed to employers not to summarily discharge workmen who had sustained work-related injuries.

Employers should rather do everything in their power to retain the services and skills of such workers, and if the employer found he could not do this, he should try to secure employment for him, he added.

Mr Grobler was speaking at National Occupational Safety Association (NOSA) meeting here at the weekend.

Mr Grobler said, that if selectively employed, a handicapped worker would not be a risk to an employer.

He said employers who had safety programmes, reaped the benefits.

"They have a constant workforce, and have not lost man-hours as a result of accidents", he said.

Mr Grobler will be replaced by Mr Cliff Mane on December 1 when he moves to Windhoek to take up another position.

Mr Mane, who was previously a senior personnel officer in the Ciskei Department of Works, is at present an understudy to Mr Grobler.

Proposed rise in IOD benefits

PARLIAMENT. — A bill providing for increases in benefits under the Workmen's Compensation Act — including pensions that are currently being paid out — was published here yesterday. The benefits were last revised in 1984.

The Workmen's Compensation Amendment Act also empowers the Minister of Manpower to fix future increases by notice in the Government Gazette. Up to now this has been done by proclamation by the State President.

The bill proposes that the wage limit for compulsory cover of workmen be raised from R18 000 to R24 000.

The maximum lump sum payable to dependants on the death of a workman is to be raised from R600 to R840, though the proviso remains that this payment shall not be more than twice the workman's monthly earnings.

There is to be a 25% increase in all pensions payable in respect of workers injured on duty in accidents which happened before April 1 1981. For accidents that happened between that date the rise in pensions would be 10%. — Sapa

Boost proposed for workmen's compensation

THE WORKMEN's Compensation Act of 1941 is set to be amended in the current parliamentary session to give workmen, as defined in the Act, improved benefits.

The Act governs an Accident Fund from which workers and their families are paid out in the event of workmen suffering injury or death. It was last amended in 1984. The current amendments have been proposed because of the substantial increase in the cost of living.

The Bill, to be debated in Parliament soon, provides for a 25% increase in pensions payable to workmen injured in accidents prior to April 1, 1984, and a 10% increase in respect of later accidents.

It also provides for increases in the earnings limit for the definition of a workman, and in the benefits payable to an injured workman or — in the case of death — to his dependants.

A spokesman for the Workmen's Compensation Commission said further changes to the Bill were not expected. He said employers at this stage would not be required to increase their contributions to the Accident Fund, since the fund could afford improved benefits at the moment.

FIGURES released yesterday showed the Workmens' Compensation Commission (WCC) paid out over R100m last year to employees injured at the workplace — but employers funded another R300m in hidden costs.

Commenting on the statistics, National Occupational Safety Association (NOSA) MD Bunny Matthysen said hidden costs to the employer included making up the salary of an injured employee and overtime costs of recovering loss in production.

He said other cost factors included machinery being written off and training of new employees.

"Recouping overheads over a smaller number of production units and investigations and repair work are costs also borne by industry."

Matthysen said SA's fishing industry held the dubious record for frequency and severity of accidents in the workplace: about 8,5% of the workforce in fishing was injured a year as compared with the average of 1,6% of the overall workforce.

He added the industry had a small representation — showing 355 injuries from a workforce of about 3 600 and 57 employers.

"Severity is affected by the geography of the occupation — small units of employees are out at sea for a week at a time and wounds easily fester which would otherwise not do so if medical treatment could have been obtained."

Transport posed the problem in regard to severity — 43% of all occupational deaths (2 000 a year) which occurred were transport-related.

NOSA aimed to complement the work done by the National Road Safety Council in making employers more aware of their responsibility towards employees involved in transport, Matthysen said.

Occupational injuries in steel and industry affected 2,2% of the workforce — 12 900 injuries compared with 12 500 in agriculture.

RIGHT and left-wing unions are showing a rare unanimity in their opposition to proposed changes to the laws governing health and safety in the work place.

Unions, from the right-wing white Mine Workers Union (MWU) to the militant National Union of Mineworkers (Num), have slammed the Occupational Medicine and Occupational Diseases Bill and the Compensation for Occupational Diseases Bill.

The unions say the laws will narrow the criteria used to decide if workers qualify for compensation; remove the right of miners who think they are sick because of their work to be examined for free at any time; and abolish compensation for tuberculosis while it is still being treated and for mild cases of pneumoconiosis, a lung disease caused by dust.

The two bills, released for comment earlier this year, appear to remove vast discrepancies in the amounts paid out to black and white workers for chest and heart diseases. Instead of using racial criteria they link the amounts paid to wages.

But the unionists say the real intention is to remove rights that white workers have already won in trade union struggles over the years with a less expensive, and therefore less adequate, system of industrial health.

Peet Ungerer, general secretary of the right-wing MWU, says the changes amount to "a step backwards that will deprive white workers of their vested rights in order to incorporate blacks in the cheapest possible way". His union, supported by seven other all-white affiliates of the Council of Mining Unions, has mounted a mass signature campaign against the Bills.

Cosat's Num, with about 250 000 members in the mining industry, has a different perspective.

"The previous occupational health laws represented a victory for the white unions," says Dr Dennis Rubel, head of the union's health and but warn this will expose employees to retrenchment unless it is accompanied by a comprehensive system of rehabilitation.

"These tests should be made to check the health of workers and not to be used to get rid of those who are too ill to work," says Camay.

At present white and "coloured" miners with compensatable diseases qualify for training bursaries to prepare them for alternate jobs. Instead of extending these to all, the new laws will eliminate them.

The Bills also make medical check-ups the responsibility of employers rather than government bodies. Unionists fear that doctors in the pay of a company are more likely to be biased than those employed by government bodies such as the Medical Bureau for Occupational Diseases.

"Our experience is that workers are often crudely treated during medical examinations," says Camay. "One recalls the spectre of municipal workers standing naked in their compounds for mass examinations. The tests must be carried out with strict regard to medical ethics."

At present miners and former miners who believe they are ill because of their work have the right to free medical examinations. This will now fall away; all workers will have to pay for such examinations and will only be refunded if the illness is found to be work-related.

"This is like granting workers a lottery they cannot win," says Rubel. "The new laws say either workers must pay for an examination in which they are proved healthy or not pay and then find that they have a serious disease."

The controversy around the proposals has prompted service groups which advise unions on health and safety issues, such as Wig and the Industrial Health Research Group (IHRG), to hold seminars with unions and draft critiques of the Bills for submission to the government. Num, in its official response on the Bills to the government, has already endorsed the comments made by IHRG. Other criticisms made by the two groups include:

- There is no clarity in the Bills as to which government officials will be responsible for detecting industrial conditions that cause disease. The draft laws make the Department of Health responsible for deciding which factories involve "risk work" and for administering compensation, while Manpower Department inspectors will continue to monitor conditions that cause disease. The IHRG and Wig are calling for a less cumbersome and bureaucratic system.

- Wig points out that the Bills only cover a narrow range of chest and heart diseases and that the definition of "risk work" excludes workers in the chemical, retail, transport and security industries who often suffer the effects of long night shifts, exposure to dangerous chemicals and noisy machines, as well as maternity problems linked to the work environment.

- The Bills allow for a certification committee made up of two doctors nominated by employers, two nominated by worker organisations and two appointed by the minister to examine applications for compensation. Wig notes that the health minister will have the final say over which union representatives to appoint and that these representatives will be in a minority position. "Anyway our position is that we will only sit on such government committees when there are equal political rights for all in the country," says Camay.

safety department. Num would like to have these victories broadened to include all workers. The new bill, on the one hand, is a step forward because it removes the racial element. At the same time it fails to extend the rights white miners have enjoyed to all workers."

Most unions agree that by pegging payouts to wage levels the Bills will not guarantee diseased workers a decent level of compensation.

Dr. Liz Floyd, of the Workplace Information Group (Wig), notes that compensation for serious lung diseases is explicitly racist, paying black miners R2 052 while white miners with the same degree of disability receive R33 207 — nearly 13 times more.

"These discrepancies appear quite crude because of their racial nature but given the vast gap in black and white wages in some industries, there is no reason to expect that differences under the new system will be any different," says Floyd.

Nactu secretary general Piroshaw Camay adds: "When compensation is paid out it must be paid out equally to all workers who suffer equally from the disease and the amount must be equivalent to a living wage with extra consideration for the extra care and family needs that a sick worker may be involved in."

The Bills provide for the system of pre-employment and periodic medical examinations now used on the mines to be extended to all industries that involve "risk work".

Employees: are they in the dark?

THERE is little doubt that corporate pension funds in the past have taken insufficient account of employees' needs and of changing social attitudes towards staying with one company. This criticism, however, must be read with generally successful investment performance by life-office managed pension funds.

This view is supported by Robert Putzel, director of FPS Corporate Services, the employee benefit planning company in the Sage Holdings Group. He notes the strong focus on the "performance" of insurance company-administered pension funds — which is highlighted in the media "several times a year".

Yet no insurance companies report what "excellent performance" means in additional benefits to members. "The reason for this is simple." In spite of dramatic improvements in pension fund administration in SA over the past 20 years, members' benefits themselves "have shown little significant improvement".

The reason that an employer establishes a pension fund is for the benefit of his or her employees, says Putzel. Yet, as is the case with most "final salary funds", little or no information is given to the employees about the benefits they can expect from the pension fund.

Membership is made compulsory and the employer's contribution often forms part of the gross remuneration package. Given these circumstances, why is an employee not entitled to the employer's contribution on early withdrawal — with a commensurate share of the fund's growth?

For all that, it is interesting to note the success of pension fund managers in maintaining the purchasing power of their assets.

Thus, David Flint, senior manager: investment marketing, Liberty Life, says that pension fund managers have succeeded in beating inflation in the long term, "so keeping contribution rates down and improving benefits".

In the eight years to December 1987, according to a Price Forbes survey, pension funds achieved on average real return of about 3.5% (even after the October JSE crash), with the funds' rate of return averaging 18.4% a year, against an average inflation rate of 14.9%.

This result compares favourably with the average return on fixed interest investments during the same period of only 9.9% (Consulting Actuaries Survey) — lagging inflation by 5% and the pension fund average by 8.5%. (The eight-year period reviewed corresponds to the longest period for which such returns are available in the survey.)

This year, says Flint, Liberty Life adapted its investment philosophy and marketing strategy to provide funds with greater flexibility in choosing specialised investment portfolios that best meet their individual needs.

Trustees can now choose a mix of equities and property that best suits their requirements. Both the equity and property portfolios are balanced for prescribed asset purposes. A growing number of assurers and merchant banks are now offering similar investment flexibility.

Property has traditionally been a vital element in Liberty Life's investments, and more funds now appear to be including a portion of property in their portfolios.

To illustrate the value of property in an investment portfolio: over the past eight years, Liberty Life's pure property portfolio (leaving out the prescribed asset requirement) achieved an annual rate of return of 21.75% a year — 6.85% ahead of the inflation average.

"Property lends stability to returns and helps to even out the impact of any reversal in equities or a downturn in prescribed assets due to interest rates moving up."

Joe Gates, assistant GM (pensions and group schemes), AA Life, says that optimum return on assets is a very relevant aspect of pension fund management, especially for the employer who is often required to meet the "balance of costs" in funding benefits promised in terms of the rules.

But more important is the interest of members, as the level of investment return achieved by their fund could impact direct on their ultimate benefits for which they usually have been paying.

Many investment surveys by pensions brokers, employee benefit consultants, actuaries and others, assess performance of fund managers. In particular, the Consulting Actuaries Joint Investment Performance Survey measures individual funds against others.

Of the 128 participants during 1987, AA Life's own staff pension fund was adjudged the top performer in equities and fixed interest investments, and offers its trustees an objective yardstick against which to measure relative performance. "The failure of trustees to ensure some performance measure would definitely be defective."

In other surveys, AA Life's Managed Fund Portfolio, into which the majority of client funds invest, was adjudged the best performer over one to five years (the fund has been operating for five years).

Insurance in businesses

INSURANCE in its various guises is part of our everyday personal lives: we insure against our family being destitute on our death or disablement, against loss of income due to long illnesses, and against large medical bills should we suffer a so-called dread disease.

Insurance is also part of retirement planning, according to Norwich Life senior legal adviser T. Heunis. "We belong to pension or provident funds, and invest in retirement annuities to provide income for retirement years, but tend to overlook the role of insurance in our business lives. This role is particularly important in the case of small businesses, be they private companies, close corporations or partnerships."

Assume a business is run on a 50-50 basis in partnership with another person. If one partner dies, many avenues open up:

- As the partnership automatically ends on the death of one partner, the business can be sold to pay the deceased partner's estate, his share of the business;
- By prior agreement reached between partners, it is possible to take in his heir who may have none of the necessary skills needed for the business; or

- It is possible — if previously agreed — to buy out the partner's share of the business.
- "In most cases the third alternative is the most suitable, but in most cases the availability of funds is normally a problem. Most small businesses do not have the luxury of spare funds which can be saved to allow the buying of a deceased partner's interest. The answer is life insurance on the life of another basis.

"Liquidity is available immediately on the death

- The value of each partner's share must be established and made subject to periodic revaluation.
- "If a buy and sell agreement funded by life insurance is entered into, each partner has the security of knowing that if his co-partner pre-deceases him, the business can continue and funds will be available to settle claims by the deceased partner's estate."

Heunis points out that in many businesses, there are one or more people vital to the company's success.

"This may be through special training or skills, trade connections or managerial ability. If your business relies heavily on such a person, a key person, then his or her untimely death could result in severe losses to the business.

"Ideally, you should have funds available on such a person's death to attract, recruit and train a replacement. Again the most suitable way in which to provide these funds is through an insurance policy on the person's life. If he or she dies you will have funds to cushion the financial blow, and funds to recruit and train his or her successor.

"Legislation assists you in providing these funds by allowing your business to deduct the premiums payable on a suitable policy. Life insurance owned by the business on the life of an employee can also be used to cover a shareholder's loan account, to secure an overdraft, or simply to provide capital for future development."

Heunis points out that every business has employees it would like to keep until their retirement. "A very effective way to do

OLD MUTUAL's new pensions package — BridgeBuilder, offers a commendable interim approach to pension preservation.

BridgeBuilder is a new administrative framework — making use of existing legal formats — for the negotiated design of employee benefit arrangements to meet varied contemporary local requirements.

Gerhard van Niekerk, GM: Employment Benefits Division, Old Mutual, says the principle behind BridgeBuilder is to combine the advantages — for given requirements — of conventional pension funds, group endowment schemes, and, where appropriate, provident funds (See Chart).

BridgeBuilder is a concept, rather than a specific scheme, and is therefore capable of generating an

Management of pension funds

this is to put them on a deferred compensation scheme. These provide the retiring employee — over the age of 55, or 50 if female — with up to R30 000 tax-free, and with any excess over this amount taxed at favourable rates.

"Legislation assists employers by allowing a tax deduction of premiums paid by the employers of up to 10% of the employee's remuneration.

"However, in the light of the Margo commission's recommendations, the future of deferred compensation schemes is uncertain, so it's advisable for any business which doesn't have this type of scheme to introduce one; this will secure the existing benefits for employees," he says.

SOME pension fund trustees perceive an advantage in maintaining their assets registered in the name of the pension fund or nominee company as opposed to that of a specific life assurer who would be acting as the investment manager.

According to Southern Life executive director

(employee benefits) Bill Haslam: "The perceived advantage of following this course is that the trustees can effectively terminate the services of an investment manager at short notice. A replacement can then be employed subject to the terms of the contract entered into by the fund and the investment manager workers in particular, as observed in the report of the Meiring Committee.

Van Niekerk concedes that the administrative requirements for a composite scheme are onerous, but says that they are "easily managed" by the Mutual's computer facilities. An employee who becomes a member of several different entities under BridgeBuilder will receive one composite statement reflecting his various credits.

From the employer's viewpoint, there are also advantages. An employer who negotiates an agreement with a union under the umbrella of BridgeBuilder will be protected from expensive administrative obligations. Thus, if the union and the employer agree that the latter's contributions will (contrary to tradition) vest in the member as and when paid into the fund, the Mutual will continue to administer such credits even after the employee's resignation.

Also, when assets are registered in the pension fund's name, then the fund must take full responsibility for the safe custody of their assets. If a nominee company is established, however, then the responsibility for asset security lies with that company.

Haslam points out that where assets are registered in the name of the pension fund or nominee company, it is necessary for a bank account to be opened in the pension fund's name and for the investment manager to have access to it. Bank and transaction charges must also be considered when assessing performance.

"One of the advantages of appointing an insurance company to act as investment advisers comes from the economies of scale that insurance companies can offer. It is likely that during a period of a liquidity squeeze like that being experienced now and in the foreseeable future, that the larger pool of money market assets held by an institution will be able to attract a higher rate of return than the smaller amounts which individual pension funds may have.

"It's also necessary to consider whether the opportunities available to a large insurance company to take advantage of large lines of shares at bargain prices would be available to a fund operating outside the established financial network."

Haslam says that while these examples are only some of many available, it remains that the perceived advantages of not using large assurers may be largely emotional rather than practically sound.

Tax planning for retirement

TAX planning should enjoy high priority in any individual's retirement plans, says Alan Pawson, senior manager at First National Industrial Bank's (FNIB) funding department.

"With our Fulcrum Deposit, we offer clients contractual deferred payment or payment of interest in advance on investments for periods of between 24-60 months.

"With Fulcrum Deposit's flexibility, the individual is able to choose the year in which interest payments are made. Interest is compounded monthly at competitive rates and can be paid on maturity, annually, quarterly, monthly or deferred to the end of the investment period," continues Pawson.

"Fulcrum Deposit is well suited to meet the needs of investors who are about to retire in the near future. They are able to ensure that investment income is paid in a year following the one in which payments like gratuities, endowment policies and annuities are received," says Pawson.

"It is ironic that when many people retire, their tax liability increases as their investments mature. With legitimate tax planning such as investing in Fulcrum Deposit, pensioners can maximise returns on their investments," concludes Pawson.

□ TONY LEURS ... "a question of economy of scale"

PENSION schemes generally have valuable group life assurance benefits attached, and this a relatively cheap form of life cover. There are, however, technical tax issues to keep in mind.

Justin Loring, assistant GM, Services, Occupational Pensions, Fedlife, says that a cynic "might view individual life assurance as a battle of wits between prospect and underwriter." The underwriting process gives the prospect a chance to prove that his health is good and his habits sober, or otherwise, and if so allow the underwriter to place a value on the risk or decline it.

This process of "selection" is costly, involves filling ibility and a more personalised service.

"A challenging statement here," argues Leur, is that possibly the raison d'être for these arrangements is the fact that the intermediary would, under an insured scheme, be restricted to the legislated maximum rates of commission from the life office for reward, while a (higher) fee can be negotiated with the client where a private fund is being administered.

Dick Otto, GM, industrial pensions, Fedlife, says the question of who should manage a pension fund has always been controversial. Many employers argue that by managing their funds themselves, they achieve considerable cost-savings. But there is little empirical evidence that this is so.

For one thing, life companies are geared to handle large numbers of pension funds, each with large numbers of employees. Their systems create economies of scale, and there must be an inference that many self-administered pension funds are simply duplicating the systems and costs of the life companies.

Given though, that with modern computerised systems, pension fund administration itself is not enormously costly — or need not be — there is still the vexed question of managing the investments.

Employing investment experts is not cheap. Handling the investments as a part-time exercise by the company's executives can not only be expensive, but can also lead to lower returns than could be achieved by full-time experts. A difference in return of 0.5% over 20 years could well mean a difference in the funding rate of as much as 10%.

That is why so many corporate pension funds have all or part of their investments managed by life insurance companies.

There is an additional advantage in using outside investment management: the ability to monitor the performance of the life company's investment management. If it isn't up to expectations, it is easy to switch to other managers.

Joe Gates, assistant GM

at Federated Life, says that administering a pension fund requires specialist skills in several areas, not the least of which relates to members' data and payment of benefits, which are sometimes best handled by the fund itself if it is cost-efficient.

However, some areas require specialist expertise which the fund may not have or which is not a long term priority. This would be particularly the case in determining competitive benefit structures or developments within the greater context of the pension fund industry — matters which would impact on industrial relations, trade unionism, and investment returns.

By the very nature of their exposure to handling the many variations and requirements of the industry, life offices are particularly well placed to offer advice to pension funds as a complementary activity to mere administration. This makes sense, as rarely are changes made for such services. They are regarded as being part of their over-all duties as administrators.

Group life is cheap, painless in forms and possibly a medical examination, and on occasion medical testing which can prove expensive. Additionally, individual records of premiums, loans, loan repayments, (partial) surrenders, bonuses, general queries, changes of address, and claims, must be kept and "there is a price for doing this."

On the other hand, group life assurance has the twin advantages of being "both cheap and painless". The low cost results from "bulk buying" and reduction in the possibility for selection against the underwriter. While the former (bulk-buying) cost-saving opportunity may be obvious, the latter arises mainly as a result of two factors. Firstly, group life benefits are compulsory. Hence for schemes with large numbers of lives, "the good risks are amalgamated with the bad."

Secondly, group life schemes make use of the employment policy of the employer. Most employers "do not commonly employ sick people or those likely to become so" — they "select" employees carefully and there may be possible bars to entry.

The combination of these factors means that — provided that employee is at work at the time he or she becomes eligible — he or she can normally be covered for a substantial sum in the event of death, without having to fill in arduous questionnaires or undergo medical or other health or habits investigations. Similarly, increases in benefit as a result of increment in salary or promotion are facilitated.

A further cost saving may arise from group life assurance contracts attached to pension or provident funds, since the same set of records is largely involved. A "combined" fund is also desirable from the point of view of taxation as, since about two years ago, the authorities have not been approving "self-standing" schemes. Group life cover can usually be converted to an individual life contract for a similar sum assured on

Most employers "do not commonly employ sick people or those likely to become so" withdrawal from the scheme. However, in future, owing to the unquantifiable nature of the risk, any such conversion may be subject to an AIDS exclusion.

Tony Leur, Group Schemes Development Manager at Norwich Life, confirms that when group life assurance benefits to members are included in the pension fund rules those benefits are, from an income tax approval point of view, deemed to be part and parcel of the pension fund. The premiums paid in respect of those benefits are then deductible for tax purposes, along with the rest of the contributions to the pension fund.

If, however, the group life assurance benefits are provided under a separate scheme, it used to be possible to obtain approval for the separate scheme as well, through it being definable as a provident fund. As the employer usually paid the premiums, the separate arrangement was essentially no different, taxwise, to a combined arrangement. In 1986, however, the Commissioner made it practice not to grant approval to schemes which were not registered under the Pension Funds Act.

Pure life assurance benefit schemes are not capable of registration under the Pension Funds Act, so effectively income tax approval of separate life schemes is no longer possible.

It would appear, says Leur, that schemes previously approved as provident funds will be left alone until such time as any amendments to their rules are submitted.

A choice always exists with regard to group life assurance benefits: if they form part of an approved fund, then, as mentioned, the premiums paid for the assurance will normally be tax deductible. But the benefits paid on death will be taxable at average rate to the extent that they are in excess of the tax-free limits under the Second Schedule.

If, on the other hand, the group life assurance benefits are set up under a group policy and the benefits "do not structurally form part of the benefit payable from an approved fund", then the premiums paid towards it will not be deductible.

On the other hand, the emerging benefits payable on death will then not be taxable.

No compensation for casuals

A READER from Katlehong, who signed himself "suffering shop steward", wrote for advice about the treatment of casual workers.

He said that although the factory where he works is unionised, some workers do not benefit from union membership because they are "casuals".

What worries him most is that casual workers get no compensation if they are injured at work.

City Press found that casual workers are not covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act and cannot claim compensation for injury suffered at work.

BUSINESS

BRUTAL assaults, broken families and poor health are just some of the problems experienced by workers as companies resort to increased shiftwork in order to boost ailing productivity, says a recent labour survey.

Unions report the grievances of shiftworkers will become a flashpoint in many sectors of the economy this year. Industrial conflict has already erupted on the floor of a textile factory in the Western Cape over the survey's findings.

"Shiftwork has become a burning issue for organised labour as companies are prevented by sanctions and falling rand values from obtaining new technology and have to keep old machines running 24 hours a day to maintain the levels of production in their plants," says a union organiser.

The Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union (Actwusa) and management of the Nettex textile company jointly commissioned an investigation into the attitudes of shiftworkers after a dispute in 1987 over management's plans to add an extra shift to the three-shift cycle that operated in the factory.

According to the union's newspaper, Actwusa News, the survey found shiftworkers faced problems ranging from assaults while waiting for public transport in the early hours of the morning to mental exhaustion as a result of continuous work in the factory and at home.

One worker told the researchers she had been attacked, robbed and stripped naked at the railway station while waiting for a train to take her home after the night shift at Nettex had ended, the newspaper said.

Most workers complained that shifts, often worked by both parents in a family, disrupted family relationships, left children unattended to and, in the words of one worker, turned him into a "vreemdeling in ons huis" (a stranger in our home).

Other workers said they were often too tired for sex and that this often

This year's labour flashpoint: Shift work and health

Shift work is as old as industry itself, but it is only recently that its damaging effects on health and social life are coming under scrutiny, reports EDDIE KOCH placed a strain on their marriages.

Health problems derived from the fact that workers' sleep and eating patterns were severely disrupted by shiftwork.

Night work caused eating and digestive problems. This was both because the changes in shift required a change in eating habits and because workers did not have enough time to cook. Some workers complained of regular indigestion and stomach cramps.

Other health problems voiced by those interviewed included:

- More accidents took place at night because the mental strain made shift workers less alert than day workers.

- High noise levels, caused by continuously running machines, resulted in many labourers suffering perpetual headaches. Workers reported headache pills were not allowed into the factory.

- Dust levels in the plant were higher during the night shift because no doors or windows were open and this caused a range of health hazards.

Although the investigation was confined to the Nettex workforce, it highlights the trauma experienced by all shiftworkers. The findings of the survey are backed by studies in other parts of the world.

An increasing number of factories in South Africa are introducing extra shifts in order to increase productivity levels. This is confirmed by a recent report from the Federated Chamber of Industries (FCI) which says spare production capacity is the lowest for six years and urges the government to solve the problem by "investigating forms of incentives that encourage both employers and employees participation in second and third shifts"

The FCI report says the alternative method of boosting production capacity by importing modern technology was ruled out because "dwindling foreign reserves unfortunately prevent the country from embarking on a massive industrialisation process".

Pressures on companies to increase their number of shifts are thus likely to make shiftwork a major item in wage talks this year.

"The only way employers can squeeze more profits out of workers is to keep their machines running for 24 hours a day and to make their employees work longer hours," says Actwusa regional secretary for the Western Cape, Ebrahim Patel.

Meanwhile, the Nettex survey has caused a deadlock in wage negotiations. Management has offered a wage package that includes a fourth shift and has threatened to lock out the workforce if this is not accepted. Workers' refusal to accept changes to the existing shift pattern. Actwusa has asked for a conciliation board to try and break the deadlock.

JOHANNESBURG. — More than R57-million has been pumped back into the economy in a form of special rebates for employers to cover the three year cycle between 1983 and 1985 by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner.

This was said by the managing director of the National Occupational Safety Association (NOSA), Mr Bunny Matthysen, at a media function at the World Trade Centre in Kempton Park yesterday.

Mr Matthysen said the huge boost to the country's economy could be attributed to the effective safety programmes devised by NOSA, which were implemented by firms countrywide.

He said the rebates were more easily facilitated through the adoption of correct procedures in reporting work injuries.

Mr Matthysen said his association has compiled a NOSA-data sheet designed to spell out a "step-by-step procedure" to cope with thousands of enquiries handled by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, (WCC).

'Old style paternalism' is giving way

TRADE unions representing mainly low income industrial workers have recorded significant successes in negotiating more appropriate employee benefits for their members and the trend has now spread to higher income employees.

In its 1988 Employee Benefit Review Old Mutual says employees generally "are beginning to question existing benefit structures, realising that their voice can effect meaningful change".

Old Mutual says its "Bridgebuilder" programme, designed in response to unions representing low-income workers, is having particular success among the older unions representing mainly middle-income workers.

In the past, the provision of employee benefits focused almost exclusively on retirement needs, mainly through the traditional pension fund. This is now changing, with "old-style company paternalism" giving way to negotiation between employers and employees, says the Review.

General trends identified by Old Mutual include:

- More and more lower-income workers are looking for arrangements which give them access to their job savings in the form of loans for housing, education and a variety of lifecrisis needs. Higher income workers are looking for benefit arrangements with tax advantages.

- Lower income workers face regular periods of unemployment while high job mobility characterises upper-income workers. Both are interested in the withdrawal benefits offered by a pension or provident fund, in particular whether they will be able to get back the employer's contribution.

- Employers are becoming increasingly aware of the costs of providing adequate retirement benefits for employees and are trying to provide these more effectively.

R553 000 for constable and informer

302

A POLICE constable and an informer, who were on the back of an open truck when a minibus crashed into it, were awarded compensation of R364 473 and R189 237 respectively this week.

Handing down judgment in the Rand Supreme Court, Mr Acting Justice Levy summed up the evidence of the civil trial held last year.

Both men suffered permanent paralysis of both legs. One is confined to a wheelchair, the other is able to use crutches but his condition will deteriorate later so that he too will have to use a wheelchair.

Red lights

The collision, caused by the minibus, happened in February 1985 when the van, driven by a police sergeant, was turning off the Soweto highway into Valley Road. The judge found the oncoming minibus went through a set of red traffic lights.

The constable, Mr Phineus Baloyi, was 26 years of age at the time of the accident.

Among items awarded by the court were:

- A wheelchair with wide wheels to cope with the rough terrain of Gazankulu.
- A wheelchair which enables him to stand upright.
- Alterations to a house including an extended bathroom.

- Future medical expenses.

- Loss of earnings and prospective earnings and general damages.

The judge took into account that he has already received a workmen's compensation award of R97 022.

"The evidence has shown Mr Baloyi has suffered severe discomfort and pain and been deprived largely of most of the amenities of life," the judge said, referring to Mr Baloyi's enforced dependence on others. Mr Baloyi had not suffered intellectual impairment and was fully aware of his fate, the judge said.

The informer earned R14 791 over five years but the judge said it was not correct to calculate his loss of earnings by any mathematical calculation based on his past record. He took into account the man's comparative youth and the diminishing value of money and awarded R60 000. Future medical expenses amounted to R65 127 and the judge took into account R12 000 paid by the Motor Vehicle Insurance Act. Because of the large award for loss of earnings, the judge granted a smaller amount for general damages than he would otherwise have done.

The respondents, the Minister of Law and Order and the insurer of the minibus Santam Insurance, were ordered to pay the cost of the trial.

ments have been finalised; if not, why not; if so, (a) when will the new system be implemented and (b) what, on average, is the anticipated additional cost per child?
Hours 13/3/90 B444E

THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION AND CULTURE:

No, hostels are not being privatised. An economic management system for hostels is under consideration; (a) and (b) fall away.

Schools: guest speakers/visitors

*2. Mr K M ANDREW asked the Minister of Education and Culture: 13/3/90 Hansard

(1) Whether, since the inception of his Department, any circulars, notices or other instructions have been sent to schools in the Cape Peninsula relating to guest speakers and/or visitors; if so, (a) when, (b) why and (c) what was the purpose of these cultures, notices or other instructions;

(2) whether any schools or school principals have been contacted individually in respect of guest speakers or visitors; if so, (a) how many and (b) what were the circumstances?
B445E

THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION AND CULTURE:

(1) Yes, to all schools in the Cape;

(a) 15 November 1988,

(b) and (c) to give guidelines to ensure that visits of outsiders to schools take place in an orderly way;

(2) yes, (a) and (b) not available.

Mr K M ANDREW: Mr Chairman, arising out of the hon the Minister's reply, why are details in respect of paragraph (2) not available, which presumably should be a matter of some importance and not a triviality?

†The MINISTER: Mr Chairman, let us look at it in practice. There are so many schools and sometimes there are requests. The school principal uses his discretion to decide whether a person should be allowed or not, and he liaises with the department. Each case is not placed on computer when the liaison takes place. We therefore know there was individual liaison, but no record is kept about what. In the normal practice it is not necessary to do this. Hansard 13/3/90

Mr K M ANDREW: Mr Chairman, further arising out of the hon the Minister's reply, why has this practice become necessary in the Cape Education Department after 150 years? Has his department lost confidence in the principals in this province?

†The MINISTER: Mr Chairman, that is another intentional conclusion. The hon member knows all too well that the Cape Education Department, like any other education department, like myself and I assume the hon member too, have the utmost confidence in all the principals of all the schools. Therefore that is not the point. If one, however, runs a professional body like a school professionally and you want to do it properly, it applies that you review the professional task of the teacher. Then if it is necessary to get someone from the outside, provided that his contribution is of educational value, one is prepared to do it. It is simply the point that management is conducted in an orderly manner. The principal will, when such a request comes along, decide whether it is necessary to grant such a request, or not.

Mr K M ANDREW: Mr Chairman, may I ask the hon the Minister, further arising from his reply, whether the suggestion is that for the previous 150 years the Cape Education Department had been managed in a disorderly manner? [Interjections.]

Hansard 13/3/90
Teacher-training colleges: African language Education and Culture:

*3. Mr K M ANDREW asked the Minister of Education and Culture: Whether any White teacher-training colleges offer an African language as a course subject; if not, (a) why not and (b) what steps are being taken in this regard; if so, (i) which colleges, and (ii) what African languages are being offered and (iii) how many student teachers took such language courses in 1989?
B446E

THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION AND CULTURE:

†Dr W J SNEYMAN: Mr Chairman, arising out of the reply of the hon the Minister I should like to ask him—he refers to so-called African languages in his reply—whether his department also regards Afrikaans as an African language.

†The MINISTER: Mr Chairman, I really don't know whether it is necessary to owe that clever gentleman a reply. The fact of the matter is that all languages that are taught in Africa, are surely taught in Africa, whether it is Afrikaans, English or German, but normally... [Interjections.]

†An HON MEMBER: Answer the question.

†The MINISTER: Give me a chance; then I will gladly answer the question. Would the hon member like to answer the question for me? [Interjections.] The fact of the matter is that in a normal conversation the normal meaning of African language is that they are Black languages.

*2. Mr K M ANDREW asked the Minister of Education and Culture: 13/3/90

(2) whether any schools or school principals have been contacted individually in respect of guest speakers or visitors; if so, (a) how many and (b) what were the circumstances?

(2) yes,

(a) and (b) not available.

Mr K M ANDREW: Mr Chairman, arising out of the hon the Minister's reply, why are details in respect of paragraph (2) not available, which presumably should be a matter of some importance and not a triviality?

†The MINISTER: Mr Chairman, let us look at it in practice. There are so many schools and sometimes there are requests. The school principal uses his discretion to decide whether a person should be allowed or not, and he liaises with the department. Each case is not placed on computer when the liaison takes place. We therefore know there was individual liaison, but no record is kept of who made liaison with them on what date or about what. In the normal practice it is not necessary to do this. Hours cost 13/3/90

Mr K M ANDREW: Mr Chairman, further arising out of the hon the Minister's reply, why has this practice become necessary in the Cape Education Department after 150 years? Has this department lost confidence in the principals in this province?

†The MINISTER: Mr Chairman, that is another intentional conclusion. The hon member knows all too well that the Cape Education Department, like any other education department, like myself and I assume the hon member too, have the utmost confidence in all the principals of all the schools. Therefore that is not the point. If one, however, runs a professional body like a school professionally and you want to do it properly, it applies that you review the professional task of the teacher. Then if it is necessary to get someone from the outside, provided that his contribution is of educational value, one is prepared to do it. It is simply the point that management is conducted in an orderly manner. The principal will, when such a request comes along, decide whether it is necessary to grant such a request, or not.

Mr K M ANDREW: Mr Chairman, may I ask the hon the Minister, further arising from his reply, whether the suggestion is that for the previous 150 years the Cape Education Department had been managed in a disorderly manner? [Interjections.]

Mine accident deaths up by 61 last year

CAPE TOWN — Mine accidents claimed 735 lives last year, 61 more than in 1988.

But injuries among the country's 740 800 mineworkers dropped from 11 357 in 1988 to 10 097 last year.

The figures are contained in the annual Department of Mineral and Energy Affairs report tabled in Parliament yesterday.

The report says the provision of "safe and healthy conditions can be achieved only by good planning, good training, constant vigilance and close supervision".

An essential element of this was the supervision exercised by the chief inspectors of mines and machinery and their staffs. But the report notes that "unfortunately the shortage of staff has resulted in a serious reduction in their visits to mines and works".

Guidelines for Cape coast get the nod

LESLEY LAMBERT

CAPE TOWN — The Cape Provincial Administration (CPA) has approved plans which will act as guidelines for future onshore developments along the Cape coastline and possibly deter controversial proposals like the recently abandoned Robberg marina in Plettenberg Bay.

The structure plans have been released in five lengthy documents, each of which deals with a separate sub-region.

These include the west coast area from Veldrif to Bokpunt, the Cape Town coastline, the southern Cape area from Macassar to Gourits River, Outeniqua to Humansdorp and the area between the Gamtoos and the Great Fish rivers.

The aim of the research programme, initiated by the CPA four years ago, was to draw up guidelines to address the potential conflict between conservation of rapidly diminishing natural areas and pressure for township and resort development.

The guidelines were intended as a refinement of the CPA's 1973 Coastal Plan.

The plans provide a framework for the evaluation of applications and proposed developments by the private and public sectors. They do not refer to developments already under way.

The issues dealt with in the documents have become increasingly relevant.

Political changes have removed racial barriers in recreational areas creating more pressure for development in these areas, government decentralisation has placed more emphasis on private sector development for which central guidelines are deemed to be necessary and the west cape coastline has been pinpointed as a major future development area.

Manpower expects doubled workload

302 LESLEY LAMBERT

CAPE TOWN — New responsibilities, including the labour relations of commercialised public utilities, will virtually double the Manpower Department's workload.

Its 1989 annual report, tabled in Parliament yesterday, says the department has taken responsibility for the Workmen's Compensation claims and occupational safety functions of Transnet.

"The takeover of functions will virtually double the workload, and the department, with its present staff and funds, will be unable to cope," the report says.

Another new responsibility resulting from economic changes concerns the small business sector. The National Manpower Commission began investigating the effect of labour legislation on this sector last year and an amending Bill covering technical adjustments is expected this year.

The department is reported to be keeping a close watch on provisions of industrial council agreements which could hamper economic activities.

Developments in the field of labour relations during the year include a review of section 79(2) of the Labour Relations Amendment Act, following criticism of certain provisions of the legislation, and the introduction of a labour code and guidelines for labour relations in the agricultural sector, drawn up by agricultural unions in consultation with the Houses of Representatives and Delegates.

The department expects the winding up of certain industrial councils to result in more applications for conciliation boards and the scaling down of employee fringe benefits from industrial council agreements.

Former truck driver Mr Meshack Selebogo will build himself a new home with the R810 000 compensation for losing the use of his legs.

R810 000 will ease accident victim's life

By Abel Mushi

A Hartebeesfontein car accident victim, who was recently awarded R810 000 in an out-of-court settlement after four years of legal strife with an insurance company, said although the money would bring him comfort, it would not give him back the use of his legs.

The paraplegic, Mr Meshack Selebogo (40) of Tigane township in Hartbeesfontein, a rural settlement about 20 km west of Klerksdorp, fractured his left thigh and was paralysed from the waist down in the accident.

The accident happened in Bothaville on April 8 1986 when a car in which Mr Selebogo was travelling collided with another.

Mr Selebogo claimed the driver of the other car had failed to apply his brakes in time.

With help from his lawyers, the permanently disabled former truck driver for a concrete company in Klerksdorp initially claimed R1,3 million.

"I never ruled out the possibility of not getting a cent," he told The Star. "The sum of R1,3 million came from my lawyers and since I originally wished for anything in the region of R6 000 I must say that R810 000 came as overwhelming luck for me."

He said he had lost his job immediately after the accident and was not given any pension by his company when his employment was terminated.

Mr Selebogo said he was living on a disability pension of R150 a month with his unemployed wife Maria and two high school children, Piet (17) and Rebecca (20).

Speaking from his mud house, Mr Selebogo, who is still waiting for his lump sum from Santam Insurance Company, said: "I will build a house here in the village and buy average furniture that everybody else can afford. Nothing much will change.

"There won't be anything to suggest I've got money and I will still spend the same as I used to. The rest I'll save for the future and my children's education."

SOWETAN BUSINESS

Workers are a valuable asset

Most business owners spend a lot of time and money in hiring, training and developing their employees. This is a real investment even if it doesn't show on a balance sheet.

Well-trained, experienced workers are a most valuable asset. They are not easily replaceable.

So owners do not want their workers to be injured in an accident and they take care to see that the chance of an accident is reduced as far as possible. Machines have proper guards. Workers must have proper protective clothing.

Safety sowetan 30/8/90

They are also shown how to use equipment safely. Nothing is left lying around where people could trip over it. Unsafe electric cables are replaced. Motor vehicle are roadworthy.

But even with all the care in the world, accidents can happen. What then? If one of your employees is injured as a result of working for you, and assuming that the injury was not because of the blatant stupidity or drunkenness of the employee, then the employee can take you to court and claim damages from you. It can cost you a lot of money.

If, however, you have registered, as you are supposed to, under Workmen's Compensation, the employee cannot sue you. Instead, he can claim and receive compensation for his injury from the Workmen's Compensation Fund. This include compensation for medical expenses, and it includes financial provision for his wife and children if he should die.

Register

Every employer who employs one or more employees, other than domestic servants or employees earning more than R36 000 a year, is required to register for Workmen's Compensation.

This is not just employers who run manufacturing businesses. It includes employers running shops, offices, transport businesses and farms as well.

You register as an employer on a registration form obtained from your nearest office of the Department of Manpower. One of these offices is on the 11th floor of Conlyn House, 156 President Street, Johannesburg.

You must then keep records of wages paid and of any accidents. And you must pay a small percentage of your wage bill, annually, to the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner. You cannot deduct these payments from your employees. You must pay them.

302 Cost

But it does not cost very much. The amount varies according to the danger inherent in your business. Thus a dressmaker or tailor has to pay only 0.15 percent of the annual wage bill; an upholsterer has to pay 0.55 percent and a welder has to pay 0.75 percent.

If you are careful and have very few accident claims, you can get a partial rebate every three years.

Mother and son in desperate insurance battle

CHECKERS last week gave Harriet Khumalo a cheque for R2 000 – the first sign of compensation she has seen since she and her young son were injured at one of their supermarkets more than eight months ago.

Mother and son were knocked unconscious when heavy boxes of cooking oil fell on them from a high shelf at Checkers in Mafikeng last December.

The boy, three-year-old Gratitude, has been suffering epileptic fits since the boxes fell on his head.

Harriet – who had worn spectacles for more than 30 years – has not been able to see properly since her glasses were smashed in the accident.

She did not have the money to replace her glasses, and has lost all her income as a self-employed dressmaker. The boxes struck her on the neck, back and hips, and she now suffers constant headaches and back pain.

Checkers' insurers, brokers Priceforbes Federale Volkskas and underwriters SA Eagle, refused to pay for new glasses, or medical treatment for her child, unless she signed a form releasing them from any further liability.

Priceforbes said a release form was posted to her home address – but was returned unclaimed.

A spokesman for Priceforbes said Harriet would probably have received a one-off payment of about R600 if she had signed the form.

City Press and the Legal Resources Centre asked Checkers and their insurers to make an interim payment, without prejudice and on humanitarian grounds, to enable Harriet to get new glasses and cover some of the costs of submitting a comprehensive claim – including further medical tests and travelling to and from Johannesburg.

Although LRC will assist Harriet free of charge, medical costs to substantiate her claim have already run into thousands of rands.

If she had to pay legal fees, the total outlay in submitting an insurance claim would run to tens of thousands of rands.

An initial medico-legal report on the child by a neurologist – without which lawyers will not be able to substantiate a claim that the child suffers from epilepsy resulting from the accident – has cost R1 000. Further tests, including a brain scan, will cost about another R3 000.

Harriet said her son had his first fit in Mafikeng and asked them to pay for me to take my son to the doctor. They said they had already paid for two doctor's visits, so they couldn't pay any more. They said my claim was being handled by their insurance company and I must wait for them," said Harriet.

The child had fits every few days at first and as she couldn't afford a private doctor, she took him to the local clinic. He was examined by nursing staff but no medication was prescribed as the clinic did not have a doctor.

The Johannesburg neurologist who examined the child – who may not be named for professional reasons – concluded Gratitude suffered from epilepsy as a result of the boxes falling on his head. The little boy has now been put on daily medication in an attempt to control the epilepsy.

A similar medico-legal report on Harriet by a Johannesburg specialist surgeon revealed her headaches were probably the result of eye strain because she had not worn glasses since December. The doctor concluded she could suffer from back pain for many years because of soft tissue injuries to her back.

With the R2 000 from Checkers Harriet has bought a new pair of glasses and medicines for her son. The money will

Miner claims R2-m after methane gas explosion

23/10/90

A miner who was severely disfigured after an underground methane gas explosion has set a precedent by claiming nearly R2 million damages in the Pretoria Supreme Court.

In terms of a draft order —

Mine-blast victim hopes to find work

By Dirk Nel

PIETERSBURG — Barend van Rooyen (39) of Penina Park, Pietersburg, who is claiming R1,8 million in damages from a Secunda coal mine after losing one hand and the use of the other in a mine explosion, believes he will find employment despite his disability.

Mr van Rooyen, his wife Catherine and two children moved to Pietersburg four months ago to make a new start. A third child is earning his own living.

"Our wrangle with the mine for compensation has lasted four years, and I am a little bitter about the whole thing, but complaining won't change anything," he told The Star yesterday.

Mrs van Rooyen has not been able to take a job because her husband needs constant care.

They have battled to make ends meet on a modest pension he is receiving from the mine, but Mr van Rooyen's medical costs have swallowed up a large part of this income.

According to a claim sheet filed in the Pretoria Supreme Court, the mine explosion was caused by the negligence of the mine manager and underground manager.

Mr van Rooyen suffered severe burns to his face, hands and thigh, necessitating 16 operations, including the amputation of one hand.

He is hopeful about a settlement in his favour, so that medical treatment can go ahead.

"Although I have lost the use of my hands, I have organising skills, and someone may be able to employ me on this basis," he said.

Compensation Act faces major changes

MAJOR changes are expected when the Workman's Compensation Act is redrafted for enactment in 1992.

Accsys chairman and MD Dick Bradley says this comes after representations were made by the Payroll Authors Group.

"We've been pushing for change for some time and draft legislation is being produced," he says.

While this is in the pipeline, however, the Workman's Compensation Commissioner will be instituting higher penalties of 10% a month this year for employers who don't submit their assessments on time.

In the past, penalties have been small.

Ambiguities which will be addressed include legal interpretation of the Act, which says assessments must be based on monthly earnings.

This is virtually impossible to calculate, and even the example on the WCA's own return shows the calculation to be done on an annual basis.

"Our payroll software

302 follows the rules of the Workman's Compensation return and we use the annual amount, but the law is out of sync with this," says Bradley.

Employers often treat Workman's Compensation with contempt and may minimise their contributions because amounts due by them are open to interpretation.

For example, on this year's return, the instructions state Christmas bonuses must not be included in the assessment.

What the WCA meant by this was that employees who receive small tips during this period should not include these amounts as earnings for assessment purposes.

To employers, however, the Christmas bonus is the 13th cheque, paid before Christmas holidays and this must be included.

Employees making claims, on the other hand, want to maximise their benefits.

They may suffer if employers have not included the full range of their salaries and other perks.

Quit Vatwatch, committee urges

JOHANNESBURG. — Organisations participating in Vatwatch, the body set up to monitor abuses of the new indirect tax system, have been called on to withdraw by the Co-ordinating Committee on VAT.

Vatwatch was an ineffective mechanism for price control and instead of serving as a watchdog it propagated value-added tax, the committee charged yesterday.

In its statement the committee said Mr Sam Ntuli, of the Civic Associations of the Southern Transvaal, and Mr Andrew Ball, of the Labour Research Services, had already withdrawn from the organisation.

"We are, however, prepared to participate in such or a similar committee when the problems with VAT have been resolved and there are adequate mechanisms for price control," the statement said.

Bond rate up — ~~(103)~~ blame it ⁽³⁵⁷⁾ on VAT

Weekend Argus Correspondent

LEADING commercial banks and building societies have announced increases in bond and prime rates of 0,25 percentage points to coincide with the introduction of VAT.

And the institutions indicated they were considering lower interest rates on savings.

The double blow came as embattled consumers and businesses were pinning their hopes on a cut of about one percent in interest rates by year-end.

However, a cut in rates has become more unlikely with VAT set to lift consumer prices — because higher interest rates are essential to control inflation.

The latest increase pushes up bond repayments by R20 a month for homeowners with outstanding mortgages of R100 000.

The prime rate — the overdraft rate charged to bank's biggest and best customers — rises from 20 to 20,25 percent.

Industry sources estimate that VAT will cost the country's institutions roughly R220 million in additional charges and the latest adjustment to rates will enable the financial institutions to recover the costs.

First National announced the increase and Nedcor, which includes the Perm and Nedbank, and Amalgamated Banks of SA (Absa), the holding company for the UBS, Allied and Volkskas will follow suit.

Standard Bank and Natal Building Society spokesmen said it was likely their organisations would do so after meetings on Monday to review the rate increases.

MY SECRET BLINDNESS

302

SIX years ago Sheila Schoeman was paid R52 000 and, she claims, she was told to keep her mouth shut about how she was blinded at work.

Now the 35-year-old woman, whose family are living in poverty, has spoken out for the first time.

Sitting in her small dilapidated home, the young mother of four wept as she told of the "raw deal" she got after she lost 90 percent of her vision.

She was one of four employees at the world-famous Onderstepoort Veterinary Research Institute who lost their sight and health after handling a vaccine for African horse sickness.

The first victim, Mr Ernst Jordaan, 35, a father of three, worked as a veterinary technologist at Onderstepoort when he became ill with flu-like symptoms and raging fevers in February 1982.

Coma

"For six weeks I was in a coma. Twice during this time my wife Susan called a priest to my bedside as they thought I was going to die," said Mr Jordaan.

But he survived and when he opened his eyes for the first time, found he was blind.

Three years later a desperately ill Mrs Schoeman also went into a coma after suffering similar symptoms.

"I was out for two weeks and, when I came round, I was blind. I was admitted to an isolation ward at the HF Verwoerd hospital because no one knew what was wrong with me. I cried so much. I just could not come to terms with my blindness."

Then in January 1989 Onderstepoort packer Mrs Louise le Roux, 28, whose daughter was only a month old, also became ill.

After a week in a coma she suffered brain damage and lost the sight in one eye. Four months later colleague Mrs Ilse Janse van Vuuren, 33, a laboratory technician became desperately ill.

For two weeks she was unconscious and when she came round she was blind in one eye and had lost 70 percent vision in the other.

She also has brain damage and is unable to remember any childhood or day-to-day events.

Mrs Schoeman said she began working at the Onderstepoort Veterinary Research Institute in 1983.

"I used to put the lids on the flasks of highly concentrated dried vaccine before they went into the machines to be sealed," she said.

"At least 50 flasks broke a day and we were inhaling the vaccine dust."

Onderstepoort admitted that the vaccine was to blame.

"The director, Dr Daan Verwoerd, called the three of us into his office one day," said Mrs Schoeman.

"He told us it was the horse vaccine that had caused our problems and that we were to be compensated."

"They gave me R26 700 for my eyesight and R26 000 from the Accident Commission. I remember

Mrs van Vuuren only got R12 500 and Louise was given even less.

"They also told us not to tell anyone. We had to keep the cause of our blindness a secret. We all agreed and accepted their compensation, but now we realise that we got a raw deal."

Burden

"We were all cheated. I get two pensions which total R1 200 a month and my husband Gert brings home R900. We cannot survive like this and I am an added burden because I cannot see."

"Dr Verwoerd has publicly said that they paid for all our medical expenses. This is not true. It has cost us over R20 000 for my hospital fees and my husband's medical aid only paid a certain amount."

"But we are left with the expenses of all the other eye operations I have had over the past few years," she said.

Dr Verwoerd said the state had accepted responsibility for the four workers and that they were fully compensated by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner.

He said the commissioner had assured him that all medical costs had been paid even in respect of the cases which were diagnosed later.

"The claim about the women being sworn to secrecy is unfounded. We asked them not to talk to other workers until we had completed the investigation in order to prevent panic.

"Two of the people involved have sought increased compensation by means of a law suit against the commissioner. The case is pending."

Mr Jordaan, who lives in Pretoria North, said he deserved an increase in compensation.

"I was in London studying to become a physiotherapist when I got a call from Onderstepoort in 1989.

"They told me they had discovered that it was the African horse vaccine that had blinded me.

"They paid me about R50 000 and I get about R800 a month disability pension, but this can never compensate for the loss of my eyes."

Debts

"I went to London to become a physiotherapist. It is one of the few places where the disabled can be properly trained. I had to pay for my family. Soon after I went blind I was transferred from Onderstepoort to Hospital Services and, for the eight years since my illness, they have frozen my salary. I do not get any increases.

"I have to feed my family and pay off study debts. I have also had to pay all my own medical expenses which amounted to well over R20 000.

"All I want is an increase in my payout and I have now instructed a lawyer to look into the matter for me."

Mrs Janse van Vuuren has also taken legal steps, but she said no amount of money could ever change the devastation to her life.

Paralysed man

sacked, evicted

A PARALYSED Soweto man has claimed he was sacked and evicted from his company house without compensation after working for the company for 13 years.

Mr Isaac Ntongolo (41) who worked for Village Reef Gold Mine, an Anglo Vaal subsidiary, was in a car accident in September 1989 which paralysed him.

Operation

He underwent a spinal cord operation at Rand Mutual hospital and spent a year in hospital.

"They said they could not do anything because I was not injured at work," Ntongolo said.

"They said they had spent R70 000 on the wheelchair and medical expenses and that there was nothing left for me.

"Later I was told to leave the company house because I was no longer working. I refused to move until they forced us out. There was nowhere I could go. I cried a lot when I remembered how faithfully I worked for the company for such a long time," he said.

Village Main Reef Gold Mine personnel officer Mr Dion

Badenhorst said his company did all it could to help Ntongolo.

"We bought him a R10 000 wheelchair, paid R70 000 for medical expenses and gave him R3 000 for a house deposit," he said.

He said Ntongolo stayed in the company house free for two years after the accident.

"There was nothing further we could do because he was not injured at work," he said.

Today Ntongolo, his wife and three children temporarily live in a "house" about the size of a train compartments.

There is virtually no space for anything other than his bed. They do their cooking in the adjoining house.

Pension

Their only source of income is the R235 Government pension he receives each month.

Sometimes the Soweto Association for the Physically Disabled gives him food packages. His wife does not work.

"What we need more than anything else now is a place of our own where we will not bother anybody," Ntongolo said.

Safety ruling to protect workers

By FRED ROFFEY

THE campaign for environmental awareness and action is being tackled vigorously on several fronts — including the government, trade unions, Cape Town City Council and leading Cape businesses and retailers such as Pick 'n Pay.

The latest government move is a ruling by the Department of Manpower on the Machinery and Occupational Safety Act, which places responsibility for worker safety in the hands of employers and manufacturers of personal protective equipment.

"In the past an employer could purchase inferior equipment and not be held directly responsible for industrial-related diseases," said Ivan Pretorius, technical affairs specialist at 3M's occupational health and environmental safety division.

"Now he has a duty not only to identify the need for protection but to train his staff adequately.

3M, one of South Africa's major producers of respiratory protective equipment, has criticised employers, manufacturers and suppliers, saying they often failed to identify adequately the type of protection needed for workers, used inadequate equipment which did not give proper protection and did not train workers correctly in the use of protective equipment.

"Approximately R1,5-million was paid out to workers under the Workmen's Compensation Act during 1988 as a result of respiratory problems generated by various contaminants including silica, asbestos, mercury and cotton dust," said Mr Pretorius.

"These costs were caused by unsafe working conditions and exclude loss of productivity.

"The employer is now compelled to specifically identify the nature of contaminants in the workplace, and the manufacturer and suppliers now has a duty to guarantee the level of protection that his product claims to give.

The move has been welcomed by trade unions.

They point out that workers benefit directly from the ruling by the Department of Manpower, as they are assured of adequate protection and have legal resource against employers who fail to supply correct protection.

The wider issues of environmental awareness include vigilance to ensure that a healthy balance is maintained between the need for economic growth and the need to protect a natural and historically built environment, as in the Cape.

The watchdog body that fulfills this role in Cape Town is the City Council's Environmental Advisory Committee, which includes not only councillors but representatives from a wide range of professional and other interested bodies, including the Cape Town Chamber of Commerce.

The objects of this committee are to consider, report upon and make recommendations to the City Council concerning important matters of environmental and aesthetic significance.

One of the companies in the forefront of preserving Cape Town's environment is Pick 'n Pay.

Its chairman, Raymond Ackerman, has become a member of the Geneva-based Business Council for Sustainable Development, an international body on which sit 50 chief executive officers of major companies. He represents the Southern Africa region and is one of four African members.

The committee is paving the way for the biggest environmental get-together ever — the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development called Earth Summit '92, in Rio de Janeiro next June.

Mr Ackerman has been invited to attend the conference, and his friend, Maurice Strong, who will be secretary-general of the conference, emphasises that what's good for environment can be good for development and business.

Mr Strong points out that Japan has the toughest air and water pollution regulations of any country, so forcing companies to become environment and energy conscious.

Now they use only half the energy per unit of production that the USA uses, which gives them a comparative advantage of at least five percent on energy alone.

South Africa is also becoming aware of energy saving as a new competitive edge.

Johann Basson, manager of electricity and energy efficiency at the National Energy Council, estimates the country's industrial, mining and commercial enterprises could save up to R1-billion a year by using energy more efficiently.

One of the first steps in this direction is a two-day international congress next year on June 8 and 9, organised by the Southern African Institute of Energy, where the business sector will disseminate information and use case studies on energy efficiency.

The limit was recently increased to R20 000. PFV risk management consultant Ken Thom says this is "a clear indication to the courts that stiffer penalties are required and it can also be interpreted as a directive to the inspectors for strict enforcement of legislation."

There have been several out of court settlements recently in excess of R1m arising from civil suits.

With the cost of liability cover rising, many companies consciously self-insure to some extent. That means tightening risk management programmes. For both moral and financial reasons, says Thom, no employer can be casual about safety.

MANPOWER TRAINING ACT, 1981

WITHDRAWAL OF THE TRAINING SCHEME FOR THE RETAIL INDUSTRIES OF ACCOMMODATION, CATERING AND LIQUOR AND ESTABLISHMENT OF TRAINING SCHEME FOR THE HOSPITALITY INDUSTRIES

I, Pieter Gabriel Marais, Minister of Manpower, acting in terms of sections 39 (5) and 39 (6) of the Manpower Training Act, 1981 —

(a) hereby withdraw Government Notice No. R. 2439 of 28 November 1986, as amended by Government Notice, No. R. 2410 of 10 November 1989, with effect from the date of publication hereof: Provided that the provisions of clauses 8 (1) and 8 (2) of the Scheme published by the said Government Notice shall remain in force up to and including 29 February 1992; and

(b) hereby declare that the provisions of the Scheme which appears in the Schedule hereto, shall be binding with effect from the date of publication hereof for a period ending on 28 February 1997, upon all employers and employees who are engaged or employed in the Hospitality Industries in the Republic of South Africa.

P. G. MARAIS,

Minister of Manpower.

SCHEDULE

The Training Scheme for the Hospitality Industries, hereinafter referred to as "the Industry", has been established by—the Federated Hotel, Liquor and Catering Association of South Africa (FEDHASA);

the Catering, Restaurant and Tearoom Association (CATRA);

the Associated Clubs of South Africa (ACSA); and the South African Chefs' Association (SACA), PREDICTIONS on the effect of AIDS on society are assuming the deliberate ambiguity of the predictions of Nostradamus or the pronouncements of the Delphic oracle.

There are too many variables and too many unknowns for there to exist the kind of simple, mathematically calculated compound projection which planners seek.

Nor is it possible to generalise about a "world AIDS crisis". The circumstances differ from continent to continent, from community to community. In SA, which contains elements of the developed, developing and underdeveloped world, "expert" projections over the next 20 years range from under 400 000 deaths to more than 2-million.

Yet even amid wildly varying prognostications it is safe to predict, with vague Delphic wisdom, that within the foreseeable future AIDS will have a profound effect on every activity in this country. It certainly can put at risk company benefit funds such as medical aid schemes and pension funds.

A dramatic increase in financial claims for hospitalisation, early retirement and death in service may be on the cards and this would threaten schemes' solvency. Far-sighted companies are now reassessing the rules and management of their benefit funds in an effort to ensure they keep afloat. But in doing so they may be running into a number of legal hazards.

Many medical aid societies have amended their rules to drop the ceiling for claims resulting from AIDS — some down to as low a limit as R100 a claim. Straightforward differentiation of this kind is not necessarily wise nor fair and, in certain circumstances, may be unlawful.

At the same time there is a trend today towards fettering the normally wide discretionary powers which trustees and administrators of pension, benefit and related funds have in making awards. The Financial Institutions Amendment Act 1991, for example, introduces the yardstick of "reasonable benefit expectations" of members of certain aspects of the administration of pension funds — a seed for the growth of members' rights, for example, to regular pension adjustments for inflation. More important is the trend to view employee benefits as falling within the ambit of industrial relations and employment law — which means that decisions over pension and other benefits may increasingly fall subject to intervention by the Industrial Court as unfair practices.

The recent Industrial Court decision of Van Copenhagen vs Shell and BP Petroleum Refineries seems to confirm this trend. The court held that a dispute concerning an early pension was one involving the employment relationship and intervened to award an early pension, where this had been refused.

It is possible the court will also intervene where unfairness to employees is alleged in relation to AIDS. A decision to limit social security benefits in the case of employees who have contracted AIDS could be challenged in the Industrial Court.

However, what also has to be considered in the future, is the possibility that, unless AIDS claims are treated differently, the illness will drain resources to the point where pension funds and medical aid schemes will be unable to function in providing social security for all employees.

One solution is to limit benefits to the particular member's contributions and matching employer contributions much along the lines of a provident fund. This would entail radical restructuring. But the solution may be undesirable in principle, for it reduces a fund's ability to cater for the varying needs of different members and, in the absence of an AIDS epidemic, it may be unduly restrictive in the award of benefits to employees with AIDS.

A variation of this solution is to fix costs to the employer, thereby reducing his risk. But this does not prevent the dissipation of the funds' resources.

Another potential solution which has been fiercely debated is the use of pre-employment testing for HIV and the exclusion from employment on that basis. It seems clear in the face of an epidemic that this will not provide a safe screen.

The best course may be to vest trustees and administrators with a clear but circumscribed discretion that where an epidemic objectively places the financial future of a fund in jeopardy — and only in these circumstances — they may limit benefits where the application is traceable to AIDS.

Differentiation in the face of such a catastrophe should be permissible but care should be taken to frame rules and to empower the trustees in a manner so as to avoid statutory constraints, such as the restriction on benefit reductions contained in the Pension Fund Act and also claims for unfair discrimination.

To do so it will be necessary to revisit and revise AIDS policies and the rules of benefit funds, pension and similar schemes and to empower the trustees and managers so as to enable them to steer a successful course between the Scylla of financial collapse and Charibdis of multiple unfair discrimination claims.

Payout fight continues over cancer death

South 27/2-4/3/92

A WORKER'S struggle for compensation for contracting lung cancer after being exposed to asbestos for 25 years continued this week although he died a year ago.

Mr Mangala Nyaka died without knowing whether his wife and four children, who live in Transkei, would be granted compensation.

A medical report submitted to the Workmen's Compensation Court said the history of Nyaka's claim began in March 1989 when he was admitted to the Groote Schuur Hospital.

The report, by the doctor who examined him, said the cancer was caused by his exposure to asbestos.

Nyaka was examined again when he developed breathing problems and was unable to work.

The man had a 25-year history of asbestos exposure, and there was a considerable body of medical scientific evidence linking his illness to his occupation, the report said.

In terms of South African law, a worker cannot be compensated for contracting lung cancer at work.

The Legal Resources Centre (LRC) asked the commissioner to grant compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act because it had been proven the cause of death was as a result of exposure to asbestos.

The commissioner was also asked to schedule lung cancer as a compensatory disease, irrespective of the outcome of Nyaka's appeal.

Nyaka worked at the Everite asbestos plant from 1964 as a machine operator producing asbestos boards until May 1989 when his illness forced him to stop working.

The company paid his full salary for two to three weeks after he left work but did not pay any of his medical expenses.

Judgement was reserved at the Compensation Court on Nyaka's appeal.

AN APPEAL against a decision not to pay workmen's compensation to a man who eventually died of cancer after 25 years in the asbestos industry is being heard in the Workmen's Compensation Court today.

It is believed to be the first case of its kind.

A physician who treated the 46-year-old Transkei citizen before he died said the man had worked for asbestos products manufacturers Everite for about 25 years.

"He developed lung cancer and died. We applied for workmen's compensation for him in 1989. This was refused in early 1990 and we have appealed, with the help of the Legal Resources Centre, against the refusal to compensate."

The physician said they would be presenting comprehensive evidence of the dangers of asbestos to the court.

Little relief for wounded soldiers of industry

A SHORT notice in the Government Gazette each year determines the living standard of the many people who depend on pensions paid in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act. The notice (published on February 28 this year) is headed "Increase of Benefits" but "Decrease of Benefits" would be a more appropriate title.

This is because pensions paid to some permanently disabled workers and to the dependants of workers killed in industrial accidents or by scheduled occupational diseases have been "increased" this year by 6%. With inflation close to 16% their standard of living will drop as it has done each year since they first received their pensions.

During the '80s the adjustments to these pensions were at less than half the rate of inflation and this pattern continues.

How many people are affected by this state of affairs?

According to its 1990 annual report, the Accident Fund run by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner pays pensions to 7 030 injured workers and to 14 310 dependants of workers killed in accidents.

These figures exclude the mining industry (whose insurer Rand Mutual Assurance pays pensions to 5 267 disabled workers and 17 704 dependants), state, provincial and Transnet employees, those employed in major municipalities and those (mainly in the building industry) falling under the mutual association Federated Employer's Mutual.

While the adjustment of pensions may be inadequate, those injured workers receiving a pension are better off than many others who are unable to find employment because of work injuries. Only workers whose disability is assessed as exceeding 30% receive a pension. This assessment does not take into account the worker's prospects of finding employment. Therefore, a manual worker who loses his or her entire thumb or three fingers on one hand may never work again, but will not receive a pension and will have to be content with a lump sum equal to his or her wages for 12 months.

Pensions awarded also reflect a limited percentage of the employee's earnings. A totally disabled worker's pension will be 75% of earnings at the time of the accident. A worker who loses a leg below the knee (a 35%-45% disability) will at most receive a pension equal to approximately one-third of earnings, while the loss of a hand at the wrist (50% disability) brings a pension of 37.5% of earnings. The dependants of fatally injured workers can receive a pension of up to 75% of earnings at the time of the accident, depending on the family structure.

Could the fund and other insurers afford to make more realistic adjustments to pensions?

The resources of the fund depend on the employers' level of contribution. Employers pay on average an assessment equivalent to 1% of their wage bill for employees covered by the Act. The rates are highest for the more dangerous industries with high accident rates and lowest for "safe" industries like accountancy and hair-dressing. The mining industry, for instance, pays 2%.

A contribution of 1% would appear to be very low for the benefits that employers obtain which include protection against claims for damages by employees.

It is difficult to compare our compensation scheme with that of other countries, but the most appropriate comparison is probably with the schemes of the Canadian provinces on which the SA system was modelled. In 1988, in some provinces, the average contribution for employers was 3% of their wage bill.

However, even on current contributions the fund would appear to be able to afford a more generous increase in pension payments. In the financial year ending February 1990 (the last for which financial statements are available) the fund generated a surplus of R40m, most of which will be returned to employers whose claims records are better than the average for their industry.

The notice in the Government Gazette also increases the earnings ceiling for employees to be covered by the Act. Employees earning below the ceiling are automatically covered by the Act and an employer may make a special arrangement for employees earning above it to be covered.

This "ceiling" creates considerable administrative difficulties for employers and the Commissioner and should be scrapped. The Act should be extended to all employees regardless of earnings level. Bringing well-paid employees within the Act's scope would make them aware of the limited benefits it provides for employees, and perhaps increase pressure for its reform.

Issues of workers' compensation receive little public attention. The Workmen's Compensation Act has remained virtually unchanged for more than 50 years and its companion, the Occupational Diseases in Mines and Works Act which compensates mineworkers (about 6 000 a year) who contract certain occupational diseases, remains the only explicitly racially discriminatory piece of legislation on our statute book. White workers receive up to 13 times as much as black workers with the same conditions. A government White Paper in 1984 recommended its overhaul, but this has still to find legislative form.

A well-known book on occupational health and safety is titled The Wounded Soldiers of Industry. In SA, we are able to forget the wounded soldiers more easily because much of our industrial injury, disease and death are exported to neighbouring territories and the homelands.

Coming at a time of growing redundancies, rampant inflation and a steep decline in living standards, it constitutes the most serious threat to Mugabe's political future since he took office 12 years ago.

If a viable opposition was waiting in the wings, Mugabe would be in deeper trouble. Fortunately for him, the one-party state set up by agreement with Joshua Nkomo's Zapu party has left the electorate with no option. This is bound to change as the economic crisis deepens and dissension over Chidzero's programme grows within the ruling party. ■

MOSACT FM 3/7/92

Employers, beware

Businessmen, CEOs in particular, would be well advised to study the proposed new Bill on Occupational Safety and Health. It relates to about 300 aspects of safety which, if ignored, expose company directors to potential fines of R100 000 or two years' imprisonment on each major count. Liability is transferred away from a designated officer, such as a safety manager, and placed firmly in the chief executive's lap.

Further, it exposes directors to subsequent civil suits which could wipe out their personal assets. Nor are the various exposures fully insurable.

The latest proposed legislation is scheduled to go to parliament next year. It replaces the existing MOSACT (Machinery and Occupational Safety Act), introduced nine years ago and since amended several times. MOSACT itself replaced the rather toothless Factories Act. Concurrently, there have been developments, which mean a director can no longer hide behind the protection of the Workmen's Compensation Act as a shelter from corporate or personal liability suits.

Under Section 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, an employee could not sue an employer following a settlement by the commissioner. Now it is being argued that a director is not the employer and may be sued in a personal capacity. Mike Alexander of Group Legal Consultants, a subsidiary of brokers M I B, believes Section 7 is capable of being by-passed. "It is clear that a director is not the employer. The directors, arguably, may be sued.

"One can only hope the occupational safety inspectors take a reasonable view and respect the right of the CEO to delegate this area of responsibility, otherwise the cost in executive time of chief executives defending themselves against prosecution would be prohibitive." This applies to actions where the CEO is representative of the company and also where he is being sued in his personal capacity.

His colleague Mike Kruger adds: "The increasing influence of the trade unions, plus the new emphasis on the American legal practice of 'sue if you can' creates a potential double exposure:

- The company itself is liable to prosecution, sometimes on multiple counts, under the revised legislation; and
- Directors find themselves potentially liable in circumstances where previously they were afforded protection."

Directors and Officers insurance policies offer a limited protection, though they have not been in general use in SA. These and some public liability policies will sometimes pay legal defence costs but, as in the case of prosecutions under the Companies Act, it would be illegal for an insurer to pay a fine because this would be seen as encouragement to break the law.

The implications of the draft Bill are, therefore, far-reaching. Comment and representations have to reach the Department of Manpower by mid-August. Group Legal Consultants is arranging a series of workshops to identify problem areas and has been asked by SACOB and the SA Risk Managers' Association for feedback and an opinion.

Kruger points to one worrying aspect of the Bill: "There's a trend towards individual and personal liability, reinforced in the proposed Bill. The provision that the CEO of a company is personally liable for any contravention of the regulations means that the company can no longer rely on any fine being paid from the company's petty cash."

In 1991, he notes, there were about 15 000 MOSACT prosecutions compared with only a handful of successful prosecutions in the 42 years that the Factories Act was in place.

"So the replacement legislation adds a new dimension of risk: an employer owes a duty of care to protect employees against injury or harm and this risk must be managed." Alexander expects the courts to apply the "reasonable man" standard. If the "reasonable man" test results in a successful criminal prosecution under the legislation, it can be expected that such prosecutions will be followed by civil suits seeking reparation under the delictual law of damages and negligence.

Generally, the proposed legislation follows practice established in the US and Europe. An underlying principle, says Kruger, is the employee's "right to know", in particular his rights with regard to workplace hazards. Cost-benefit approaches can no longer be applied. "It's imperative that employers train workers on risk matters and, even more important, that the company's system of compliance is documented so that its directors can show they have taken all reasonable steps." ■

Clampdown on disability benefits 'abuses' (302)

Business Editor 22/8/92

INSURANCE companies are to clamp down on employers after incurring losses of tens of millions of rands from attempts to fix retrenched workers with lump-sum health benefits of as much as R500 000.

Describing the practice as "abuse," Mr Don Brown, Southern Life assistant general manager, employee benefits, said: "Retrenchment usually involves some cost to the company as well as the unpleasantness of telling an employee that they no longer have a job."

"Some employers are trying to avoid this by submitting disability claims for employees who have a degree of disability but were able to work satisfactorily until then."

Older employees were often difficult to fit into large restructured companies and if any degree of disability could be found, claims were submitted, said Mr Brown.

A spokesman for another company said payouts of as much as six times annual salary had been made in the past and the industry was trying to limit this to a maximum of twice annual salary.

Insurance companies might also insist that instead of paying lump sums, the cash should be used to buy an annuity where payment would depend on continued disability.

As a result of losses amounting to tens of millions of rands, most insurers had increased their rates by 25 percent this year and other increases were on the cards.

"We want to pay genuine claims but cover might be refused to certain high-risk groups with exceptionally high claims experience," he added.

Disability cover needs updating

EMLOYERS should regularly review and increase group life and provident fund policies to save employees from having to buy cover with after-tax income. So says Martin McAusland, personal financial planning manager at financial and business advisory firm Price Waterhouse Meyernel.

"Inflation plays havoc with life and disability cover," he says. "Even if employers are awarding minimal or no pay increases, they should still be raising cover levels to coincide with the inflation rate."

McAusland claims disability cover is sorely neglected by many group life and provident funds. He says that while many employees have life cover of four or five times yearly salary, their levels of disability cover are often woefully inadequate.

GERALD REILL (302)

PRETORIA — A draft Bill to eliminate problems in the Workmen's Compensation Act would be published for comment tomorrow, Manpower director-general Joel Fourie said yesterday.

The Injured Employees Compensation Draft Bill provides for all employees to enjoy protection irrespective of earnings. Under the existing Act only certain employees are entitled to protection.

The new Bill aimed at a more equitable spread of compensation for occupational diseases, he said. This would be based on the employee's earnings at the time of diagnosis and not at the time of last exposure to the agent causing the disease.

The draft also provided for a medical advisory panel to assist with the diagnosis, as well as the establishment of a compensation board. Employer organisations, trade unions, government and the Medical Association of SA would be represented on the board.

STAR 11/12/92

CAPE TOWN — Workers injured on the job will be insured against disablement by a new Bill, designed to replace the Workmen's Compensation Act of 1941, to be published in the Government Gazette today for comment.

The Department of Manpower has proposed that the Injured Employees Compensation Draft Bill replace the Workmen's Compensation Act to eliminate problems.

In a statement, department director-general Joel Fourie said the main aim of the Bill was to insure employees or their dependants against disablement.

Employees would be partially compensated and the insurance did not cover the full loss sustained as a result of an accident or occupational disease.

The most important changes proposed in the Bill are:

- All employees are protected, irrespective of their earnings.

- The Bill provides for a more equitable dispensation concerning compensation for occupational diseases. It proposes that the compensation to which an employee is entitled be based on the employee's earnings when the occupational disease is diagnosed for the first time and not, as is the case as present, at the time of the last exposure to the substance or agent which caused the occupational disease.

- The establishment of medical advisory panels to assist with the diagnosis of occupational diseases.

- The establishment of a Compensation Board on which employers' organisations, trade unions, the Government and the Medical Association of South Africa would be represented.

Interested parties are invited to submit comment or representations to the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, for the attention of Louis van Assen, Box 955, Pretoria 0001 or send a fax to (021) 323-8627 not later than February 26.

There is an urgent need for a published digest of guidelines and reasoned Workmen's Compensation findings.

By CARMEL RICKARD and LORRAINE GORDON

Law Review suppl. in FORMER director of the Legal Resources Centre in Cape Town Lee Bozalek has urged major changes in the way the Workmen's Compensation commissioner operates.

For the good of hundreds of thousands injured at work every year, he says the commissioner must start giving reasons for decisions. That way a body of law can be established and the uncertainty of the present situation be brought to an end.

Under current practice the commissioner's panel gives no formal explanation for any decisions: no body of law or general principles have thus evolved. Each case has to start from scratch, a legal challenge too expensive for most disabled workers.

Bozalek, pioneer of Workmen's Compensation as a new legal field, says that 281 680 accidents were reported during 1989/90 (the most recent figures available). Of all the people injured in these accidents, only 331 used their right under the Workmen's Compensation Act (WCA) to object to the commissioner's decisions.

The commissioner can decide how much an injured person will be paid for the disability suffered, and may even turn down the claim altogether. The impact of these rulings can be severe for an injured worker, yet very few do anything to challenge these decisions. W. Man

In the same year only 34 people claimed any additional compensation beyond the ordinary benefits. Additional compensation may be claimed in the case of employer negligence or obvious defect in the machinery involved in the accident. Clearly this is a far-reaching right, yet almost no one uses it. 11/12 - 17/12/92

Bozalek says workers' rights to challenge decisions and claim extra compensation are "pitifully under-utilised". Why? Clearly not because everyone is happy with the outcome of their claims.

He suggests two reasons. Most workers covered by the WCA system are poorly paid. They do not understand their rights and less than one percent of them are legally represented in their claims.

But there is an even more fundamental problem. Although a quasi-judicial system exists for adjudicating claims, the operation of the Act discourages legal challenge and precedent-setting. (302)

Take the example of a worker who has a claim slightly out of the ordinary. With the help of lawyers the worker brings a successful test case involving enormous effort including detailed research and evidence of expert witnesses.

Bozalek explains what happens at the end of the day: "Experience has shown that the commissioner's panel will simply make a finding without giving any reasons."

The finding ends right there, with the parties directly involved, because it will not be published in any way.

As a result no body of law or general principles has evolved. Other workers in similar circumstances will have to bring their own separate cases and cannot rely on the outcome of an earlier application.

Bozalek says there are many "grey" areas in which rulings should be made known. What constitutes an "accident"? Who is a "casual worker"? What standard of care must an employer observe for specific work conditions — for example the sub-zero temperatures in which fish packers work?

He says there is an urgent need for a published digest of guidelines and reasoned Workmen's Compensation findings, just as industrial court rulings are published, collected and commented on. Obviously workers (and those acting for them) would profit from knowing how the commissioner viewed their rights. But employers would also benefit if rulings on safety and prevention standards were easily available.

Firm told to pay former employee record R308 000

SI Times 13/12/92

By CHARLENE SMITH

A FORMER warehouse manager who was forced to resign because of union pressure has won a record award of R308 756 for unfair dismissal.

In making the award, the Industrial Court hammered Amalgamated Beverages Industries (ABI) for responding to union pressure without giving 50-year-old Attie Jonker, "an exemplary employee ... who got on well with his superiors and those who he supervised" a chance to defend himself.

It warned that companies often faced requests to dismiss employees — and in future this could "include a fear of working with someone who has AIDS or the HIV-virus". But companies had to "maintain standards of fairness".

Mr Jonker, of Pretoria, will also get a R34 000 debt paid off. Just before he began work at the company he bought a car that was repossessed after he lost his job.

Mr Jonker was employed by the company just over a year ago. Two years previously, he worked for a Pretoria bakery that called in police who attacked strikers. There were allegations that Mr Jonker assisted them, but arbitration between the Food and Allied Workers Union and the bakery found this was untrue.

Mr Jonker's Vanderbijlpark lawyer, Mr Riaan du Plessis, said that within three months of his employment at ABI, Fawu members demanded his dismissal.

The court found pressure was put on Mr Jonker to resign by ABI. It found that Fawu and its members "are the guilty parties" but the company had only itself to blame for carrying the costs of the award.

The court took into account Mr Jonker's age and his ability to obtain a similar post and awarded him an amount calculated at what he could have earned at the R4 200 salary at ABI, minus his present lower income as a storeman, capitalised until retirement.

Mr du Plessis, who is also a university lecturer in labour law, said he believed the case created "a lot more rights for employees" and made it likely that more unfair dismissals would be brought before the court.

Vita. Fighter for workers' rights now under threat

Star 29/12/1972.

The Industrial Aid Society plays an indispensable role in helping workers secure the rights to which they are entitled in law. But, after nearly 20 years, the IAS's life is on the line, writes JO-ANNE COLLINGE.

PAULOS Mngkani was putting the roof on a new school in Daveyton when he fell. Nearly three months later, he hobbled into the Industrial Aid Society (IAS) — still on crutches, unable to work and defeated by a complex web of employers and contractors as he tried to claim workmen's compensation.

IAS para-legal workers sorted out which company was legally obliged to report the accident and back Mngkani's compensation claim. A phone call drew an assurance from the contractor that he would take responsibility, as the subcontractor was not a registered employer.

Only the slightest hint of authority from the IAS worker sealed the agreement: "We would have to come back on you, anyway, if the sub-contractor failed." And Mngkani was on his way, swinging a little lighter on his crutches, a letter confirming the agreement in his pocket.

There was no equivalent relief on the face of para-legal Martin Momyela. For him, every case simply forces a new reckoning of the consequences if the IAS were forced to close.

Each day, when the doors of its Johannesburg office open, it takes no more than 30 minutes to fill the daily quota of clients for the IAS's sole attorney and two para-legals. Others are asked to come back — earlier — on another day. In 1991 more than 4 000 troubled workers turned to the IAS for help.

This year the load continued to grow as other advice offices closed due to a shortage of funds. Now the IAS itself is in jeopardy, as one of its major funders, the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, has concentrated its help to Eastern Europe.

"We have had to declare a moratorium on unfair labour practice cases," says Momyela. If just one of the legal staff has to spend a day or two in court the remaining pair have a rough time dealing with the office case load.

Young Ambi Molekwa is one whose complaint will probably end in the Industrial Court where the IAS will argue that his dismissal after being injured at work was unlawful.

Molekwa has had two jobs since he left school. Both have ended badly for him. "I don't think I'll look for another job. I'll go back to school and get matric," he said, hoping this would win him a bit of respect in the workplace.

Momyela listened to the youth's frustration. He listened to the man in the immaculate striped shirt who wanted someone to help him examine the relative merits of accepting a retrenchment package or an alternative job.

If the pressures on the IAS staff are extreme, those seeking help don't catch the brunt of it. There is an air of methodical work about the little offices, with their assorted old furniture and odd bits of electronic equipment. Every complainant is given enough time to explain the problem — and often the first steps to solving it are taken immediately, by telephone, in the client's presence.

Many IAS clients are non-unionised workers, who have no other recourse. "You get factories with 20 or 25 workers — maybe it's a family business — and employers don't want unions there," says Momyela.

While the rights won by the labour movement apply in theory to all workers, those who are unorganised have real problems enforcing their rights. "Take the question of establishing an unfair labour practice — it is a difficult and long procedure, which involves lots of documents," Momyela explains.

Then there are areas of work where the IAS has developed special expertise, like workmen's compensation. For help in this area, even trade unions turn to the IAS. The Department of Manpower and various hospitals make constant referrals.

Although he is heavily involved in helping individuals, Momyela's title is education coordinator. This means organising workshops for general advice offices and civic organisations to equip them with the skills to assist workers. It means publishing pamphlets and informative posters, preparing material for the education pages of newspapers, and giving advice by correspondence.

Founded in 1973, when trade unions for black workers could not be registered, the IAS established a benefit fund so that workers could support each other financially and in other ways. The fund gave birth to two unions which played a vital role in the growth of the labour movement, the Metal and Allied Workers' Union and Transport and General Workers' Union.

As the trade union movement swelled and gelled, the IAS did less organising and turned increasingly to education and para-legal work. It did, however, organise unemployed workers in the mid-'80s, spearheading a campaign for changes in the unemployment insurance legislation.

Momyela, whose special task was organising the unemployed, is itching to get back full-time to education. This will possible if funders rise to the demands of the IAS's budget, which allows for a staff increase from five to eight workers.

"Because of the lack of funds we are not updating our educational materials. If we could just get a commitment from funders, we would push ahead with all our programmes, plan all our seminars," said Momyela. As he and his colleagues investigated the pay complaints of workers, they were uncertain whether they would get their own December pay. "We are looking for bridging finance for December. For the last three years we have had a shortfall," confided Momyela. Behind him, from the wall posters, a factory and asked to change.

EMPLOYERS face fines of up to R100 000 or two years' imprisonment for major contraventions of the proposed Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHACT) which is expected to replace the Machinery and Occupational Safety Act (MOSACT) towards the end of the year.

Businesses are being urged to prepare now for OSHACT because of its wide-ranging regulations, which are far greater in scope than MOSACT and will affect every concern, whether it employs one person or thousands.

Much more consultation will be required between management and the workforce and safety and health representatives will have to be elected or nominated after meaningful consultation.

Workers elected as representatives will have the right to investigate incidents.

Where circumstances warrant, employers will be entitled to go directly to an inspector.

"Greater responsibility for the safety of his workers will fall on the shoulders of the employer," said Ted Rowen, group

SITimes [Cape metro]

By FRED ROFFEY

Loss control manager for Cape Town-based Irvin & Johnson.

"An employer will have to draw up a strategy to minimise risks.

"He will have to ensure that the mandatory training programme is in place.

"The onus will be on the employer to see that employees adhere to safety precautions.

"It is also possible that a medical practitioner may have to report any occupational disease to the Department of Manpower."

Mr Rowen suggests that employers:

- Start planning now and set time scales.
- Decide what is to be changed in present procedures and to what extent.
- Decide on the methodology to be employed.
- Be definite about who is to implement the various steps, as these cannot be left to untrained employees.

● Decide where the resources will come from.

"It is clear that the draft bill seeks to enlarge significantly the parameters of the legislation," says Ken Thom, a director of Corporate Liability Services, a risk management division of PFV Insurance Brokers.

"Penalties to be applied under OSHACT should grab the attention of management.

"They are five times more severe than those under MOSACT.

"The drastic penalties should be seen as an indication to the courts and the authorities just how serious a view is being taken of transgressions in safety and health in the industrial workplace."

In another development, the Department of Manpower has published an Injured Employees Compensation Draft Bill, 1993, for information and comment.

This is intended to replace the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1941, and to insure employees or their dependants in the event of disablement caused by accident or occupational disease.

Under the present act only certain employees are protected, but the bill proposes that all employees should be protected irrespective of wages.

It also proposes the establishment of a Compensation Board representing employers' organisations, trade unions, the state and the Medical Association of South Africa.

Interested parties should submit comments by February 26 to: Workmen's Compensation Commissioner (Attention Mr Louis van Assen), P O Box 955, Pretoria 0001.

REINSURANCE

Rand Mutual has moved its personal accident reinsurance — probably the largest such account in SA — to Forbes Re. The account was administered through broker MIB for many years.

Rand Mutual is too specialised to appear in the FM list of top insurers but ranks about fourth in size. It insures about 600 000 mine workers for Workmen's Compensation and PA risks. It was formed a century ago and predates the introduction of the Workmen's Compensation Act. FM 22/1/93

Brian Barnes of Forbes confirms the account is large but will not disclose details. He says Forbes' submission was not much cheaper than the competition's but was simple and easy to understand.

Forbes is using a London lead reinsurer to handle the business but is also placing more of the risk than previously with local reinsurers.

Roodepoort Rugby Club marketing manager Pieter Wassenaar this week told the FM that Nosa bought four seats in the club's Ellis Park box. Its fee includes drinks and food. Says Anderson: "Board approval is not required as this is in my schedule of authority." He says there was a misconception that Nosa had a whole box. The commissioner never voiced disapproval about this, says Anderson. But Van Assen replies that he only recently heard about the four seats in the box. "I would like to raise the matter with the board to find out whether this is part of the mission of a Section 21 company — a non-profit association."

Anderson

Van Assen

Nosa derives half of its income from premiums paid by the private sector. These amounted to R6m last year.

The R75 000 for Anderson's trip to Russia, the US and Australia during which he was accompanied by former Nosa GM Rodney Scott is also being investigated. Initially the Nosa board opposed the trip because of the cost.

The board was told that Rennie's Travel would sponsor the trip in exchange for its involvement (for a fee) at Nosa's annual conference, Noshcon 92, at Sun City.

However, Rennie's involvement with Noshcon was cancelled on February 20 1992. This was confirmed in a letter dated February 26 by Rennie's manager Sharon Young to Nosa GM Ron McKinnon.

As the R74 000 for Anderson's trip had been sponsored by Rennie's on the basis that, in exchange, Rennie's would handle the entire conference and that the amount would be recovered out of registration fees, Young requested that the R74 597 be "sent to me as a matter of urgency."

However, the requisition in March for the cheque to Rennie's is still described as a "Handling fee (for) Noshcon 92." At that time Anderson and McKinnon knew that Rennie's involvement had ended and that the cheque should have been requisitioned for travelling expenses.

Auditors step in 302

Auditor KPMG Aiken & Peat has been given a number of accounting documents, cheques and other records at the head office of the National Occupational Safety Association (Nosa) in Pretoria. This follows the FM's disclosure that the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner had asked for an investigation into alleged financial irregularities (Current Affairs, January 29).

KPMG's Chris Stephen, who is leading the investigation, confirms that he and his staff have been interviewing senior Nosa staff. Stephen, who also investigated financial irregularities at TV's TopSport (which led to the arrests of its director Hein Jordaan and soccer PRO Abdul Bhamjee), says his investigation will cover all relevant transactions.

Last week the FM reported that a trip to Russia by Nosa MD Keith Anderson and the appointment of a management consultant, Rodney Shipham, were among matters under investigation. Since then others have come to the FM's attention. Stephen confirms that these, too, are being investigated.

The investigating team is now looking into Nosa's payments to Anderson for a Johannesburg-Cape Town return flight. A memorandum (the FM has a copy) from Anderson to the financial manager on December 9 1991 asked that he (Anderson) should be refunded R851, being "the cost of the above ticket, paid for by myself." A copy of air ticket 3196 420 613 1 shows, however, that SAA had issued the ticket free of charge as part of its frequent flyer deal. Anderson says that "Nosa company policy allows staff the credits obtained from frequent flyers."

The circumstances of Nosa's four seats in a box at Ellis Park rugby stadium in Johannesburg will be raised by Commissioner Van Assen at a board meeting. He tells the FM that Anderson had discussed with him the possibility of Nosa buying a box at Loftus Versfeld in Pretoria. "I was totally against the idea and told Anderson so," says Van Assen. "I told him if that happened I would stop the annual grant from the Accident Fund to Nosa. You cannot buy a box with subsidised money."

Gaynor Young raises compensation claim

GAYNOR Young, the actress who was injured seriously three years ago when she fell down an 18m drop at the State Theatre in Pretoria, has increased her claims for compensation, her lawyer said yesterday.

Willem le Roux said Young would be awarded increased compensation —

BIDM 26/2/93

which would take into account medical expenses and loss of income — if she could prove that theatre owner Pact was negligent. Pact has opposed the claim.

Her claim will be heard by the Workmens' Compensation Commissioner next week.

302 Because the Workmens' Compensation Act made no provision for pain and suffering or loss of amenities, Young has instituted a civil claim against individuals in Pact. The Act also provides that no claim may be instituted against Pact.

Young wins settlement from Pact

Actress Gaynor Young yesterday reached a settlement with the Performing Arts Council of the Transvaal and seven of its employees in her civil claim for compensation following two days of negotiations between their legal teams.

In terms of an agreement between the parties, the details of the settlement are to remain confidential.

Pact also withdrew its opposition to a claim by Young for increased claims under the Workmen's Compensation Act, leaving the way for the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner to hear evidence from witnesses and to make a ruling on whether Young will receive more assistance with her medical bills and pension.

In submissions handed in as an exhibit before the commissioner and two assessors by Young's counsel, Peter Pauw, Pact accepted that "a dangerous situation was created" during a scene in the performance of Camelot on December 9 1989 at the State Theatre, which led to Young falling 18 m off-stage and sustaining injuries.

They also said the method Pact use to guard against accidents and injuries was to rely on rehearsals, actors' expertise and instructions given to them. Pact did not grant Young a full dress rehearsal before allowing her to play the part of Guinevere in the play.

Also, several Pact employees, including the director and assistant director of Camelot, were responsible for the safety of the actors on stage, the design of the set, and the implementation of safety mechanisms in terms of the Machinery and Occupational Safety Act.

As part of the agreement, Pact agreed to furnish Young with such documents and evidence as she may require in the hearing before the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner.

Pact will also, as far as possible, assist in arranging for an inspection in loco of the State Theatre.

The hearing continues today with Young's counsel leading evidence for increased compensation.

302

Pretoria Correspondent

Actress Gaynor Young's bid for increased benefits from the Workmen's Compensation Fund continued with legal arguments by her counsel and the attorney for the Accident Fund.

At the hearing in Pretoria yesterday before the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, the legal officer for the Accident Fund — Herbert Rademeyer, who is also the first respondent in the legal battle — instructed Sam Maritz, who had been representing the Performing Arts Council of the Transvaal (Pact), to be counsel for the Accident Fund.

Peter Pauw, representing Young, argued that Rademeyer had no legal basis on which to oppose Young's application for increased compensation, because he had shown no interest prior to Pact withdrawing from the case to oppose the application.

He said Rademeyer should have filed a counter-claim after Young had made application for more aid.

Pauw argued that the commissioner could not delegate his powers to oppose the claim to Rademeyer.

The hearing continues today.

Gaynor to push for extra benefit

Pretoria Correspondent

Counsel for actress Gaynor Young will go ahead with proceedings before the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner for increased benefits in spite of the ruling that the legal officer of the Accident Fund is to be a party to the hearing.

In his opening statement yesterday, Dr Peter Pauw said Commissioner Jannie Koekemoer would have to find whether there was negligence on the part of the Performing Arts Council of the Transvaal which led to Young's injuries; whether individual Pact employees were negligent; and whether Pact did not demarcate a dangerous area on the stage at the State Theatre.

Young would not be called to testify.

The hearing continues.

Unions call for end to income ceilings

THE Federation of SA Labour Unions (Fedsal) yesterday resolved to apply to the National Manpower Commission for the equalisation or abolition of income ceilings in three major Acts regulating labour relations.

Speaking at the federation's annual conference, president Johan du Plessis proposed that salary ceilings in the Acts either be abolished or one common ceiling be set and reviewed annually.

Du Plessis said employees could be covered by one or more of the Acts and many moved into and out of the legislation's scope as a result of inflation-linked annual wage increases.

The lowest ceiling is that placed in the Basic Conditions of Employment Act — ranging from an annual income of R27 000 in rural areas to R31 800 in major metropolitan areas.

ERICA JANKOWITZ

In the Workmen's Compensation Act the ceiling is an annual income of R45 084 which may be extended by employers to cover higher earners. Finally, the Unemployment Insurance Act imposes a ceiling of R58 188 per annum for contributors.

Du Plessis said these different levels led to inequality of treatment, confusion and economic hardship.

Speaking at the same conference, National Manpower Commission chairman Frans Barker said he did not believe legislated affirmative action programmes would redress the inequality of opportunities in SA.

He said a more viable approach would be voluntary programmes based on intensive company-run training for those who had suffered from past discriminatory practices.

On the question of industrial councils, Barker said there was an international move away from centralised bargaining. Barker himself was not opposed to the principle of councils as long as they displayed a degree of flexibility on the questions of small businesses and regional differences.

Barker identified three developments in overcoming the obstacles to building social consensus.

He said the major role players in the process — organised labour, business and government — had agreed the process was more important than the substance of discussions. Bodies such as the commission were well-placed to help the process since they were representative, acceptable and had mandates to reach agreement within parameters.

Compensation for attacked policemen

Star 25/5/93 302

CAPE TOWN — The Government would pay compensation to police officers whose homes and property were destroyed in unrest attacks, Law and Order Minister Hernus Kriel said yesterday.

Introducing his budget vote in Parliament, Kriel said that last year 226 members of the police force were murdered. Already this year 60 members had been slain.

Kriel warned people who thought they could shoot at police officers not to cry when the full might of the SAP came down on them.

So far this year, policemen had lost R5 million worth of possessions in arson and unrest attacks on their homes. The Government would financially help police officers who lost possessions this way.

Families of "our people who lose their lives" could bank on the fact that "we will not forget them or their dependents". This year, 717 people had been killed in 5 614 unrest incidents, and possessions worth R58 million had been lost.

In the past few months, 59 Umkhonto we Sizwe members had been arrested for murder and other serious crimes, he added. — Political Staff.

Revamp of work injuries law

TIM COHEN

CAPE TOWN — Legislation on compensation for occupational injuries is to be substantially revamped, with boosted payouts likely and increased employer and employee participation in the scheme.

Legislation tabled in Parliament would repeal of the Workmen's Compensation Act which has governed compensation of occupational injuries for half a century.

The legislation — the Compensation for Occupational Injuries and Diseases Bill — proposes the establishment of a compensation board to advise government on policy matters, the scope and nature of benefits payable and the appointment of assessors.

Unlike the Workman's Compensation Act, the new law would no longer impose a ceiling on earnings, so that all employees would be protected in cases of an occupational injury or disease. (302)

The payment dispensation would be changed so that payments of benefits would be based on the employee's earnings at the time of the first diagnosis and not at the time of the last exposure to the agent which caused the occupational disease.

The scope of scheduled occupational diseases is to be extended to keep up with international standards, the Bill's memorandum says.

The compensation board would consist of a compensation commissioner, three state officials, five members from the ranks of employers and employees, two members representing mutual associations, and two medical practitioners.

The establishment of medical advice panels is also proposed.

They would assist the compensation commissioner, on a regional basis, with the diagnosis of occupational diseases.

The Bill, which proposed the repeal the Occupation Diseases in Mines and Works Act, is considered necessary because existing legislation "no longer complies in all respects with present-day demands".

THE cost of new disability claims is now double that expected when making premium assumptions, Swiss-SA Reinsurance Deputy MD Douglas Keir says in Alexander Forbes' July Quarterly. (S)

The magnitude of disability claims paid out has risen to around R700m in 1992, including about R150m for future payments, from R250m in 1989. The 1989 figure included approximately R50m in future payments.

Disability insurance is known to be an economically cyclical business and mild deterioration during recessions is normal. However, insurers are currently suffering very badly both on lump-sum and on income benefits.

Keir says the expected frequency of normal disability is low in comparison to retrenchment programmes — two or three per 1 000 a year against retrenchment programmes affecting perhaps 10% to 20% of a workforce.

The number of disability claims has risen now to perhaps 5-9 per 1 000 a year, still seemingly low but in fact a 150% to 200% rise, he says. (202)

Unscrupulous employers, bent on minimising their retrenchment costs by encouraging disability claims, are dramatically worsening the overall claims experience, resulting in higher costs for everyone, Keir says. The lack of sufficient unemployment benefits increases the desperation of employees to submit and validate claims.

Another factor encouraging increased claims is that group disability income benefits are over-generous in SA, he says. They can amount to full earnings for the first two years immediately after disability, which Keir suggests constitutes over-insurance.

From the risk-carrier's point of view, it is impossible to measure the ratio of new claims against premium assumptions and make a timely adjustment because there is, for a number of reasons, quite a long delay between the date of disability and the date of admission and payment of claims, Keir says.

Worker's fall from bakkie to be probed

□ Supervisor's big dog sat in front — claim AKK 2/9/93 302

THE Department of Manpower is to investigate an accident in Paarl in which a worker was injured when he fell from a municipal bakkie.

The worker claims he had to sit on the back because his supervisor's dog was in front.

Paarl town clerk Hennie Liebenberg said the accident had been reported to the department and would be investigated in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

But Mr Liebenberg said waterworks supervisor Jan Wessels denied having a dog in his bakkie when the accident happened.

Labourer Jacobus Jacobs claimed he had to sit on the back of the bakkie because Mr Wessels's "big dog" was in the front.

Mr Jacobs, 28, said: "I fell off the bakkie on Saturday. We were busy fixing a burst water pipe. Mr Wessels went around a corner and I fell off, on my face and on my hand. He didn't even see that I had fallen off. He came back to find me and took me to Paarl East Hospital.

"Mr Wessels had a big dog with him. The dog is always with him when we do weekend duty."

Mr Jacobs, who has worked for the municipality for nine years, said he did not think it was "right" that the dog sat in front while he had to sit on the back.

The doctor who treated Mr Jacobs, who preferred to remain anonymous, said he had a bad cut along his nose, which was stitched at the hospital, two swollen, puffy bruised eyes, cuts to his face and knees and bleeding in the lower back muscles.

Mr Liebenberg said he was "very sorry" about the incident.

He said: "Our emergency standby team for waterworks failures was called out on Saturday. Three workers were on standby and they reported to the municipal camp. They had one call to attend to.

"Mr Wessels took Mr Jacobs and another worker to where the main had burst. When he arrived he saw he needed a pump and went back to fetch one, taking only Mr Jacobs with him.

"It's not more than 100 metres from where they were, so it is impossible to speed. When he arrived at the camp he realised Mr Jacobs was not on the bakkie and he went back to look for him. He found him at traffic lights and took him to hospital."

Mr Liebenberg said Mr Wessels had no objection to workers sitting in the front of the bakkie. When two workers were being transported, both usually sat at the back.

"We are not sure why he fell off, there is a possibility that he wanted to get off the bakkie. This will have to be investigated, but speeding is impossible in the area," Mr Liebenberg said.

R270 000

VERA VON LIERES

MORE than R270 000 in compensation money remains unclaimed by workers involved in workplace accidents over the past 12 months. (302)

The January figures published in the Government Gazette indicate nearly 1 500 workers countrywide have failed to claim money to which they are legally entitled under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Amounts range from R6,05 to the R7 937 owed to Gesi Zondi.

Moses Motshomi and Sarah Jele are owed R5 743,52 and R2 786,47 respectively.

Sam Khoza and Lucas Mesisia have not claimed the R3 145,95 and R340,00 they are owed.

A Manpower Department spokesman said there were various reasons why claims remained uncollected, but declined to elaborate. The department draws up the list on a quarterly basis.

Workers countrywide are entitled to lodge their claims with the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner at the nearest office of the Department of Manpower or magistrate, the Government Gazette says.

Enough for some

All employees — regardless of salary or wage level — will soon be eligible for State compensation in the event of injury or illness arising from working conditions. But they will be precluded from suing employers for negligence. This follows the recent introduction of the Compensation for Occupational Injuries & Diseases Act No 130 of 1993.

The implications for the highly salaried are important. Previously, the Workmen's Compensation Act of 1941 regulated benefits for people disabled at work. The upper salary limit has been adjusted periodically and now stands at R55 068. The maximum benefit is 75% so the top payout is R41 301.

The old Act denied a worker the right to sue his employer for more benefits. The reasoning, at the time of the original legislation, appears to have been paternalistic — that workers in low- and middle-wage categories could not have reasonable access to the courts because of their limited means. So legislators made financial provisions which were automatically in place.

The new Act makes no distinction between a person earning R20 000 or R200 000: neither may sue a negligent employer. A spokesman for the Manpower Department, which administers the Act, says only 4% of the population earns more than R55 000 a year. (302)

The Act inhibits common law rights but the department says a draft Bill was circulated for comment before the Act was passed in parliament. The department has also had a road show passing through major centres to explain the implications. One is that highly paid workers should look to their insurance policies.

Reinforcing that view: a major life insurer sent a news release to the FM this week roundly condemning the Act as an invasion of personal rights. Within hours it dissociated itself from the criticism, presumably (though not confirmed) because it realised the new legislation — scheduled to be effective from March — means good business for life offices that operate in the top end of the market. ■

Common law — or sense?

Proposed legislation to replace the Workmen's Compensation Act has far-reaching implications for employees, for employers' liability insurance and for common law rights. Workmen's Compensation provisions have been in place for a century and were simply updated to make the employers' premiums and employee benefits move with the times. A long-standing criticism has been that workers, compensated under the Act on a rather arbitrary scale, had no further recourse against the employer. The annual income ceiling for workers falling under the Act is R55 068.

It has been proposed that the Act should be replaced, via the Compensation for Occupational Injuries and Diseases Bill. Rod Pearson, director of MIB Insurance technical services, says if the new legislation is passed, all employees — whatever their income — will have to be covered.

A workman's rights against an employer are at present removed by Section 7 of the legislation. "It is generally accepted that there is no easy way around this except for people who fall outside the Act," says Pearson. The original thinking of the legislators was that employers should be deterred by other laws from dangerous employment practices but, should a workman be injured, the employer should be protected through his premiums from liability. The envisaged new legislation changes several aspects of established practice.

Pearson says the exceptions to the existing provision, that a compensated worker may not then proceed for further damages, might be breached in special circumstances: "possibly a nonscheduled disease. Or, in a particularly dangerous precedent used recently, employees may be able to sue fellow employees and employers may feel obliged to indemnify the sued employees." (302)

The latest draft of the Bill puts executives on the same footing as other workers. The ceiling on compensation will fall away so all employees will become eligible for compensation, but will not be allowed to sue employers. It would not affect the right to sue a negligent fellow employee.

Some employers might find comfort in that, says Pearson, because employer liability insurance cover, available locally, does not respond to creeping ailments such as asbestosis and repetitive strain injuries. Nor do the policies grant cover for the employer on suits brought by an employee against other employees. "It's a serious flaw in SA cover and a challenge to the insurance industry. That cover is obtainable in the UK for UK employers and is compulsory."

The latest draft overrides some common law rights — notably the right to act against a negligent employer, even if the compensation under the proposed law is inadequate in relation to the employee's earning ability and disability suffered — an inadequacy which could become more pronounced in the future.

Pearson adds: "It's a classic conundrum. Should legislation remove the need for employer liability cover currently available from the private sector, thereby removing an area of risk for employers? Or should it allow what some may regard as a basic human right — the right to litigate for an appropriate level of compensation?" ■

Anderson and Bensch "from contacting, molesting, harassing, threatening, assaulting or threatening to assault" him. Rothman's application came after his business partnership with Anderson had soured.

Attorney Clive Kern, who represented Rothman, says that Judge Plewman gave the order on September 1, the same day on which the application was made to the Supreme Court. "The two respondents did not defend the matter and the order was confirmed by the judge on September 22." Kern says Rothman agreed to pay his own costs, as Anderson and Bensch had not defended the matter.

Bensch says he has known Anderson for a long time. He was asked by Anderson to talk to Rothman about some money which Rothman had allegedly owed Anderson. During the discussions he had been accompanied by a debt collector, Pat Ronan, a former associate of Allied's Kevin de Villiers. "A body-builder, who happened to have been with Ronan and myself at the time, waited outside and may have given Rothman the wrong idea that we wanted to break his legs or something."

Bensch says that since his break-up with a former business partner, Lazer Graphics' main contractual work is with Nosa.

Nosa's business deals with Lazer Graphics have already been raised with the Nosa board. In a letter dated October 15, a former Nosa employee, Danie Bosman, voiced his concerns to the board. Bosman said Nosa had been paying Lazer Graphics much more for colour transparencies than other companies would have charged. He also alleged that other companies had been excluded from doing similar work for Nosa.

These allegations were among the issues which the auditors have been investigating during the past three weeks. Others include the payment for a R75 000 overseas trip to Russia, the US and Australia made by An-er with the company.

Meanwhile, Nosa chairman Ryno Kriel has called for an extraordinary board meeting this weekend to discuss KPMG Aiken & Peat's investigation. Auditor Chris Stephen remains tight-lipped about the probe. "Our investigation is still in progress. We are aware of the proposed board meeting."

National Occupational Safety Association (Nosa) MD Keith Anderson and a business associate were last year interdicted by a Supreme Court judge against threatening or assaulting a former business partner. Anderson's co-respondent in the matter, Jack Bensch, has since been questioned by auditors KPMG Aiken & Peat about an overpayment by Nosa to Bensch's company, Lazer Graphics, which is the sole supplier of colour transparencies to Nosa.

The special audit is the result of a request by the Workmen's Compensation Commissioner, Louis van Assen, to the Nosa board following allegations of mis-management. The FM was the first to report this (Current Affairs January 29 and February 5). Nosa is partly subsidised by a R6m grant from the commissioner's Accident Fund, which, in turn, is funded by premiums paid by the private sector.

On Tuesday, Bensch admitted to the FM that the auditors had queried an overpayment of R26 500 (the largest of three) by Nosa to his company. He said it was the first time he had been informed about the overpayment. "I was not aware of this. The manual payment by Nosa was made at a time when they were implementing a new computerised accounting system," says Bensch. He says he will now have to repay the amount to Nosa.

Bensch also admitted he was cited with Anderson last September by Martin Rothman, a former business associate of Anderson, in an urgent application to the Supreme Court. Rothman, who now works for the SABC, had asked the court to interdict

A MAJOR crackdown on companies that have underpaid or evaded Compensation Fund contributions is under way, Labour Minister Mr Tito Mboweni announced yesterday.

A recently formed team of internal auditors, backed by a new computer system and private sector auditing advisers, is expected to examine the books of up to 600 companies over the next 12 months.

One company had already been charged R1,7 million for a debt to the fund that had been outstanding for three years.

Another firm had received a bill for R880 000, Compensation Commissioner Mr Louis van Assen told a press conference.

Employers, who are the sole contributors to the fund, must pay 10% of the outstanding amount as a penalty.

Mr Mboweni said his ministry was considering publishing a list of defaulters.

Mboweni gets tough with firms

The fund, which has reserves of R223 million and was in a sound financial position, was experiencing problems in collecting contributions, however.

Expenditure for the last financial year had increased by 33% but revenue by only 9%.

"One reason for this discrepancy is the negligent or fraudulent understatement of a contributor's total wage bill."

Mr Van Essen said more than R11m in outstanding contributions had already been brought in by the new team.

He said 47% of the 190 000 accidents in 1993 had resulted in the severing or permanent damage of employees' fingers.

Head injuries accounted for 8%, leg injuries for 12%, and hands for 5% of the reported accidents.

Mr Mboweni said the use of gloves or helmets, together with improved training, could have prevented many of the injuries.

Safety records of employers would be scrutinised with a view to increasing the assessment rates of those with a bad record.

Mr Mboweni said the ceiling for benefit payouts would be increased from R55 058 to R80 000, and cover had been extended to all employees irrespective of their earnings.

The overhaul of workmen's compensation — including swifter payment procedures, increased cover and the encouragement of improved health and safety standards — was one of the objectives of the Reconstruction and Development Programme White Paper published last month.

Team tracks Compensation Fund dodgers

CAPE TOWN — A team of government auditors was leading a crackdown on companies which had underpaid or evaded Compensation Fund contributions, Labour Minister Tito Mboweni said yesterday.

The team, backed by a new computer system and private sector auditing advisers, is expected to examine the books of up to 600 companies over the next 12 months.

One company had been charged R1,7m for a debt outstanding for three years, while a second firm had recently been presented with a bill for R880 000, compensation commissioner Louis van Assen said.

Mboweni said the Labour Ministry was considering publishing a list of companies which had failed to meet obligations.

The fund had reserves of R223m and was sound, but was experiencing problems in collecting contributions. Expenditure for the past financial year had increased 33%, while revenue had risen by only 9%.

"One of the reasons for this discrepancy is either the negligent or sometimes fraudulent understatement of a contributor's total wage bill," Mboweni said.

Of the 190 000 accidents recorded in 1993, 47% had resulted in the severing of, or permanent damage to, employees' fingers, he said. Leg injuries accounted for 12%, head injuries 8% and hand injuries 5%.

The simple use of gloves or helmets, together with improved training, could have prevented a substantial proportion of the injuries, Mboweni said.

Safety records would be scrutinised with a view to changing risk ratings — and therefore contribution levels. (302)

Winds of change carry new benefits trends were heavily influenced by the 37 000 worldwide multinational companies which controlled about one-third of all private assets, Mercer director Ian Farman said yesterday.

He told an international compensation seminar on remuneration trends that SA corporations had recognised they no longer operated in a vacuum.

"SA's international competitiveness will depend on the implementation of innovative and competitive remuneration strategies from shop floor to executive level," he warned.

In addition, reinvestment and new business investment meant multinational companies coming into SA would bring their ideas of compensation and benefits.

"There is a worldwide retreat of government from the provision of key social security benefits such as retirement, disability and medical assistance which is starting to have a major effect on private sector employers in terms of their costs and benefits policies."

As a result, the private sector and individuals had to pay for maintaining some form of social security network, which was an added cost for business.

Farman said this move coincided with attempts by employers to encourage early retirement in a bid to downscale operations with minimal disruption.

At the same time, many countries were raising the compulsory retirement age in recognition of anti-discrimination legislation. The US, for example, was about to legislate 67 as the new retirement age.

With Western countries having to deal with ageing populations and shrinking labour pools, retirement benefits and "elder care" were increasingly falling to the private sector.

There was a global trend towards reviewing company remuneration strategies with a swing away from fixed salary packages. Actual costs were linked to company performance and individuals were compensated according to team or individual performance.

Compensation was also being linked to corporate strategy and was integral to performance planning and competency-based job ranking, Farman said.

The six usual types of performance-related pay were piecework, commission, profit-sharing, merit, bonuses and long-term incentives. Internationally, more companies were opting for long-term incentives in a bid to retain workers with core skills.

In a survey of 100 UK companies, 24% found they had not benefited from performance-related schemes. Farman attributed this to a lack of correlation with strategic leadership, and a failure to communicate the details of the scheme.

A MAN whose hand was partially severed by a machine he was operating was allegedly dismissed by his employer because he was no longer of any use to the company.

Mr Masia Dau (35) of Muraluwe village in the former Venda homeland said his employer dismissed him shortly after he was injured in October last year. The employer, Mr Inas Botha of Twilight Enterprises, was adamant he would not compensate Dau despite the fact that he was injured on duty.

"I am not giving him one cent to survive. I am battling to survive. I cannot give money to somebody who is not prepared to work. You only need one hand to do the job he was doing," said Botha.

Denying the statement that the machine was defective, Botha said Dau was responsible for his injury. He said if Dau continued to harass him through the Press, he would expose him as an illegal immigrant from Zimbabwe.

Dau, who speaks Venda, dismissed the claim that he was from Zimbabwe.

"I have heard that Botha employed illegal immigrants only. So when I went to look for a job I told him I was from Zimbabwe and that is how I obtained the job that paid me R300 a month.

Dau, a father of three, alleged that several other workers who were injured on duty had also been dismissed.

In an attempt to be compensated for the injury, Dau has approached a Thohoyandou-based lawyer Mr Khathutshelo Muloyhedzi.

Muloyhedzi said although he wanted to assist Dau he could not take the case as it would cost about R100 000 in legal fees — an amount Dau could not afford.

Yuppie flu insurance broker claims raw deal from industry

AN insurance broker who has sold hundreds of policies in a career spanning 20 years has found herself at the mercy of an industry giant.

Linda Sparks, 55, a victim of depression compounded by myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME), is fighting for a disability lump sum of R150 000 from Fedlife Assurance, who turned her down on the basis of late submission of her claim.

Mrs Sparks, of Durbanville, has had chronic endogenous depression for 17 years and left full-time work with an insurance company in Gauteng in 1990. She then set up her own brokerage.

In 1992 she joined the Life Underwriters' Association of South Africa (Luasa) Group Scheme which is underwritten by Fedlife.

"Things started going wrong in October 1993 when I became more debilitated. I consulted several doctors and in May 1994 I was diagnosed as having yuppie flu (ME).

"In January 1995 I was told that I would never be able to go back to work."

Fedlife said she did not claim within three months of stopping work in September 1993, as required by the contract.

But Mrs Sparks said that until January 1995 it was not definite that she would not go back to work.

Luasa executive director Henrie Oosthuizen said Mrs Sparks' claim might not have succeeded even if she had made the deadline because her illness was "not like losing an arm or a leg".

A Fedlife spokesman said: "The claim and supporting documentation were submitted to Fedlife in February 1995 — 14 months later and 11 months after the three-month claim limit had expired. No medical evidence could subsequently be found to justify the late submission of the claim."

Govt to be tough on firms

THE Government is to prosecute employers who illegally reduce the number of people they employ to pay less to the State Compensation Fund. (302) (E)

A one-off audit of two companies in Gauteng revealed that the companies owed the fund about R5 million, said senior compensation commissioner Ms Bongi Magojo at a Press conference in Parliament yesterday.

The Compensation Fund, which replaced the old Workman's Compensation Act, covers all workers in cases of injury on duty.

Magojo said the Government was expecting to get a lot more money from continuing audits at companies.

She did not want to name the two companies that were involved.

Employers are required to declare the wages of all their workers up to R80 000 a year.

However, Magojo said the Government was still relying on companies to provide them with accurate figures.

Labour Minister Tito Mboweni warned that the Government will go ahead with prosecutions if employers do not come into line with correct statistics.

A silicosis victim's opponent has asked the court to pay him compensation, reports
Rehana Rossouw

A DYING man's five-year fight for compensation ended in Cape Town this week after his opponent stood up in court to deliberately testify in his favour.

Western Cape Department of Labour director Brian Williams turned a routine Workmen's Compensation Commission hearing into a resounding victory for silicosis victim Sihlwele Siwanana, telling the hearing that the compensation his own department pays Siwanana should be increased.

Williams told the hearing the conditions in the factory where 59-year-old Siwanana had been employed were "medieval".

His department's advocate, Theo de Jager, capitulated after Williams finished speaking. The compensation commissioner in Pretoria will now decide what level of compensation Williams's department should now pay. Siwanana contracted silicosis after working as a grinder for Cape Foundries for 22 years. Silicosis is an incurable disease, caused by inhaling dust from silica particles.

The compensation commission decided in 1992 that Williams's department should pay Siwanana a lump sum of R9 000 and pension of R244 a month. Siwanana's doctor found four other Cape Foundries workers also had silicosis and battled for five years for a hearing by the commission.

Williams, former general secretary of the Metal and Electrical Workers Union of South Africa, told the hearing he remembered Cape Foundries because its employees had sought the union's help in the 1980s to improve workplace health and safety measures. "The dust was thick inside the plant. It was difficult to see from one side of the foundry to the other side because of the dust. I had difficulty breathing when I came out of there.

"Many workers were not wearing standard safety equipment like masks and boots, given the high level of dust. Conditions were so bad there that we were concerned people would be killed."

Under cross-examination by De Jager, Williams said that had he been aware of the hearing earlier, it probably would not have taken place.

"I would strongly argue that the request of the plaintiff be responded to and I support very strongly that his compensation be increased."

Advocate De Jager asked Williams if he was aware that he was appearing on behalf of his department. Williams said he was.

De Jager: "And you still say compensation should be increased?"

Williams: "Yes, I do."

Provinces hold back on PAYE payments

Greta Steyn

CASH-strapped provinces have tried to alleviate their fiscal crises by delaying the payment of their public servants' personal income taxes to the receiver of revenue.

Sources said the issue had been raised at a recent budget council meeting between provincial representatives and the finance ministry. The ministry rapped some provinces across the knuckles for their failure to hand over pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) deductions.

"Provinces experiencing extreme cash flow problems have been trying to use the receiver as a banker. It seemed like an easy option," a source close to the budget council said. He said Finance Minister Trevor Manuel had warned the provinces to cough up by the end of March. "They were told that if they did not meet their payments, they would be breaking the law."

A figure of R1,6bn in backlogs in PAYE has been mentioned, but this could not be confirmed by people who attended the meeting, or by the minister's spokesman.

Manuel's office said the commissioner for inland revenue, Trevor van Heerden, was prohibited by law from confirming or denying the PAYE backlogs existed. An oath of secrecy prevented Van Heerden from discussing the tax affairs of particular taxpayers.

But Van Heerden indicated that he expected any shortfalls in payment to be met by the end of the fiscal year.

"We can confirm that the published revenue targets are those that the SA revenue service expects to reach this fiscal year," he said.

Pinpointing provinces that were behind on PAYE payments was not possible yesterday. A spokesman for the Eastern Cape, which is in dire straits financially, could not confirm or deny that payment had been stopped.

It is understood that the finance department's financial management systems picked up the nonpayment of PAYE and that Manuel's deficit calculations last week took account of the debt to the receiver.

The provinces were probably trying to use the extra cash to reduce or wipe out their expensive overdrafts, rather than finance additional unforeseen expenditure.

Manuel made available last week a total of R1,5bn in additional finance to provinces with extreme financial problems. He also mentioned that provincial overdrafts had declined to R1,6bn at the end of January.

The Eastern Cape and KwaZulu-Natal have indicated that they would each need about R1,5bn to solve their problems. As Manuel will be unable to meet their demands, the possibility exists that the two provinces will end the fiscal year with their bank balances in the red.

Economists said provincial overdrafts at the end of the fiscal year should be added to the deficit total to arrive at the "true" picture.

Manuel has said the deficit will be 4,3% of gross domestic product against a budgeted 4%. He has remained emphatic that the figure will be 4,3% despite signals that the provinces are likely to end the year in the red.

Manuel and the provinces most in need of cash are negotiating the conditions attached to the additional finance. He has indicated that he will require them to use qualified financial managers, and that they will be asked to review their salary bills. It is understood that promotions have placed pressure on personnel costs.

The stringent conditions have deterred most provinces from asking for more money. Manuel has indicated that he will be able to provide further information next week on the provinces' applications for extra cash, as well as on the conditions agreed.

The present fiscal year is the first in which the provinces have run their own budgets, based on revenue allocated by central government. Provinces were allocated almost 54% of the total budgeted spending for this fiscal year.

The provinces' difficulties in reaching their spending targets have led to some economists questioning the feasibility of using budgeted — rather than actual — spending figures to calculate the next fiscal year's budget.
